Morning Stock Letter

(Received over Pittfield and Co's Private Wire) NEW YORK, April 22—Dow Jones carries a story this morning that Chrysler Corp. is expected to report more earnings for the first three months ending March 31 than shown for the same quarter last year when $2.12 a share was reported. The story states that its earnings will exceed a year ago by as much as 15 percent. If this estimate is correct, earnings should be $2.44 or better. General Motor report expected to be published this afternoon and this report is also expected to be favorable. Dividend meetings scheduled for today are Bristol Myers, Armstrong Cork and Liggett and Myers Tobacco. As stated in yesterday's afternoon letter that in view of the fact that presidents talk Saturday night in New York and the French elections Sunday we would not expect yesterday's rally to make much further headway at this time, but as long as averages hold above the lows of March we would not give up hope. As far as the House Tax Bill is concerned it will need more careful study as to its influence on the stock market but in any event it will probably be changed in the senate. TORONTO, April 22—Siscoe—Financial News Bureau says—Street rumors indicate that Siscoe Gold Mines may increase its dividend rate on the next quarterly payment due July 15 from the present rate of 20 cents per share. This is in face of earnings of 23 cents per share in 1935 with current production not exceeding the 1935 average. Strong liquid position of the company makes a bonus feasible however. Stadacona Rouyn—Has ordered new mill equipment to be installed on their Rouyn township property with construction near, according to a northern wire service. MONTREAL, April 22—Dominion Coal paid dividend 90 quarter—by instalment of semi-annually next dividend record June 15 payable July 2, 38 cents.

Motors Lead Upturn On N.Y. Market

(By Frank MacMillan, Associated Press Financial Writer) NEW YORK, April 22—Selective buying which fell to motors, specialties and farm shares hoisted prices 1 to 2 or more points in the stock market today. The demand, brokers said, hinged on continued favorable trade and industrial news. It was described as developing to some extent as an aftermath of more than a week's decline. Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks the market advanced 7 to 62.2. Transactions totalled 4,387,940 shares against 2,032,490 on Tuesday. As evidenced by the brisk call for motor shares which put General Motors up 1 5-8 to 67 1-2 and Chrysler 2 5-8 to 99 1-2, the financial community apparently took the same hopeful view of the industry's outlook as Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation. U. S. Steel at 68 1-4 and Bethlehem at 58 7-8, had gains of 1 and 1 1-2, respectively. Wall Street studied the advances in terms of the indications that the use of heavy steels stands a good chance to improve during the period ahead. American Can at 128 1-2, Allied Chemical at 191 and Anaconda at 28 1-2 were among issues which scored run-ups 1 to 2 or more points. Speculative interest converged on the farm issues. Case was up 5 to 164, Deere up 3 to 82 1-2 and International Harvester up 1 5-8 to 83 3-4. In the Canadian list International Nickel bounced ahead 1 1-4 cents to 48 3-8. Elsewhere fractional upturns predominated with a few stocks of minor fractions and some unchanged.

The exchange index for the golds was up 39 to 129.84 the miscellaneous mines index 34 to 134.23. Senior golds continued firm to strong but showed nothing of consequence in the matter of volume. Montreal Follows N. Y. Lead Into Higher Ground

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) MONTREAL, April 22—Stocks took their cue from Wall Street today and pushed into fractionally higher ground on Montreal Stock Exchange. Strength of the New York board, brokers said, imparted buoyancy to the market here and utilities, constructions and a few metals worked higher. Papers were mixed. International Nickel fluctuated mildly during early dealings, but finished up about 3-4 in good turnover. Better demand for Noranda boosted the price 3-4 while Smelters gave up a point. Active leader of the utility group was Brazilian, but the price was up only 1-8 on volume of more than 1,000 shares. Quebec Power, Montreal, Shawinigan and Power Corporation ruled fractionally higher. National Breweries got up 3-4 at 43 on demand that coincided with encouraging reports on the company's financial position at the annual meeting here today. Associated Breweries were even. A firmer trend was shown by most of the liquors. Distillers Seagrams, recently weak, advanced 1-4 while Canadian Industrial Alcohol also firmed that much. Alcohol "B" eased a little. Foundation Company, though trading in volume of only 70 shares, improved more than a point at 16 3-4. Canada Cement Preferred gained 1-4 in late buying while the common and Dominion Bridge remained stationary. A small price gain was recorded by St. Lawrence Paper Preferred, but Howard Smith and Dryden Paper were off the minimum fraction. Bathurst and shares of St. Lawrence Corporation held unchanged. Sales 14,562 shares; bonds $4,700.

