THE FENIAN TRIALS.

DEATH SENTENCE OF BURKE AND DORAN.

BURKE'S ELOQUENT ADDRESS.

The prisoner, Thomas F. Burke, here stood forward to the front of the dock—Looking calmly and respectfully at the Bench, and straightening himself as well as his wounded leg would allow him, he spoke as follows, in a remarkably clear, musical voice, which was listened to throughout with hushed attention: My lords—It is not my intention to occupy much of your time in answering to the questions why the sentence of the Court should not now be passed on me. But I may, with your permission, review a little of the evidence that has been brought against me. The first evidence that I would speak of is that of Sub-Inspector Kelly, who had the conversation with me, in Clonmel, in Tipperary. He states that he asked either "How was my friend," or "what about my friend Stephens," and that I made answer and said that he was the most idolized man that ever had been or would be in Ameria. Here, standing on the brink of my grave, in the presence of the Almighty and Ever Living God, I braud that as being the foulest perjury that ever man gave utterence to. No such conversation ever occured. The name of Stephens was not mentioned. I shall pass from that and then touch on the evidence of Britt. He states that I assisted in distributing the bread to the parties in the fort, and that I stood with him in the wagon or cart. This is also false. I was not in the fort at the time at all; I was not there when the bread was being distributed. I came in afterwards. Both these assertions have been made and submitted to the men in whose hands my life rested, as evidence made on oath by these men, made solely and purely for the purpose of giving my body to an untimely grave. [The prisoner here, evidently to refresh his memory, looked at a little bit of paper in his hand, on which he had taken a few notes of the evidence during the trial.] There are many points, my lords, that have been sworn to here to prove my complicity in a great many acts it has been alleged I took part in. It is not my desire now, my lords, to give utterance to one word against the verdict which has been pronounced upon me. But fully conscious of my honor as a man, who has never been impugned—fully conscious that I can go into my grave with a name and character unsullied—I can only say this; that these parties, actuated by a desire either for their own aggandizement, or to save their paltry miserable lives, have pandered to the appetite, if I may so speak, of justice; and my life shall be the forfeit. Fully convinced and satisfied of the righteousness of my every act in connection with the late revolutionary movent in Ireland, I have nothing to recall—nothing that I would not do again—nothing that would bring up the blush of shame to mantle my brow, my conduct and my career both here and in America—if you like, as a soldier—are before you, and even in this hour of trial I feel the consciousness of having lived an honest man; and I will die proudly, believing that I have given my life to give freedom and liberty to the land of my birth. I have done only that which every Irishman and every man whose soul throbs with a feeling of liberty should do. I, my lords, shall scarcely—I feel I shall not at all—mention the name of Massay. I feel I should pollute my lips with the name of that traitor, whose illegimatey has been proven here; a man whose name even is not known, and who I deny point blank, ever wore the star of a Colonel in the Confederate army. Him I shall let rest. I shall pass him, wishing him in the words of the poet:

"May the grass wither from his feet;
May the woods deny him shelter—earth a home:
The ashes a grave; the sun his light;
And Heaven its God."

