THE POINT OF SIGHT

is the first, foremost, highest and most important of all. Seeing is more than believing; it's pretty nearly the whole of life. Everything we do involves the question of sight. Glasses are the great sight makers, sight savers, and sight preservers. But for spectacles, the number of sufferers from blindness would be quadrupled. Whether you insure your life or not, do not by any means neglect to insure your sight, if in any way affected or abnormal, but come to us for properly fitted spectacles.

THE FOOD OF THE PEOPLE.

Professor Robertson Thinks it a Most Important Consideration.

In the course of an address at Montreal delivered a few days ago, Professor Robertson is reported to have said: Canadians would do well to study the bread and butter question. Upon the diet upon which he was brought up and upon which he lived, depended the character of a man and his success in life. What was it that had placed Scotchmen at the heads of all the banking institutions in the world? Why generations of oatmeal and nothing else. That had been their bread and butter. Bad "bread and butter" was responsible for more ruined lives and wrecked careers than whiskey. That was a strong sentiment; but the professor meant it and believed thoroughly in it. Look at the nations of the earth. Did any one mean to say that the Creator was responsible for the benighted condition of the Chinese? It was a blasphemy so to pretend. God had created Chinamen with advantagss equal to those of his Caucasian, Ethiopian and American Indian brethren. It was the obstinate stupidity of the Chinese nation that kept them behind. They did not, or would not, understand that albumenoids are a necessary constituent of our food. That without its proper share of nourishment in the shape of albumenoids, the human frame becomes languid and deficient in vitality. Rice contained very little albumenoidal matter, and, as it was well-known, the Chinese lived on nothing but rice; therefore, their moral characters suffered. The national food of Scotland was rich in albuminoids, which accounted for the superiority of the Scotch race all the world over. The Irish had had a narrow escape. The potato consists to a very small extent of albumenoids; fortunately buttermilk contains a large proportion of this invaluable constituent. Now everybody knew that the Irish had lived on "praties and buttermilk" since the flood. It was the buttermilk that had preserved them from falling to the level of the Chinese. Experiments with pigs had shown that those which were fed on albumenoidal foods were in better condition than those who were not. They were friskier; they were better tempered, they got on better together; they showed a greater sense of humor, and a greater spirit of fairness consequently (for the greater the sense of humor, the greater the spirit of fairness.) And as it was with pigs; so it was with men. Then the professor, with the aid of a most imposing set of linen charts, pointed out what foods contained the largest percentage of albumenoids. Oatmeal came first. Cheese was nearly a third part albuminoidal. Hence it was that, when England had been at her best, when she had dictated terms to the conqueror of Austerlitz, when she had received the oppressed of all nations under her protecting standard, and had planted her flag as the ensign of freedom on the shores of down-drodden lands, that then the staple food of the men of England had been bread and cheese. Englishmen had been better morally and physically on a bread and cheese diet than after butter had superseded cheese. Their brains might have become keener; but their minds and bodies had not truly benefited. By all means let Canadian farmers make cheese, and plenty of it. If they could not sell it, they could eat it themselves. The fact was that Canadians were very ignorant on the subject of "bread and butter," and, if they did not improve their methods, goodness knew where they would be three generations hence. It was all very well to look down with contempt upon these "material" considerations. Certain people were always sighing after the ideal. Those people of poetic instincts and fancies desired to shake themselves free from the gross materialism that surrounded them, and live in an ideal state of existence—do nothing for their living in fact. Professor Robertson believed in attending to material considerations, such as "bread and butter," at first. That provided for, we could strive for the realization of our most lofty ideals.

NOTHING IS MORE PITIFUL

Than the condition of the consumptive, when the life is slowly ebbing away. But science has come to the rescue and all afflicted that way may be restored if they will only take Miller's Emulsion of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. It is as sweet as cream, so that the most fastidious can take it. After a few doses new blood comes to the resue, and in a short time the patient is about again, hungry and hopeful, with a new lease of life. It will almost raise the dead. Miller's Emulsion is the great blood maker and nerve strengthener, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

HOW THE QUESTION CAME HOME.

