

Test Of Wills Suggested In U.S. Aluminum Prices

By ARCH MACKENZIE
WASHINGTON (CP) — Despite official disclaimers, President Johnson appears to be in a test of wills with the United States aluminum industry about higher prices.

Canada as the largest U.S. supplier of foreign aluminum—worth about $25,000,000 in all forms last year—is in the middle.

Particular Canadian concern is aroused by the Monday meeting here of senior officials at the White House to discuss the possible unloading of some of the 1,400,000 tons of aluminum in the U.S. strategic reserve. The president has authority to free up to 500,000 tons and that could cut deeply into U.S. demand for the Canadian metal.

The situation arises after three smaller U.S. firms announced increases taking effect Friday. No word has come yet from the main producer, the Aluminum Company of America.

But domestic and foreign observers feel it is more than coincidence that the president—apparently by telephone from Texas where he continues to recuperate from recent surgery—ordered Monday's meeting here.

PONDERS ECONOMY

It is well known that the president is anxious to keep the U.S. economy rolling in high gear without producing a rash of price increases leading toward inflation.

A spokesman at the president's Texas ranch Monday said there was "no connection whatsoever" between the aluminum price increase and the White House meeting of senior officials.

The official reason for that session was given as concern that rising imports of aluminum from Canada, France and elsewhere, might damage the

Canadian Stock Prices Break With N.Y. Link

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian stock prices, a ditheringly geared to trends established in New York, have broken away in the last three months, but analysts are not completely happy with the new-found independence.

Last May and June stock prices in both the United States and Canada fell sharply. Since then, however, New York has more than recovered its losses, but Canadian prices still are well below their highs of last spring.

New York's Dow Jones index a widely followed measurement of investor sentiment, fell to about 835 from 946 but has recovered its losses and is around 962.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index fell to 156.50 from 178, but is still below the 171 mark, a recovery of barely 63 per cent, a recovery of barely 63 per cent.

Analysts feel the reason for the lag here is that Canadians aren't as optimistic as U.S. investors.

Experts in New York forecast that the market there will continue to rise. Will the Toronto market do any catching up?

"The answer, unfortunately, is probably not," says Nesbitt, Thomson and Co., investment dealers.

"In the first place, Canadian investors have not been swamped by a deluge of bullish items and indicators. In fact, quite to the contrary, it is no longer possible to ignore the fact that distortions and weaknesses are beginning to appear."

One analyst, who asked that his name not be used, said: "Nobody has satisfactorily answered the question as to why there is such a divergence between the New York and Toronto markets. I have heard a multitude of reasons but the simple fact is that most fears are unfounded."

He said one reason he could see was that earnings of Canadian companies are not keeping pace with those of U.S. companies and as a result our institutions are buying more American stocks than Canadian stocks.

Blame ELECTION
"This may sound stupid, but I don't know what effect the election is having on the market. It doesn't affect me, but that doesn't mean that the small investor isn't bothered by the outcome."

Robert Stone, analyst with Toronto broker F. H. Deacon and Co., said the reason for the lag in Canadian stock markets is, basically, simple.

"Our financial, bank, construction, beverage, newspaper, steel and chemical stocks have been weak recently. The banks are weak because of the fear of tighter money. Other financial issues were rocked by the Atlantic Acceptance failure. Construction shares lost favor after Gurnea had its problems with McNamara, which took a beating this year."

"And so it goes. We have problems that do not appear in the United States."

However, he said, anyone who says the Toronto market is dull hasn't been paying attention.

We have a long list of stocks which have outperformed the New York market tremendously. "I think the public is missing the boat because these situations haven't been brought to their attention."

There would be no point to my bothering you with the rest of the play because, as you can see, the double finesse in every

Commission Plan Gets Approval

LONDON (Reuters) — The British cabinet has approved a plan to create a royal commission to investigate the explosive Rhodesian independence issue.

Prime Minister Wilson called the cabinet Tuesday to approve the commission proposal—which emerged from Wilson's visit to Rhodesia last week—and make further attempts to solve differences between London and Salisbury on how the commission should operate.

Wilson had a one-hour meeting with Queen Elizabeth Tuesday night, during which he handed her a letter from Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith.

The letter was in reply to one from the Queen delivered by Wilson during his meeting with Smith in Salisbury.

The Rhodesian prime minister expressed his central African colony's "special affection" for the Queen and the Royal family and said the Rhodesian government would "do all in its power to succeed in finding a solution to the current difficulties."

8 now are under serious consideration, sources say.

The ceremony of Dec. 7 would be a public session in St. Peter's Basilica. The sources said Pope Paul and the 2,300 prelates would promulgate the last council documents as decrees—possibly those on missionary activity, on the priesthood and on modern world problems.

The Dec. 8 ceremony in the basilica would be for the formal closing of the three-year-old assembly, with some chiefs of state to be invited, the informants added.

The council, now in recess, meets again Nov. 9.

Dear Mr. Becker: Many years ago I was playing in a rubber bridge game and had the West hand. The passage of time has blunted my memory and I do not recall the bidding, but I do remember that the final contract was Six Notrump played by South. I likewise remember the hand, card for card, because of the indelible impression it made upon me at the time.

It was the luckiest hand I ever encountered in all my experience. I led a spade and South took the king with the ace. He played a diamond to the hand, the double finesse succeeding, after which he played a club to the ten, the double finesse again succeeding.

There would be no point to my bothering you with the rest of the play because, as you can see, the double finesse in every
