

India's New Prime Minister Called Intense Intellectual

NEW DELHI (AP)—India's new prime minister, Gulzarilal Nanda, is an intense intellectual and a disciple of Gandhi, who was Lal Bahadur Shastri's major contender for India's highest office when Jawaharlal Nehru died in 1964.

Nanda, 67, was the home minister and No. 2 man in Nehru's government, but his interest in astrology and palmistry, his vegetarian austerity and a long association with leftist trade unions hurt his chances to succeed Nehru. After Nehru, he was sworn in as caretaker head of the government but stepped aside a few weeks later for Shastri.

In the following months, as various leaders of the ruling Congress party manoeuvred to get Shastri's job, Nanda supported the new prime minister vigorously.

As home minister, Nanda ordered police to jail more than 1,000 pro-Peking members of the Indian Communist party. He also issued instructions to shoot to kill if inter-communal rioting between India's Hindus and Muslims.

His tough decisions as home minister did not fit his physical appearance. A thin ex-professor of economics, Nanda wears thick spectacles and a black moustache.

When he was named to head the caretaker government upon Nehru's death, he said he had never expected to rise so high in life as to be a cabinet minister.

He entered Nehru's cabinet in 1952 as labor minister after working as a social worker in the labor union field. He founded the Indian National Trade Union Congress to counter the Communist All-India Trade Union Congress.

In the early 1960s he formed a national group to combat private and public corruption. He said then, "Everywhere I go I create an organization, I have a knack for it."

He once described himself as a pragmatist: "A Socialist but not a Marxist."

In 1951, at age 28, he came under the influence of Mohandas Gandhi and his philosophy of non-violent revolution against British rule. Nanda resigned as professor of economics at Bombay's National College to be a Gandhi disciple. He was jailed five times and served seven years.

NAMED LABOR LEADER

Gandhi had persuaded Nanda to remain in the freedom struggle, rather than flee to the forests to fast and meditate, and Gandhi chose him to lead the Congress party's labor movement.

Nanda once said that as a result of his days with Gandhi, "I believe in freedom of the individual because I believe in individual freedom leads to growth."

"Therefore, I want to state of totalitarian symptoms wherever they appear."

He also expressed belief communism would be a greater danger to India's democratic socialism than right-wing political groups because "of the proximity of China and the display of power there, which has dazzled some of our people."

Nanda was married while an undergraduate and he has two daughters and two sons. Both daughters and one son became doctors.

ment of services for the mentally ill.

Dr. C. A. Roberts, executive director of the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry, Toronto, and associate professor of the department of psychiatry at the University of Toronto, said the department has failed to expand to meet requirements of the field.

He gave the keynote address at the third institute on mental health services, a three-day meeting being attended by 125 leading psychiatrists from across Canada. The meeting is sponsored by the Canadian Psychiatric Association.

Dr. Roberts said that in recent years the effect of the federal mental health division has been "much less noticeable."

"The mental health grant (to the provinces) has not expanded either in terms of population growth, inflation or increased need for services."

SAYS FUNDS INADEQUATE

While it was true there had been some increase in the amount of money available from time to time, much increase appeared to be incidental rather than designed to deal with the need across the country.

The mental health division's staff had not expanded.

Dr. Roberts was also critical of what he called "a number of contradictory processes" going on concurrently in the creation and administration of correctional institutions.

"There is no one had the feeling that such services must relate more closely to our communities in order to provide for adequate rehabilitation of offenders."

"On the other hand, there is still under consideration a proposal to increase the centralized administration of such services with the federal government assuming responsibility for offenders sentenced to more than six months."

SEES EXTREME MOVES

It appeared the federal authorities were proposing two extreme approaches to the problem.

"One is to provide an ever-increasing freedom and flexibility for those able and willing to participate in their own rehabilitation, while on the other hand there have been proposals for the most physically restricted and psychologically

COUPLE WED ON COLD BRIDGE

WINDSOR, Ont. (C)—No one appeared to mind the snow that clung to the bride's veil or the chill 16 degrees and snow squalls.

On windswept Ambassador Bridge, linking Windsor and Detroit across the international border, Lena Calcagno, 23, was married Wednesday afternoon to Mario Scaccia, 27.

The ceremony was brief and in Spanish.

The couple, born in Italy, live in Windsor, but the judge, Recorder's Court Judge Vincent J. Brennan, is from Detroit.

The bride had been granted a Mexican divorce, not recognized in Canada after the breakup of her previous marriage, and a U.S. marriage had therefore been sought.

They chose the bridge as their altar and because of the bride's associations with Mexico, the service was in Spanish.

damaging detention centres one could imagine."

He later told reporters he was referring to a group of four maximum security correctional institutions which the federal government has proposed for Quebec, Ontario and the East and West coasts, one of which is already being constructed in Montreal.

Dr. J. N. Crawford, deputy minister of health and welfare, said in an interview after Dr. Roberts' speech: "Such charges have been made for a long time. Medically speaking one must agree with much of what he said."

But Dr. Crawford, who was pinch-hitting for Health Minister Allan MacEachern at the meeting, said the federal health department could only do as much in the mental health field as the provinces requested.

"Health services are provincial matters. I think our mental health division now is adequate to meet the requests of the provinces. If there were more requests for services, we could certainly tool up the division to meet them."

Assistance For Mentally Ill Said Lagging In Federa! Dept.

By BRENDA LARGE
