BICYCLE AND HORSE.

Less Work for the Latter Nowadays Livery-Men Not Afraid of the Horseless Carriage.

The race of horseless carriages here in France last week, and the bicycling craze, which includes more than 100,000 votaries in Greater New York, have set the keepers of livery stables to thinking. They find their horses less busy at certain times of the day than they formerly were.

"Bicycling has interfered with our business beyond a doubt," said an up town livery stable keeper yesterday. "Persons who have the strength and inclination to take exercise, and who are not fond of walking, were in the habit of coming to us frequently in the afternoons for carriages. The persons I mean are those who have a good deal of leisure time and money enough to hire carriages, though not enough to keep their own horses.

"Now whenever I happen to be in Central Park I see too many of my former customers mounted on bicycles and riding as if they were possessed. This change in the habit of the class of persons who hire carriages must make a great difference to the livery stable keepers. When horses have to be kept for evening work alone they run up a good deal of expense for feed and care and the income from afternoon drives is always like so much pure profit in our business. So we don't like the bicycle business, though we can't help it.

"As for these horseless carriages, I think they are nothing but a pack of French nonsense. I see that petroleum is used in most of them, and I guess they must have plenty of accidents with it. If the thing was any good we would have had it here long ago.

"Why, I remember 25 years ago that Mr. Dudgeon had a steam carriage in this city. He got a permit from the Park Board to run his machine over the roads in Central Park. It used to whizz around, puffing and blowing, with six or seven people on it. That machine was to be the death of horses, but it never amounted to anything. The best days our business ever saw followed the appearance of this steam carriage."

"Suppose such machines should become fashionable here, how would it affect your business?" asked the reporter.

"Well you cannot put a four-wheeled vehicle on your front stoop, and you cannot leave it on the street for less than $10 a night, so you have got to have a house for it somewhere. The livery stable keepers have all the best sites in the city for the storage of vehicles in their own hands, and I see no reason why they should not keep horseless carriages as well as any other kind of vehicle.

"Then they would require to be cleaned, the same as other carriages. After a sudden shower or on a muddy day you cannot expect that a man who has money enough to own or hire such a machine will take off his coat and do a two hours' job in cleaning it.

"But as long as we have funerals we shall always have plenty of horses. There's no dignity about a horseless carriage. Unless they go back to walking on foot at funerals, we shall never give up horses for that purpose, in my judgment."—New York Times.

An Experience in Paris.

The recent experiences of a Parisian lady of position may serve as a useful warning to some of my readers who reside abroad. The lady in question returned from a ball one night much earlier than she had given her servants reason to expect, and to her consternation found three members of her household missing—the nurse, the housemaid and—the baby! Greatly terrified, she rushed to the concierge to make inquiries, and after some prevarication the man informed her that the two servants, fancying their mistress would not return for some hours, had gone to a notorious dancing place, taking the baby with them, and there the lady would be certain to find all three "quite safe and sound."

As the master of the house was absent, the distracted mother went to seek a male relative, and together they visited the locality indicated, where they found the two women drinking with friends, but no baby! In reply to frantic inquiries after her child, the housemaid impudently told her mistress, whose smartest new gown she had borrowed for the evening, by the way, "that madame need not excite herself; the infant was in good hands." At first she refused to say where, but by dint of threats it was dragged from her that the child had been taken to a low inn close at hand. Here the enraged parent found her precious offspring asleep in a filthy bed, with eight other children, who were all being taken charge of at 1 franc 50 centimes a head, while the nurses enjoyed themselves.

Needless to say, the two wretches were dismissed on the spot, but the parents of the other "troublesome charges" are probably still ignorant as to what happens when nurses and housemaids feel in need, like their employers, of a little relaxation and amusement.—Lady's Pictorial.

An Elizabeth Peabody House.

The late Elizabeth Palmer Peabody was one of the first to introduce kindergartens into this country. She lectured on the subject in many places, circulated books far and wide, and did much to recommend Froebel's work to the public. Directly or indirectly she has been the promoter of all the kindergarten work that has been undertaken up to the present time. Remarkable as she was for literary and educational gifts and unselfish and large minded as were her plans for the public good, she passed away without any memorial that was befitting to her work or that gave her friends an opportunity to testify their appreciation of it. It is now proposed to establish in this city an Elizabeth Peabody House, which will be a kindergarten settlement similar in plan to college settlements. The plan is to take a suitable house in some poor and crowded quarter and to have a group of eight or ten kindergartners, normal students and teachers in residence. They will conduct a kindergarten, and through acquaintance with the children enter into friendly and helpful relations with the people of the neighborhood in a variety of ways. While a great work has already been accomplished by the kindergarters of this city, there are still tenement house regions untouched by the kindergarten influence.—Boston Herald.

A FOLDING BICYCLE.

It Is Doubled Up to Save Space in Storing.

Bicycle inventors come thick and fast. American inventive genius apparently has concentrated upon the wheel. Every week some inventor comes forward with some new device designed to make cycling easier or safer or faster, or to make a wheel lighter. In France, however, the inventors are experimenting with petroleum-driven bicyclettes. Why petroleum is better than the human leg and why the machine should be dubbed bicyclette are questions only a plausible Frenchman can answer. The petroleum bicyclette participated in the recent road race between Paris and Bordeoux. It gave a good account of itself.

A folding bicycle is the newest novelty in the steel steed line. By a simple and ingenious arrangement the connecting rods of the frame may be folded until the machine is reduced to the size of one wheel, as shown in the illustration.

