Never A Joiner Recalled Late Nonagenarian

DURHAM, Ont. (CP)—Hugh C. Rose, 97, atheist, former blacksmith, teacher, reporter and town clerk of Durham, died Saturday. Mr. Rose, jaunty until the end, was never a "joiner," couldn't stand many preachers, and never embraced matrimony although he liked to embrace members of the opposite sex.

He had set down some thoughts on his philosophy to be used when he "shuffled off."

"I spent my time quietly with my books, my pipe and an occasional sip of that which cheers and also intoxicates.

"It cannot be said that I was an honored member of any church. . . . My religion was love thy neighbor."

Drama School Is Advocated

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London was seen as a possible centre for a much-needed Canadian drama school by Mrs. D. W. McGibbon of Toronto, president of the Dominion Drama Festival, when she visited here Sunday.

In London to attend the Western Ontario Drama League annual meeting, Mrs. McGibbon said that young people who want to go on the stage have little alternative now but to leave the country.

"The school is established in Canada, should it be established in connection with a university?" Mrs. McGibbon asked, elaborating on the problem of location. "If so, then London should be considered."

Recent recipient of the Canadian drama award, Mrs. McGibbon, 48-year-old wife of an oil company executive, is also well-known across Canada as an IODE member.

Some of the inland waterways of Guatemala were carved out by slave labor under the Spaniards 400 years ago.

Veteran Producer Believes Better Movies Will Be Made

By SAUL PETT
NEW YORK (AP)—Sam Goldwyn, elder statesman, took a long look at Hollywood's past, present and future.

"In two or three years," he said, "Hollywood will be making only 50 pictures a year but the good ones will make more money than ever. Today it makes about 300. Years ago it used to make 600."

What's hurting the industry most? "The shortage of good stories and, of course, television. Why should people go out to see a bad movie when they can stay home and see a bad movie on television?"

As a group, are movie star personalities any different today than they were in the old days? "Well, there was Mary Pickford and Doug Fairbanks. They had great personalities. And Bill Hart was better than any western star we have today. But generally, there's no difference. The personality still depends on the talent it has."

Are today's stars more tractable, less temperamental? "Temperament hasn't changed much. But they don't worry me. As long as I have Goldwyn, I'll be all right."

Holding court in his New York hotel suite, the 75-year-old producer radiated friendliness and confidence.

FILMING FORGY
In a day when most of Hollywood is filling its swimming pools with tears, Goldwyn remains optimistic.

"If I didn't have faith in the business, I wouldn't now be making Porgy and Bess. It's the most expensive picture I ever made. I'll have to get back $12,000,000 for myself just to break even. But the story excites me and I love the business and it's my duty to go on working as long as I can."

What, among his long list of distinguished hits, does Goldwyn consider his best? "Well, there was The Best Years of Our Lives. It was a great film and swept all the Oscars. But I also liked Wuthering Heights and Stella Dallas. I still run them off a few times a year."

Indian Bill Comes Up Again
OTTAWA (CP)—The government Monday re-introduced in the Commons a bill amending the Indian Act which would make it impossible for Indians or their descendants who accepted half-breed lands or money scrip to be stricken from the rolls of Indian bands.

Acting Citizenship Minister Fulton introduced the bill in the last Parliament but calling of the March 31 general election precluded dealing with it.

Indians involved under terms of the bill accepted half-breed lands or scrip instead of electing to live on Indian reserves. Many were hoodwinked by white land speculators, lost their land and moved to the Indian reserves though not legally entitled to do so.

WELL-STOCKED
HALIFAX (CP)—Gerald Marchand, 29, of Halifax has been fined $25 for keeping three unregistered firearms in his home. The guns were seized in a police raid May 30. Police also confiscated a home-made blackjack and a set of knuckle dusters from the house where they found several teen-agers, believed members of a gang called the Hornets. The teen-agers were released after questioning.

NEW ROTARIANS SPEAK ON CLASSIFICATIONS

Two city professional men who recently acquired membership in the Charlottetown Rotary Club addressed the luncheon meeting at the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday on their "Classification" as required under the constitution.

John Evans, local secretary of the Y.M.C.A. described the work required in his job and Dr. H. Allan MacMillan, dealt with the requirements of a "General Practitioner or Family Physician".

Ralph Jones was chairman with Dr. Todoro Gencheff who tendered thanks on behalf of the meeting as co-chairman.

FAMILY DOCTOR
"Medicine is the art of preserving or restoring health," Dr. MacMillan said in the course of his address. "Many people do not call a doctor until they are ill because they do not realize that they might have prevented this illness by regular visits to their family doctor."

Statistics show that two out of every five Canadians will be calling a family doctor this year. The best way to preserve health is by periodic checkup, he said.

