First Lobsters Of Season Landed

Lobster fishermen had a good day yesterday in King's County. All lines may be considered as run, and approximately half the number of traps, and should good weather prevail today, full scale fishing will be under way, and the first big haul will come in on Monday.

Some few lobsters were reported landed by those fishermen who had set a boat load of traps on Thursday and indications point to relatively good fishing, although it is still too early to give definite indications.

Up to the present there has not been any announcement or indication of prices to fishermen. Last year canners were going from 19 to 21 cents, and markets ranged above and below 27 cents. It is thought that the opening price will range around the 19 or 20 cent mark for canners and from 26 to 27 for markets, and adjustments made later for any change in price when the market has been established.

aplegics, victims of accidents for whom there is no other provision and others suffering body-crippling conditions. An annual grant rising to $2,000,000 a year to boost medical research for mothers and children by nursing visits, more health-researching health clinics, home nursing visits, more health-researching for maternity wards in hospitals, education services for pregnant mothers and expanded services by provincial health divisions.

The expansion was announced a few days before the fifth anniversary of the national health program initiated by the former Prime Minister Mackenzie King in 1948 as the "first stages" of development of a comprehensive health insurance plan for all Canada.

Will Begin Slowly

The new health drive will begin slowly through grants totalling $5,300,000 in the current fiscal year ending next March 31, but Mr. Martin said that as the expansion gains full speed, it will mean increasing health spending to almost $11,000,000 a year.

Dr. W. G. Blair (PC—Lanark), the Opposition's health spokesman, congratulated the government on the new moves and said his party feels that there never can be too much done to cut down disease and death.

Grants for child and maternal care would go a long way to decreasing infant and child-birth death rates. Doctors would find the grants for laboratory and radiological services of immense value in diagnosis. The grant for rehabilitation of disabled persons could not be criticized, but it provided a different approach than a suggestion of a pension.

Dr. Blair was sure there were disabled persons who would not respond to rehabilitation treatment and these would continue to remain a burden to their families or community.

Mr. Martin, in his statement, said the new laboratory and radiological services grant will start at $4,300,000 this year, increasing to $7,800,000 a year in 1957-58. "Starting at 30 cents per capita," he said, "this grant will rise by five cents each year to a maximum of 80 cents per capita in the fifth and succeeding years. In general the provinces will match dollar for dollar for the federal funds made available."

The federal government had helped expand hospital capacity; now it proposed to aid in establishing x-ray and other diagnostic services.

Diagnostic Facilities Needed

The health surveys made by the provinces indicate a fundamental need to extend diagnostic facilities and services so that people in all parts of Canada may have ready access to the high quality of medical care now generally available in our cities. The plan is to improve diagnostic facilities for private practitioners outside of hospitals, thereby cutting down on the need for additional hospital accommodations.

Officials outside the Commons said that total federal expenditures for hospital construction will be cut during the next five years. Mr. Martin said money for training of radiologists and construction of laboratory, x-ray and other diagnostic facilities will not duplicate existing facilities.

The government already had made provision for x-ray services through the cancer and tuberculosis control grants. The purpose now was to extend facilities for the early diagnosis of fracture, of other x-ray procedures required in the physician's work.

But he wanted to stress the importance of maintaining the traditional doctor-patient relationship. "There was no thought," he said, "of regimentation or centralization of personal health services."

"We do not want in Canada to see any barrier imposed between doctor and patient for that would lessen the doctor's effectiveness and the patient would inevitably suffer."

The new grant for disabled persons will start at $500,000 in the current year, working up to the annual maximum of $1,000,000 next year.

At the maximum, the grant will be $10,000 a year for each province with the remainder divided on the basis of population.

Funds will be available for the training of professional rehabilitation workers, for medical rehabilitation equipment and for rehabilitation health services.

Each project approved must fit into the over-all program to aid disabled persons. Equipment which could be purchased with this money would include: Electrotherapy apparatus, Hubbard baths, whirlpool baths, remedial gymnastic apparatus and other special equipment "used to correct disabilities."

The mother-and-child grant also will start at a total of $500,000 this year, working up to the maximum of $2,000,000 in 1955-56. It also will be distributed to the provinces on the basis of $10,000 each, with the remainder divided among provinces in accordance with numbers of births and infant deaths. On each project submitted, a province will be required to match the federal share.

Each province would decide how the grant would be used.

SOMEBODY LOVES ME' TURNS BACK PAGES IN TOWN'S MUSIC ALBUM

Rapidly disappearing from the American scene are many of the beloved institutions of our past. Fortunately, they are not lost to us forever, for they continue to exist in the songs our grandfathers sang and loved, and which we still cherish. Gone already, but still fondly remembered, is the player piano with its squeaking foot pedals which ground out the strains of "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans"—a song America still fondly sings. The barber shop quartet, which gathered at the Emporium of Tonsorial Arts on Main Street, offering a heart-throbbing rendition of "Jealous" is no more, but the song still enthralled, invoking memories of a nostalgic past. The haunting rhythm of "Rose Room" is as appealing to us today as it was to mother and dad as they listened to the band concert in Rockland Park on a summer Sunday night long ago.

America is rich indeed in its treasure-house of song and an opulent selection of these hit tunes of the past may be thrillingly heard and enjoyed in Paramount's new Technicolor musical extravaganza, "Somebody Loves Me," which opens Monday at the Prince Edward Theatre. It stars Betty Hutton and Ralph Meeker in a true life story of the fabulous careers of Blossom Seeley and Benny Fields, one of the immortal teams of show business who thrilled local theatre-goers hundreds of times with their appearances at the old vaudeville Palace.

Hon. Paul Martin Urges Health Program Support

The following is a statement by the Honourable Paul Martin, Minister of National Health and Welfare:

"Medical research is gradually closing the gaps in our knowledge about the cause and treatment of the great diseases of mankind. During the past few decades many dread scourges have been eliminated or brought more effectively under control.

"Mental illness remains as one of our most challenging problems. In a sense it is the great crippler since it disables more people than any other type of disorder. At the present time, there are more than 59,000 patients in our mental hospitals—almost four out of every thousand of our population. The problem is one for scientific investigation from many different approaches. Encouraging progress is already being made but we must try to step up the tempo so we can make an all-out attack on this very serious hazard to sound health.

"Through its mental health grants and in other ways, the Department of National Health and Welfare is endeavouring to stimulate and encourage research in this field. Last year federal funds amounting to more than $400,000 were made available through the provincial departments of health to universities and medical centres for this work. As personnel are trained and facilities for scientific work developed it can be anticipated that research will show us how to fight mental illness more effectively wherever we find it.

"May 3-9 is Mental Health Week in Canada. The Department of National Health and Welfare joins with the Canadian Mental Health Association in urging all citizens during this week to give special recognition and support to the doctors and scientists who are struggling with this great health problem. The active interest and sympathetic understanding of the general public is essential to success in this vital field of endeavour."