In the dusk of a summer evening
I rocked my child to rest;
Then sat and nursed, with my darling
Still folded to my breast.

His ringlets swept my shoulder,
His breath was on my cheek,
And I kissed his dimpled finger
With a love I could not speak.

A form came through the gateway
And up the garden walk;
And my neighbor sat down as often
To have an evening talk.

She saw me caress my baby
With almost reverent touch,
And she shook her gray head gravely:
"You love your boy too much!"

"That cannot be," I answered,
"While I love our Father more;
He smiles on a mother's rapture
O'er the baby that she bore."

For a while we both sat silent,
In the twilight's deeper gray;
Then she said, "I believe that baby
Grows lovelier every day.

"And I suppose that the reason
I feel so drawn to him
Is because he reminds me strongly
Of my own little baby, Jim."

My heart stood still a moment
With a horror I dared not show,
While the trembling voice beside me
Went on in accents low:

"Just the same high, white forehead,
And rings of shining hair,
And a smile of artless mischief
I have seen this Jamie wear.

"And I sometimes thought—well, Mary,
The feeling, no doubt, you guess—
That my trouble would now be lighter
Had I loved my baby less."

My neighbor rose abruptly
And left me in the gloom;
But the sob of a broken spirit
Was echoing in the room.

And when the lamp was lighted
I knelt by Jamie's bed;
And wept o'er the noble forehead
And the ringlet-crowned head.

For I thought of the bloated visage
And the matted hair of him
Whom all the village children
Knew only as "Drunken Jim."

And my heart cried out "O, Father,
Spare me that bitter cup!
And destroy the liquor traffic
Before my boy grows up."

THE WAR IN THE EAST.

A despatch to the London Globe says a battle was fought near Ta Ping Shan on Feb. 24th, in which the Chincse suffered severe defeat.

A Central News despatch from Tokio, under the date of Feb. 27th, says: "Field Marshal Oyma reports on the morning of Feb. 24th the first division of the Japanese army about Kaiping defeated the enemy near Ta Ping Shan. In the afternoon of the same day a force of about 13,000 of the enemy, with twenty guns, began an attack from Peimaitaz, Tonchaotz and Faoyamaim. After a heavy cannonade we started their centre at three o'clock in the afternoon and repulsed them, driving them towards Kingcow. Our loss was 20 killed and 250 wounded, including several officers. The enemy lost 200 killed, and the number of their wounded is unknown. The natives state the Chinese came in full force, 20,000 strong, led by Generals Sung Ka Ma Shang and Chang Sung."

A despatch received at London from Che Foo says all is quiet there. The Red Cross Hospital there is filled with sick and wounded. Five thousand Chinese, laden with loot, passed Che Foo, fleeing from the Japanese. The Chinese inhabitants of Minghai are welcoming the Japanese.

Wells in the surrounding country are filled with the bodies of women and children, who threw themselves in, dreading a repetition of the Port Arthur atrocities by the approaching Japanese.

Advices from Berlin state that Viscount Acki, Japanese minister to Germany, said: "Without a cession of territory China cannot reckon on a termination of the war. While it is fully understood that China must indemnify us for our expenses in the war, I am aware that the European powers may interfere to prevent a cession of territory, but it is to be hoped the Japanese government will maintain its position that a conclusion of peace concerns Japan and China alone. Japan is willing at any moment to agree to terms which are in any way acceptable and honest."

Hood's Cured After Others Failed

Scrofula in the Neck—Bunches All Gone Now.

Sangerville, Maine.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—I feel that I cannot say enough in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For five years I have been troubled with scrofula in my neck and throat. Several kinds of medicines which I tried did not do me any good, and when I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla there were large bunches on my neck so sore that I could not bear the slightest touch. When I had taken one bottle of this medicine, the soreness had gone, and before I had finished the second the bunches had entirely disappeared." BLANCHE ATWOOD, Sangerville, Maine.
