you happen to have developed an infatuation for someone else. Are you being quite fair? With a good husband, a fine family, and a comfortable home, your job is to weld the ingredients into a happy unit.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 19, and have been married for two years. My husband is 22. He works for his parents in a restaurant. He is very attentive to the customers, but when I go into the place he scarcely notices me.

ANSWER: If you expect your husband to make a living for you and your son, you must realize that business comes first. Apparently you expect him to drop everything else when you enter the restaurant and devote himself to you.

Miss Nissen cannot reply personally to readers but will answer problems of interest through this column.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberts Lee

Q. Are desserts always eaten with the fork? A. This depends upon the dessert. Some desserts are just too soft to be handled with the fork.

Household Scrapbook

By Roberts Lee

When the pile of a rug has become matted down through pressure, it can be brought back to normal with a hot iron over a damp cloth, after which it should be brushed vigorously.

Scuffed Shoes

When shoes become scuffed and peeled, rub them with the white of an egg. This will paste down the broken pieces, and eliminate that scuffed look.

Rusty Bolt

To loosen a rusty bolt or nut, flush it with kerosene. Allow a few minutes to penetrate, then work on it with your wrench.

How Can I!!!

Q. How can I cut iced cake without breaking the icing? A. Put your knife into boiling water first for a few seconds.

Q. How can I improvise a good, efficient dish cloth? A. Try using the mesh bags in which oranges, potatoes, etc., come. Boil these first for 15 minutes in laundry bleach.

a last name, similar to such situations where "Doctor" or "Duke" can be last names or titles in Anglo-Saxon countries.

Mme. Pandit's family was once fairly well-to-do. The three Pandit children had private tutors; learned to ride; had an English governess and she had finishing school education in Switzerland.

Prison Sentence

She fought alongside her brother in the independence movement and went to jail for the first time in 1932 for taking part in a demonstration against British and Indian government police.

A woman of many interests, she loves flowers and good food ("I just love to putter around in the kitchen making odd dishes"); and likes Broadway plays.

Hates Parties

One thing dimmed her anticipation of coming back to the U. N. for this session: "Parties, how I hate them; one long agony. Day after day, the same talk, same food, same drink, and of course, the same people.

The fact that she was not given a Cabinet post in the present Nehru government was a surprise to many who thought she wanted such a job. But she maintains that she prefers international affairs.

"I would go so far as to say that international affairs is my only real interest," she says. "U. N. work has been my greatest satisfaction."

The important part she plays in India's role in world affairs is a reflection of the broader participation by Indian women in politics than is true of most other countries.

Court-MacKay Wedding

A wedding of much interest took place in Central Christian Church on Sept. 9, at 7 p.m., when the Rev. M. Dunbar officiated at the marriage of Miss Marion Gwendolyn MacKay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. MacKay, to Mr. John Henry Court, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Court, Sr.

The bride entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Thelma Burns.

The church was decorated with baskets of multi-colored gladioli and the pews were marked with white satin ribbons and nosegays of sweet peas.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She was attired in a strapless, ballerina-length dress of white net over satin. The fluted bodice and scalloped skirt had a flowered motif in velvet.

For travelling the bride chose a dress suit of cocoa brown silk crepe de chine with velvet trim, white accessories and corsage of sweetheart roses.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Morgan MacKay of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. James MacKay of Bourlaimaque, Quebec, Mrs. Alice Stewart of Philadelphia.

Stuart MacKay, sister-in-law of the bride and Miss Jean MacMillan a cousin were bridesmaids. They were similarly gowned in ballerina-length dresses of silver brocade and net in shades of green, mauve and yellow respectively.

The groom was attended by his brother George Court, with Morgan MacKay of Toronto and Darrell Carmody as ushers.

At the reception the bride's mother received in a dress of Elizabeth Blue crepe with lace and rhinestone trim, black accessories and corsage of pink roses.

The groom's mother chose a frock of navy blue crepe with navy and white check trim. With this she wore navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

dogs there to hold the threshers in place.

All this we shall remember of today, associating it in mind with the fact that this day marked also the 57th Anniversary of the birth of a small woman, whose Family gathered to an old home on a farm by the Strait to honor the occasion this evening . . .

And there, as in days we once knew, the grain has been gathered in from "the shore-field" and from "the field across the road"—there where, once upon a time a little path led the children to berries and other seasonal excursions.

Like a dream-stream it was in summer, clear, cool and shadowed as it flowed between unspoiled ferny banks; in autumn it was lonely, singing a song of days that were; in winter it was a strange thing, ice-caught or flowing solemnly; but in spring when we came to sip the sap of the odd sugar maples thereabout it was merry and friendly again.

And this evening, we with fields of our own, hearing the tales of this harvest, trod again the remembered trails, sipped again the brook-water and ke' other trysts in the scenes of our childhood.

A small woman we honored affectionately, the same that since our memory was, ever hap-