WHAT WAS WRONG

What was the matter with father? He is affectionate and appreciative. He made little extra work, and was pleased with simple entertainment. But there were so many things that seemed trivial to us now that counted so frightfully at the time. Being slightly deaf, father does not care a great deal for other people's conversation, but loves his own. Not hearing what others are saying he breaks right into the middle of a sentence with his entirely irrelevant remarks. Father invariably thought our visitor: came to see him. It would no more occur to him to go up to bed or to sit in another room and read when we had guests that it would be keep still and give some one else a chance to talk. Father does not play bridge, and, according to his way of thinking, the dummy is not playing either. There is no reason, then, why the two of them should not get together for a little talk. Father shifted his chair from one side of the bridge table to another, talking not only to the dummy, but to every one else who could not help but listen. Trying to play a hand against a background of conversation has its disadvantages. And so we had very infrequent bridge parties at our house. When we were invited out father always took it for granted that he was to go along. Somehow we seldom had the courage to hurt his feelings; instead, we suffered ourselves and made our friends suffer. We lost our friends.

HE'S A "FIXER"

Father is never so happy as when "fixing" something, and was, in that way, of great assistance. But the same ability which made him handy made his eager to direct others in their work. One could do nothing without his advice, from playing games to mixing butter. We have had many make leave us in tears because they could not stand to have an old man tell them how to sweep or dust. Our garden went completely to seed. Charles used to enjoy working in it when he got home in the evening, but he could not bear to have father stand beside him and tell him how to dig. Father believes that when some one is reading he is idle. We were never allowed to sit quietly with a book, for picking one up was the immediate signal for conversation. Both Charles and I are fond of reading, and used to spend many of our evenings in this pursuit, but not when father was with us. If he lacked for conversational material father would read us items in the newspapers, even though we told him at the start that we had seen the item. This inability ever to have a quiet moment to ourselves was an irritating to the nerves as our inability ever to be along together.

"A BURDEN TO YOU"

In many ways father treated me as though I was seven years old. He took books away from me and hid them because he thought they were not fit for me to read. When he didn't like a friend of mine he let every one know it, and invariably I lost the friend. One who has never lived with the constantly reiterated, "I may be a burden to you, but I'll be gone some day," has no idea of the amount of antagonistic feeling it engenders. If I failed to answer a question father asked though I may have been trying to read and deliberately shutting my ears to the clamor of the children, I would hear the plausible note, "I know I am a burden to you, but you might answer my question." If we had something he did not like for dinner, father would sound the old refrain, "You might have something I like once in a while, daughter. I know I am a burden to you, but I won't be here for long." Some of these complaints are trivial, but it was their very triviality that made life so irksome—their triviality and their frequency. More and more often Charles and I would give each other a hateful, saring answer because we had to "take it out" on some one. More and more often Charles would slam out of the house and not return all evening. Our nerves were constantly raw because of the presence of a man whom every one thought a genial old soul.

VITAL INTERFERENCE

In training our children we could point to an interference that was vital. Father would spoil them one minute, deny them something that was their due next. If Jackie was punished by a neighbor's child, he was pampered until, from an independent, hardy little soul, our son became a sneak and a cry-baby. If sister wanted some candy, she got it, no matter what laws on

HUSBAND GREW WEARY.

When things got too bad, I could call to mind his sweetness in the past, grip my teeth, and stand it. But it was when I watched Charles that my heart was sorry. He never complained. He only got that weary look in his eye oftener and oftener. He stayed at the office after hours though he had no work to do, and he played golf when he didn't want to, just to be away from home. And he took Grace to a restaurant to dinner instead of bringing her home. We are not anxious, as yet to have too many friends come to visit us. We are enjoying our privacy too much to break it.