The inventor claims for the folding bicycle the possibility of storing it in one's room, the ease with which it may be carried up or down stairs or hoisted in dumb waiters or elevators. It can be readily doubled up for carrying on the shoulder up and down bad roads. Such a bicycle can be readily placed in a carriage or other vehicle for transportation. Doubtless, also, the policeman who has had an experience in leading the bicycle of a prisoner to the station house will appreciate the merits of a machine that can be folded up and carried under the arm, where it is powerless to work injury.

The inventor claims further that in its folded shape the bicycle may be securely locked, but seems to forget that in its portable shape it presents an extraordinary inducement to the intending thief.

The folding bicycle is one of the things that, now that it has been invented, will cause people to wonder why it had not been thought of before. Dwellers in flats, however, where there are tenants given to storing wheels in the lower hallway, will be inclined to send their personal thanks to the genius who has shown how the most unwieldly thing ever invented—that is, while in a state of repose—may be made less obtrusive and less dangerous. There is no reason why it shouldn't be hung up on a post out of everybody's way.

The man who invented the baby carriage which could be flattened out and jerked under the bed or stood against the wall behind the sofa, a great benefaction. It was the best thing since the jointed fishing rod. Then a Brooklyn man invented a piano which could be taken apart and carried up the narrow stairway of an apartment house, and then set up in little room instead of being swung into an outside window, as a safe is generally put into an office building. But there are more bicycles than there are either baby carriages or pianos in New York, so for the present the invntor of the folding bicycle is entitled to a seat on the right side of the throne.

ONE ORGANIST FOR MANY CHURCHES

A Single Keyboard May be Made to Control Several Instruments

The electric organ has been developed into a marvelous instrument. Its distinguishing feature is that by using the "console," a keyboard on a movable stand, the organ can be played from any point, or several organs can be played at the same moment, and by the same touch of the keys. So that, if the service of half a dozen or more churches could be so timed as to exactly correspond in the length of the respective parts of their ritual, one organist would suffice for them all. He would sit at the keyboard and perform his offertory, anthem or hymn, as the case might be, and the pressure on the keys would make an electric contact which would open the pneumatic valves in the pipes of all the instruments connected up by wires. The largest organ is controlled electrically with a simplicity, ease and absolute command of all its resources that is simply astounding. The organist touches a button, and the electric motors start the blowers, which are operated automatically, and which will continue to supply all the wind needed until they are stopped. At one time, organ-playing was apt to be an exhausting gymnastic exercise; now the player actuates any or all of the stops by "stop keys" little ivory levers just over the keyboard, which are moved by a light touch of the finger, even without raising the hands from the keys. Heretofore the organ has had its limitations of touch efforts! the latest electric organ has what is termed a "double touch," an action of the keys which is so quick and elastic that piano forte music can be played by it effectively, and so delicate that it is capable of the finest "expression." The wires connecting the keyboard with the organ are run in a cable and 2,000 are held in a conductor of 1 1-2 inches diameter.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Very Rich Gas.

So much has been said concerning the new substance known as the acetylene in its recently evolved form and relations in respect to gas and allied industries that, taking the statement of Prof. V. B. Lewis as authority, the importance of the article may be explained as due, briefly, to the reduction to it by the baknig action of the flame of all the remaining hydrocarbons present in the coal gas. It is the acetylene which provides the luminiferous flame with those carbon particles which, being heated to incandescence by various causes, endow the flame with the power of emitting light. The gas being thus the cause of luminosity it is naturally the most powerful of the gaseous hydrocarbon illuminants; owing, however, to its intense richness, it can be consumed only in small, flat burners, but under these conditions it emits a light greater than that given by any other known gas, its illuminating value—calculated to a consumption of five cubic feet an hour—being rated at no less than 240 candles.

DANGEROUS CONSOLATION.

All Right in a Day or Two, But the Day Never Came.

"All right in a day or two" is the thought that consoles every one who is suffering from any indisposition that does not prostrate him. In the case of a person bedridden for months with disease of the Kidneys being asked, "Did you not have any warning of this condition you are now in?" "Yes, I was bothered at first with backache, with occasional headaches, but did not consider myself sick or the necessity of medicine further than a plaster on my back or rubbing with my favorite liniment. It was months before I began to realize that it was useless to further force myself to ignore my condition. The backache had become a pain in the back and sides, weak and tired feeling, high-colored urine with obstructions and stoppage, pain in the bladder, palpitation of the heart, poor appetite, indigestion, and a dull, languid feeling, with entire lack of energy." Had the first signal of distress from the Kidneys—Back-ache—received the assistance of Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, the after state of misery and suffering would have been avoided. A few doses dispel first symptoms; delay results in liver, heart and stomach becoming affected. It is useless to expect to overcome this complication without a persistent and regular use of Chase's K. and L. Pills. Price 25c., sold by all dealers. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

PRIVATELY DISCUSSED.

Montreal Physicians beginning Largely to Prescribe a New Remedy.

MONTREAL, July 15.—There is still a good deal of talk here among all classes over the recent despatches which appeared in so many Canadian papers, relative to the cure of Mr. G. H. Kent, of Ottawa, from Bright's disease. Although the merits of the case have not been openly discussed at any of the meetings of the medical society, there has been a good deal of private conference and the impression which the report of the recovery has made is evidenced in the fact that a good many physicians have prescribed Dodd's Kidney Pills in their private practice. No higher testimony than this could be given to any remedy, the reluctance of medical men to admit any good in proprietary medicines being well known."
