A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 25, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the enclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in my case." Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 75 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct.
21, 1882.
Yours gratefully,
HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints. Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Bolls, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impu-rities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

CHAPTER XX.

Mrs. Poyser was not to be caught in the weakness of smiling at a compliment, but a quiet complacency overspread her face like a stealing sunbeam, and gave a milder glance than usual to her blue-grey eyes, as she looked at Adam drinking the whey.

'Ah! I think I taste that whey now—with a flavor so delicate that one can hardly distinguish it from an odor, and with that soft, gliding warmth that fill one's imagination with a still, happy dreaminess. And the light music of the dropping whey is in my ears, mingling with the twittering of a bird outside the wire network window—the window overlooking the garden, and shaded by tall gaulder roses.

'Have a little more, Mr. Bede' said Mrs. Poyser, as Adam set down the basin.

'No, thank you; I'll go into the garden now, and send in the little lass.'

'Aye, do; and tell her to come to her mother in the dairy.'

Adam walked round by the rick-yard, at present empty of ricks, to the little wooden gate leading into the garden—once the well-tended kitchen-garden of a manorhouse; now, but for the handsome brick wall with stone coping that ran along one side of it, a true farm-house garden, with hardy perennial flowers, unpruned fruit-trees, and kitchen vegetables growing together in careless, half-neglected abundantly. In that leafy, flowery, bushy time, to look for anyone in this garden was like playing at 'hide and seek.' There were the tall hollyhocks beginning to flower, and dazzle the eye with their pink, white, and yellow; there were the syringas and gaulder roses, all large and disorderly for want of trimming; there were leafy walls of scarlet beans and late peas; there was a row of bushy filberts in one direction, and in another a huge apple-tree making a barren circle under its low-spreading boughs. But what signified a barren patch or two? The garden was so large. There was always a superfluity of broad beans—it took time or ten of Adam's strides to get to the end of the untid grass walk that ran by the side of them; and as for other vegetables, there was so much more room than was necessary for them, that in the rotation of crops a large, flourishing bit of ground-sel was of yearly occurrence on one spot or other. The very rose-trees, at which Adam stopped to pluck one, looked as if they grew wild; they were all huddled together in bushy masses, now flaunting with wide open petals, almost all of them of the streaked pink and white kind, which doubtless dated from the union of the houses of York and Lancaster.

Adam was wise enough to choose a compact Provence rose that peeped out half-mothered by its flaunting, scentless neighbors, and held it in his hand—he thought he should be more at ease holding something in his hand—and he walked on to the end of the garden, where he remembered there was the largest row of currant trees, not far off from the great yew-tree labor.

But he had not gone many steps beyond the roses, when he heard the shaking of a bough, and a boy's voice, saying:

'Now, then, Totty, hold out your pinny —there's a duck.'

The voice came from the boughs of a tall tree, where Adam had no difficulty in discerning a small, blue pinafore figure perched in a commodious position where the fruit was thickest. Doubtless Totty was below, behind the screen of peas. Yes—with her bonnet hanging down her back, and her fat face, dreadfully smeared with red juice, turned up toward the cherry-tree, while she held her little round hole of a mouth and her red-stained pinafore to receive the promised down fall. I am sorry to say, more than half the cherries that fell were hard and yellow instead of juicy and red; but Totty spent no time in useless regrets, and she was already sucking the third juicyest when Adam said, 'There, now, Totty you've got your cherries. Run in the house with 'em to mother—she wants you—she's in the dairy. Run in this minute—there's a good little girl.'

He lifted her up in his strong arms and kissed her as he spoke, a ceremony which Totty regarded as a tiresome interruption to cherry-eating; and when he set her down she trotted off quite silently toward the house, sucking her cherries as she went along.

'Tommy, my lad, take care you're not shot for a little thieving bird,' said Adam, as he walked off toward the current-trees.

He could see there was a large basket at the end of the row; Hetty would not be far off, and Adam already felt as if she were looking at him. Yet when he turned the corner she was standing with her back toward him, and stooping to gather the low-hanging fruit. Strange that she had not heard him coming! perhaps it was because she was making the leaves rustle.
She started when she became conscious that some one was near—started so violently that she dropped the basin with the currants in it, and then when she saw that it was Adam, she turned from pale to deep red. That blush made his heart beat with a new happiness. Hetty had never blushed at seeing him before.

'I frightened you,' he said, with a delicious sense that it didn't signify what he said, since Hetty seemed to feel as much as he did; 'let me pick the currants up.'

A Talk About Life Insurance.

'Few persons except those engaged in the business realize the very large increase in the volume of insurance from year to year,' was remarked by the general agent of one of our life companies the other day.
'Give me some statistics relative to this subject,' replied a Herald reporter.

'With pleasure; for it is a matter of great public interest. Do you know that the volume of life insurance carried to-day in Canada is equal to $25 on the life of every man, woman and child in the country!
And this proportion is being largely increased from year to year. This plan of providing for the future is year by year taking a firmer hold on the minds of the thoughtful and intelligent until by such it is regarded to-day in a sense as the family 'sheet anchor.' Why, there are men in this city carrying $20,000 to $50,000 life assurance, who even fifteen years ago would not discuss the subject. If you want a few statistics, and will follow me, here they are. We will take, say for a period of fourteen years at intervals of five, beginning with 1870. These were then twenty-four life companies operating in Canada as follows:—

NO. OF COMPANIES DOING BUSINESS.
Year.	Canadian	British	American Total.
1870	1	15	9
1875	7	16	13
1880	7	17	11
1883	9	19	30

Premium income... $ 1,464,347 $ 3,774,749 New business of year 12,184,696 21,572,960 Total amount at risk 42,695,712 124,196,875 Claims paid..... 440,485 1,593,029

'You see, therefore, the progress has during these years been most remarkable, the amount in force having been raised from $42,000,000 in 1870, to $124,000 in 1883.
Another fact is revealed which ought to interest Canadians, i. e., in 1870 the premium received by Canadian companies was only $203,972, while in 1883
