farm employ any others?" "Oh well," the farmer replied "there is another—a sort of a simple fellow, but he doesn't amount to much. All he gets is his tobacco, and a bit of change now and then."

"My, my!" the other exclaimed "I'll have to look into this. Bring him in."

"He's here now," the farmer grunted pointing to himself. "Tonight's visitor nodded soberly. "And isn't that about the size of things" he commented.

"We have to allow something for the farmer's own time," a visiting farmer reminded James tonight when the two tried to determine the approximate cost of growing a bushel of potatoes. James nodded. "But," he chuckled ruefully "he's pretty much like the farmer in a story I heard lately. It seems that a man from an employment bureau or suchlike was one day investigating a rumored less-than-minimum wage being paid to the help, on a certain farm."

"How many people do you employ?" he questioned the farmer.

"Threemen, and a woman." "Three men, and a woman." "I'd like to interview them," he said.

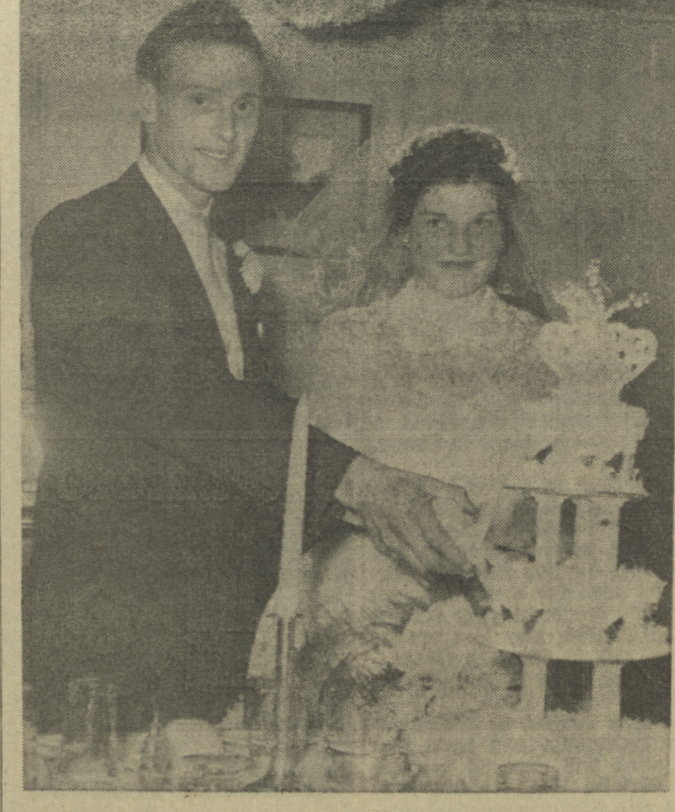

So the farmer called them in and they were questioned as to wages and conditions of work.

"Seems satisfactory," the investigator offered "As a matter of fact you're paying them and using them well. Does the

MR. AND MRS. O. B. JARVIS

Home Of The Groom Is Setting For Wedding

A wedding of interest to a host of friends took place at 8 o'clock Saturday night, Sept. 20th, at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Jarvis, 109 Hillsborough Street, Charlottetown, when Catherine Ella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles MacKenna, Borden, was united in marriage to Orville Bruce, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Jarvis. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. H.R. Bell of Kingsboro.

At 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the room to the strains of the Bridal Chorus played by the groom's aunt, Mrs. Robert Baker, and took their place under a beautifully decorated arch of autumn leaves, roses and wedding bells.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Everett, looked lovely in her ballerina length gown of white embroidered net over taffeta. The groom featured a very full skirt with slim fitted bodice and long tapering sleeves coming to a point over the hands.

Her shoulder length veil of nylon was caught to a coronet of sequins and pearls. Her bouquet was of white and yellow gladioli with gold satin streamers. Her only ornament was a silver cross, gift of the groom. The bride's gift to the groom was gold cufflinks.

Miss Gloria Anne Jarvis, sister of the groom was the bride's only attendant. She wore a ballerina length gown of turquoise net over silk rayon with matching hat and carried a bouquet of white and red gladioli with silver streamers. Mr. Aubrey Jarvis was his brother's groomsman.

The groom's mother was attired in a two piece dress of orange ice orlon-wool jersey and black feathered hat with white accessories. Her corsage was of white chrysanthemums.

After the ceremony a reception was held with sixty guests present. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a three tier wedding cake mounted on pillars and topped with a miniature bride and groom under a wedding bell and flanked on either side by tall white tapers in silver candle holders. The blessing was offered by Rev. H.R. Bell.

For travelling the bride changed to a winter white suit with black fleck all wool suit with white feathered hat and black accessories. Her corsage was of red and white carnations.

On their return from their honeymoon through the Maritimes, the happy young couple will reside in Charlottetown where they are both employed at the P.E.I. Hospital.

Following the reception a social hour was enjoyed by all with instrumental music supplied by Mr. Lawrence MacLaren, Mr. Lawrence Peters, Mrs. Wesley Bruce and Mrs. Robert Baker, also a solo by the groom's father "How Great Thou Art."

ELLEN'S DIARY

Here Is A Good Story Mr. Farmer Tells It

"Chestnuts will fall today", one of the children offered, doubt less recalling the gentle thud of old ones dropping on a still autumn day like this. And we wondered if we could still find an old trail into the heart of a wood of this farm where hazle bushes once grew.

In years now almost forgotten lads mindful of the pixies who according to legend spirited the nuts off all in one night, were careful to harvest them in good time, storing them in their green burrs to ripen in a mow, for later tasteful eating.

Sounds echoed in this valley, coming in over the hills, noticeable in the stillness prevailing: an impatient vehicle on the highway signalling for the road, a train blew at a distance, sound drifting in over the fields.

"This is a great day to work at potatoes" James commented at dinner. "Do you know, Ellen, I'm half-minded to go and give somebody a bit of a hand this afternoon. Just" he smiled "by the way of enjoying a change of work—A change is as good as a rest" he smiled.

With Mack then for companion, he went motoring away, a long countryside decked in the autumn colors, following a by-road presently, richly treed, on either side, and as he said later, "so lovely, Ellen, I wished you were there to enjoy it". So pleasant and helpful hours the pair spent, returning home happy and safe in the starlight.

At home, one cook busied herself making glasses of crabapple jelly. Another gathered a bouquet of marigolds, dependable blossoms to have about when other flowerings have faded. Marigolds, and pansies, from the plants of our own culture that have returned us in generous measure all through the summer much beauty for any care entailed.

They continue to bloom well, sometimes wind-chapped and damp, but still most attractive. Feverfew, the small daisy-like plant of old gardens, its foliage fragrant and more golden than green, entertains too in a pretty display in the border. and Oc-