Let Massey remember from this day forth he carries with, as my learned and eloquent counsel (Mr. Dowse has stated, a serpent will gnaw his conscience—will carry about with in his breast a living hell from which he can never be separated. I, my lords, have no desire for the name of a martyr. I seek not the death of a martyr; but if it is the will of the Almighty and Omnipotent God that my devotion for the land of my birth shoud be tested on the scaffold, I am willing there to die in defence of the right of men to free government—the right of an oppessed people to throw off the yoke of thraldom. I am an Irishman by birth, an American by adoption, by nature a lover of freedom, and an enemy to that power that holds my native land in the bonds of tyranny. It has often been admitted that the oppressed have a right to throw off the yoke of oppression, even by English statesmen, that I deem it unnecessary to avert to that fact in a British court of justice. Ireland's children are not—never were—and never will be—willing or submissive slaves, and so long as England's flag covers one inch of Irish soil, just so long will they believe it to be a divine right to conspire, imagine and devise means to hurl it from power and erect in its stead the God-like structure of self-Government. Before I go any further, I have one important duty that I wish to dispose off. To my learned, talented, and eloquent counsel, I offer that poor gift—the thanks—the sincere and grateful thanks of an honest man. I offer him, too, in the name of America, the thanks of the Irish people. I know that I am here without a relative—without a friend in fact—three thousand miles away from my family. But I know I am not forgotten there. The great and generous Irish heart of America to-day feels for—to-day sympathises with, and does not forget the man who is willing the tread the scaffold aye defiantly—proudly conscious of no wrong—in defence of American principles—in defence of liberty. I now, to Mr. Rutt, Mr. Dowse, Mr. O'Laghlen—all my counsel, one of whom was, I believe, Mr Curren—and my able solicitor, Mr Lawless—I return to them, individually and collectively, my sincere and heart-felt thanks. I shall, now, my lord, as no doubt you will suggest the propriety of, turn my attention to the world beyond the grave. I shall now look on that home where sorrows are at an end—where joy is eternal. I shall hope and pray that freedom may yet dawn on this poor downtrodden country. That is my hope and my proyer; and the last words I shall utter will be a prayer to God for forgiveness, and a prayer for poor old Ireland. Now, my lords, in relation to the other man, Coryden, I will make a few remarks. Perhaps before I go to Corydon, I should say much has been spoken on that table of Col. Kelly, and of the meeting held at his quarters, or lodgings, in London. I desire to state I never knew where Col. Kelly's lodgings were, and I never knew he lived in London until I heard the informer Massay announce it on the table. I never attended a meeting at Col. Kelly's, and the hundred other statements abont him that have been made to your lordships, and to you, gentlemen of the jury, I now solemnly declare on my honor as a man—aye, as a dying man—these statements have been totally unfounded and false from beginning to end. In relation to the small paper that was introduced here and brought against me, as evidence, as having been found on my person, in connection with that oath I desire to say that paper was not on my person, and I knew no person whose name was on that paper. O'Byrne, of Dublin, or those other persons you have heard of, I never saw or met. That paper has been put in there for some purpose. I can swear positively it was not in my handwriting; I can also swear I never saw it, yet it is used as evidence against me. Is this justice? Is it right? Is it manly. I am willing, if I have trespassed the laws, to suffer punishment; but I object to this system of trumping up a case to take away the life of a human being. True, I ask for no mercy. My present emaciated form—my constitution somewhat shattered—it is better that my life should be brought to an end, than to drag out a miserale existence in the prison fens of Portland. Thus it is, my lord, I accept the verdict. Of course my acceptance of it is unnecessary, but I am satisfied with it. And now I shall close. True it is there are many feelings that actuate me at this moment. In fact, those few disconnected remarks can give no idea of what I to desire to state the Court. I have a family I love as well as any man in this Court. But I can remember the blessing received from an aged mother's lips as I left her the last time. She spoke as the Spaatan mother did;—"Go my boy. Return either with your shield or upon it." This reconciles me. This gives me heart. I submit to my doom, and I hope that God will forgive me my past sins. I hope too, that inasmuch as He has for seven hundred years preserved Ireland, notwithstanding all the tyranny she has been subjected, as a separate and distinct nationality, I will also assist her to retrieve her fallen fortunes—to rise her in beauty and majesty—the sister of Columbia, the peer of any nation in the world.

The prisoner here ceased, and stepped back from the front of the dock just as calmly as he dad advanced to it, but with, perhaps, a slight additional lustre in his eye and a heightened color. Throughout he never hesitated for a word, but spoke slowly, distinctly and deliberately to the end. A surpassed murmur of applause and delight at his eloquent and touching address went round the Court as he stepped back, but it was of course, instantly suppresed by the officials of the Court.

THE SENTENCE.

The Lord Chief Justice, after a pause, said: Thomas Francis Burke and Patrick Doran, after a careful and protracted investigation into your respective cases has been entered on, and concluded by a jury whose patience has been to the end unvaried, you have been found guilty, and you are called on now to receive the last sentence of the law—that is, high treason against the Queen, your lawful Sovereign. You have had every advantage that could be afforded you in your defence, and your case—your respective cases—have received full and close idvestigation from the jury and the Court. The verdict of guilty has been returned against you, and that verdict I am bound to say was fully warranted by the evidence. If the jurors could have conscienciously acquitted you, or either of you, I have no doubt they would gladly do so. But conscincious men under the obligation of an oath, could not give any other verdict than they did. * * * Al that is in our power we will do, and that is, to transmit the recommendation of the jury to the Government of the country and to her Majesty, the Queen' against whose authority I am bound to say, I believe you rashly and blindly conspired. What the effect of that recommendation may be it is not in my power to say. It depends on the opinion of the executive Government, over which we have no control but I may say this much, that I, myself, will not be willing to interfere with the effect of that recommendation which the jury have thought fit to send in. Meanwhile, the sentence of the law must be pronounced by us, and I trust that, as you yourself righty observe, you are liable to be cut off in your youth, your fate may prove a warning to your fellow-conspirators, and that your example may teach them that the law, though it may be evaded for a time, is yet strong enough to punish all attempts to overthrow the Constitution, and that all those who engage in a conspiracy of this nature may expect at one time or other to expiate their crime by an ignominous death. * * * Nothing now remains for me, then, but to perform the sad, painful duty, to pronounce the sentence I must upon you. [His Lordship here assumed the black cap and proceeded:] That sentence is, that you and each of you be taken from the place you now stand to the place from whence you came, and that on Wednesday, the 29th of May, you be drawn on a hurdle from that place to the place of execution, and that you and each of you shall be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and that afterwards your heads be severe from your bodies, and the body of each of you divided into four quarters, shall be disposed of as her Majesty or her Executive may think proper. And may the Lord have mercy on your souls!

