

LIEUT. GOV. MACDONALD UNVEILS MONUMENT AS HON. A. B. MACRAE WATCHES

Celebrations Here Honor Father Of Gallant Family

By A.C. HOLMAN
In 1720 Michael Hache landed on the shores of Prince Edward Island at Port La Joie and became our province's first permanent white settler.

A daring and a dashing fellow, Michael Hache earned himself the nickname "Gallant" — a nickname of his seven sons took the nickname as their surname.

Today it is estimated that there are over 20,000 Gallants, all descendants of Michael Hache de Gallant, living in Canada, the United States and Europe.

Saturday afternoon some 500 of these 20,000 gathered at Port La Joie at the mouth of Charlotte harbor and unveiled a statue to the honor of Michael Hache de Gallant.

The Gallant Family Reunion had begun earlier in the day at St. Dunstan's Basilica, where there was a concelebration mass celebrated at 10 o'clock by Most Rev. Malcolm A. McEachern, Bishop of Charlottetown and assisted by the priests of the French speaking parishes in the province.

BARBECUE
Following the mass there was a banquet at noon held at the Basilica Recreation Centre and some 350 Gallants from as far south as Florida and as far west as Winnipeg sat down to barbecued chicken.

Speeches were extended to the province by Hon. Andrew MacRae on behalf of the province. Mayor Walter Cox welcomed those from out of the city and gave his welcome in both French and English. Bishop McEachern also bled "bienvenue" to those outside his diocese.

Paul Gallant of Souris, president of the committee which arranged the reunion, gave a short and fiery speech of welcome to those Gallants who had come from near and far to take part in the celebrations.

Edgar Gallant of Ottawa, a director with the department of finance, was the main speaker and he told of the difficulty he had in obtaining any accurate figures on the number of Gallants there are living in the world today.

He explained that though there was no historical or other kind of proof that all the Gallants in Canada and the U.S. are descended from Michael Hache, he said that there is also nothing to indicate that they aren't.

PHONE BOOKS HELP
He told of the difficulty he had in obtaining any figures at all, some of these difficulties were brought on by the recent postal workers strike, he overcame the lack of any figures particularly by having his family go through all the available phone books he could find in Ottawa from different parts of Canada and the U.S.

After the banquet the members of the family formed up into a motorcade and drove over to Port La Joie, where Lieutenant-Governor W.J. MacDonald unveiled the monument to commemorate Michael Hache and his wife Anne Cormier.

Different members of the family spoke on their ancestor, they spoke in French, English and in English with the distinctive accent of the New England States.

They told of how it is possible to find Gallants in every province of Canada and in most states of the union. They spoke with a justified pride in their name and of their mother tongue, though there were many who neither spoke nor understood French.

COMMENT CA VA
After the unveiling there was a lobster supper and chance for a real get-together, and "comment ca va" was to be heard as often as "How are you".

Following the supper members of the Arsenault Family from Egmont Bay entertained those gathered with over two hours of folk singing. The Arsenaults explained they could attend the gathering without making any excuses as their mother had been a Gallant. The songs they sang were many and of varied origin, they sang songs of the Acadians, popular folk songs one hears every day on the radio and they sang songs of German, French, Russian and English extraction.

They even sang some especially written verses to the tune "The Campbell's Are Coming" in which they substituted the name Gallant in the proper places.

After the sessions of folk singing, in which the crowd joined many times, that part of the day's program closed about 8:30 in the evening.

The day was brought to a close with a dance which was held at St. Dunstan's University.

Dave Marr Wins U.S. PGA Golf

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP)—Dave Marr, long time also ran, struggled through the Wilting heat with a pair of scrambling pars on the last two holes to score a two-stroke victory in the 1965 U.S. Professional Golfers' Association championship Sunday with a final-round 71 and a 290 total.

Billy Casper and Masters champion Jack Nicklaus each made a run at the dapper 31-year-old Texan, but each faded in the 93-degree heat and finished in a tie for second. Marr, who had won only three previous tournaments in 12 years ago—finished four under par for the rolling, 7,000 yards of the Laurel Valley Golf Club course.

Nicklaus and Casper each had 71 for 282. Marr's victory in this, the richest PGA, was worth $25,000. Nicklaus' share of second-place money, $12,500, gave him total winnings of $126,500 for the year, just short of Arnold Palmer's 1963 record of $128,000. A native of Houston now playing out of Larchmont, N.Y., started the day in a first-place tie with Tommy Aaron.

SHARED LEAD
Casper closed to a share of the lead with nine holes remaining.

Finally, it was Nicklaus, the Ohio strongbow who had won the four tournaments, who made his move.

By that time, in the closing holes, Marr's steady game had deteriorated.