"We are living in the golden age of medicine," Dr. MacMillan said as he went on to describe modern conditions. "The past twenty-five years has seen greater progress in medicine than since the dawn of history. Eighty years ago the average life span was forty years of age. In 1930 the average life expectancy was fifty-eight and today life expectancy is seventy years."

INFANT MORTALITY
In 1920, infant mortality was one in ten. Today, infant mortality is less than three per hundred live births; and less than one mother in a thousand dies during childbirth.

Touching on other advances made in medicine, Dr. MacMillan referred to smallpox that struck two thousand Canadians annually a generation ago which is virtually unheard of today. Even during the past decade, an entire new chapter of medical progress has been seen.

Penicillin and the broad spectrum antibiotics have been discovered and their uses in many diseases have been miraculous. The use of Salk vaccine is now widespread in the prevention of poliomyelitis.

"The peaceful use of atomic information in medicine is beginning to unfold. Radioactive compounds are used in the detection and treatment of cancer, and in mapping out the normal functions of the human body," Dr. MacMillan said.

SPECIALTIES
Family doctors can handle about 85 per cent of all illnesses or accidents; the other 15 per cent necessitates more specialized care and the medical or surgical specialists are called upon to play their part. It is impossible for one to know all there is to know about medicine and thus many doctors must specialize to become experts in a certain phase of medical practice.

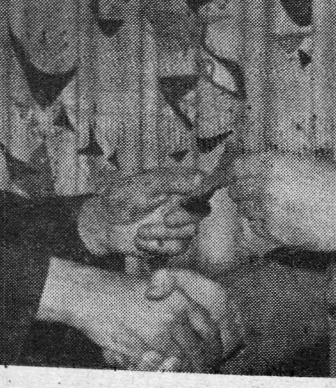

"The medical profession recognizes that mind and emotions of the body, must be treated the whole man, not a symptom such as a headache, not a condition such as a fractured leg," Dr. MacMillan said.

Y.M.C.A. SECRETARY
"I am one of the 366 YMCA Secretaries in the 70 odd Associations across Canada," John Evans said in describing his position in Charlottetown and as required to run the local YMCA subject to the Board of Directors. Each YMCA is a self governing organization working for a common purpose; a world wide fellowship united in a common purpose; a world wide fellowship united in a common pointment of the first woman to a federal cabinet post, Mrs. Ellen G. Fairclough, now immigration minister; the first minister of Ukrainian descent, Labor Minister Michael Sarr; the first Senator of Icelandic origin, Senator G. S. Thorvaldson of Winnipeg; and the first Indian senator, Jim Gladstone of Alberta's Blood Reserve.

Heavy Expenditures Mark Conservatives' First Year

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP)—One year ago today the Progressive Conservative party won its first federal victory in an election since 1930. Last March it was returned to office with a record-breaking number of seats.

It tackled many problems during its first year in office. In the course of that 12 months—a year during which it became increasingly evident that a new election would take place—money poured out of federal coffers as one election pledge after another was met.

The old age pension was boosted to $55 a month from $46. Similar pension increases went to veterans, the blind and the disabled.

Taxes were reduced by some $178,000,000 a year. Under revised tax-sharing arrangements, the provinces were given an additional $87,000,000 a year, including $25,000,000 worth of annual grants to the Atlantic provinces.

The government agreed to pay the interest on advance payments to prairie farmers on farm-stored grain. A program of price supports and deficiency payments was extended over a range of farm products.

NEW HOUSING LOANS
More than $600,000,000 was released in new housing loans through the government's Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Finance Minister Fleming stated it was the government's intention to reverse the previous Liberal administration's "tight-money" policy, to make more money available for housing and other loans.

Negotiations were initiated to provide federal aid to build the long-discussed South Saskatchewan irrigation and power project and a northern Alberta rail branch to Pine Point on the south shore of Great Slave Lake in the Northwest Territories.

As steps were taken to implement these and other election promises, there was growing concern in federal quarters as to how increasing costs would be met. Official estimates of expenditures indicated government outlays in the current year would run to more than $6,000,000,000. The heaviest peacetime deficit was in prospect.

Winter unemployment increased and became an issue in the March 31 election, the Prime Minister Diefenbaker called nine months after he first took office with a minority government. The election boosted the party's seats in the 265-seat Commons from 113 to 208—an all-time, all-party record.

STANDS ALONE
Now, at the anniversary of his first victory June 10, Mr. Diefenbaker is the only one of the four party leaders in that fight who remains on Parliament Hill.

Louis St. Laurent, after a brief tenure as opposition leader, retired as Liberal leader before the March 31 election, which saw CCF Leader M. J. Coldwell and Social Credit chief-in-chief Solon Low both personally defeated. They have since announced they are giving up their party leaderships.