THE END.

At the conclusion of the sentence, the prisoners who remained ascalm as before fall through it, turned from the front of the dock and quietly prepared to leave it in the usual way, in company with the jailors.

Mr. Lawless, their solicitor, came up to them before they left and gave each of them a harty squeeze of the hand, which they returned with warmth. They then left the dock in charge of the jailers.

Immediately after the sentence of the prisoners had been pronounced, the Court House, which had been so densely filled towards the close of the proceedings, began to empty itself, and soon after adjourned.

Soothing Syrup,

For Children Teething,

which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay all pain and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Dependupon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourself, and

RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS

We have put up and sold this article for over thirty years and can say with confidence and truth of it, which we have never been able to say of any other medicine—never has it failed, in a single instance, to effect a cure, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after thirty years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfilment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most experienced and skilful nurses in New England, and has been used with never failing success in

THOUSANDS OF CASES.

It not only relieves the child from pain but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied end in death. We believe it the best and surest remedy in the world, in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhœa in children, whether it arises from teething, or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the forgoing complaints—do not let your prejudices, nor the prejudices of others, stand between your suffering child and the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

GRIPING IN THE BOWELS, AND WIND COLIC

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

ALL CURES MADE EASY
BY HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

Bad Legs, Ulcerous Sores, Bad Breasts, and Old Wounds.

No description of wound, sore or ulcer can resist the healing properties of this excellent Ointment. The worst case readily assume a healthy appearance whenever this medical antis applied; sound flesh springs up from the bottom of the wound, inflammation of the surrounding skin is arrested and a complete and permanent cure quickly follow the use of the ointment.

Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammation

These disressing and weakening diseases may with certainty be cured by the sufferers themselves, if they will use Holloway's Ointment, and closely attend to the printed instructions. It should be well rubbed upon the neighboring parts, when all obnoxious matter will be removed. A poultice of bread and water may sometimes be applied at bed time with advantage; the most scrupulous cleanliness must be observed. If those who read this paragraph will bring it under the notice of such of their acquaintances whom it may concern, they will render a service that will never be forgotten, as a cure is certain.

Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia.

Nothing has the power of reducing inflammation and suppuing pain in these complaints in the same degree as Holloway's cooling Ointment and purifying Pills. When used simultaneously they drive all inflammation and depravities from the system, subdue and remove all enlargement of the joints, and leave the sinews and muscles lax and uncontracted. A cure may always be effected, even under the worst circumstance, if the use of these medicines be persevered in Eruptions, Scald Head, Ringworm, and other Skin Diseases.

After fomentation with warm water, the utmost relief and speediest cure can be readily obtained in all complaints affecting the skin and joints, by the simultaneous use of the Ointment and Pills. But it must be remembered that nearly all skin diseases indicate the depravity of the blood and derangement of the liver and stomach, consequently, in many cases, time is required to purify the blood, which will be effected by a judicious use of the Pills. The general health will readily be improved, although the eruption may be driven out more freely than before, and which should be promoted; perseverance is necessary.

Sore Throats, Diptheria, Quinsey, Mump and all other Derangements of the Throat

On the appearance of any of these maladies the Ointment should be well rubbed at least three times a day upon the neck and upper part of the chest, so as to penetrate to the glands, as salt is forced into meat; this course will at once remove inflammation and ulceration. The worst cases will yield to this treatment by following the printed directions.

Scrofula or King's Evil and Swelling of the Glands.

This class of cases may be cured by Holloway's purifying Pills and Ointment, as their double action of purifying the blood and strengthening the system renders them more affable than any other remedy for all complaints of a scrofulous nature. As the blood is impure, liver, stomach and bowels being much deranged, require purifying medicin to bring about a cure.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:—

Bad Legs	Chilblains	Fistulas	Skin-diseases
Bad Breasts	Chiego-foot	Gout	Sore-nipples
Burns	Chapped Hands	Glandular	Sore-throats
Bunions	Corns (Softs)	swellings	Scurvy
Bites of Mosquetoes and Sand-flies	Cancers	Lumbago	Sore-heds
	Contracted and Stiff Joints	Piles	Tumors
		Rheumatism	Ulcers
Coco-bay	Elephantiasis	Scalds Yaws	Wounds

Sold at the Establishment of PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY, 224 Strand, (near Temple Bar,) London; and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the civilised world, at the ollowing prices:—1s 1½., 2s. 9., 4s. 6., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Pot.
