

Contempt of Court Case Dismissed

PERCE, Que. (CP)—Mr. Justice Gerard Lacroix has dismissed a defence petition for a contempt of court action against an American magazine. He attacked magazines that print articles which may prejudice juries in murder cases. Defence for Wilbert Coffin, accused of killing one of three bear-hunters from Pennsylvania, had asked that the magazine True Detective be held in contempt for publishing facts not admitted as evidence in a coroner's inquest or in Coffin's preliminary hearing.

Mendes-France Begins Bumping Into Opposition
By HAROLD KING
PARIS (Reuters) — Premier Pierre Mendes — France's swift moves to cure the nation's foreign and internal woes began bumping into obstacles Tuesday after virtually a clear course since he took office June 18.

The immediate roadblock in his debate Thursday and Friday, for sweeping special powers in the next six months to straighten out France's flagging economy.
Crystallizing the opposition, leading popular republican Charles Bessange declared the premier is asking for a blank cheque to do what he likes with French industry and currency.
Bessange, who was speaking to the national assembly's finance commission, added: "Never since the wartime liberation has parliament been asked to grant such sweeping powers."

30 YEARS' STAGNATION
Finance Minister Edgar Faure replied at the end of a 90-minute speech that "we have to make up for the results of 30 years of economic stagnation."
The committee finally approved the economic program by a vote of 31 to 4.
The plan calls for some increases in wages, efforts to convert factories from war to export production in view of the end of the Indo-Chinese fighting, elimination of high cost producers, expansion of credit and spurs to the construction of housing.

EVERY MOVE ANALYZED
Deputies of all parties, especially the right-wing Gaullists, are scrutinizing his every move to determine whether "lightning Pierre"—as he now is called in the lobbies—is moving too fast and too independently.
The big issue of the immediate future is the European army plan which France has yet to ratify. On this, Mendes-France said only that he would see that "the European question and EDC" is debated before the end of the month.
Orifices of European Defence Community pressed in vain to determine whether the premier is prepared to let sovereign control of the nation's armed forces pass to the six-nation army.

Card Of Thanks
The Sisters and children of St. Vincent's Orphanage wish to acknowledge publicly their receipt of $1,000 from the estate of the late Miss Mary A. Monaghan.

RCAF Ass'n Entertains Visiting Band
One of the most enjoyable evenings in a long time was had by members of the 201 Confederation Wing, R.C.A.F. Association, here last night. They were playing hosts to the R.C.A.F. Station, Rockcliffe, Ont., Pipe Band.

Two of the outstanding performers last night were Cpl. George Grant, a King's Piper, formerly of the Scots Guards, and a native of Edinburgh; and Drum Sgt. James Blackley, also of Edinburgh, and one of the finest drummers in the world. The Drum Sergeant won second place in a competition in Edinburgh against 400 other drummers. His performance last night was a courtesy to his hosts as a terpiece of playing and it is one that an audience is privileged to hear a "roll" such as he.

New Cells Provided For Police Station
The City Police station has had a face lifting during the past week with the result that five new cells have been added to the cell block. Formerly there were only four cells in which prisoners could be confined and this presented a problem since many of the inmates were required to roam in the hallway of the block. The four new cells are finished in heavy plywood with a heavy hardwood door on each. A small bunk in each will be the only furnishing. The original opening to the confinement area has been closed and in its place, another entrance has been cut to the right and to the rear of the Sergeant's desk. Toilet facilities have also been provided outside the cell-block.

Laurels Must Be Won
"Though fame is the birthright of every school, notoriety is the highly qualified ractor." He asserted the living ones. Father Terence Campbell, Msgr. G. J. MacLellan, Msgr. J. A. Murphy and the present rector, Msgr. R. V. MacKenzie, all of them present today in the great assembly.

Bishop MacDonald's Purpose
"We all agree, of course, that fine buildings alone are no guarantee of educational greatness. It is what is taught in them that matters. The saintly and zealous Bishop Bernard MacDonald founded St. Dunstan's to give a literary, moral and religious education to all who chose to avail themselves of it. His purpose, so briefly stated, might be described more fully in the words written by Cardinal Newman in the preface to those peerless lectures on university education which he was delivering in Ireland at the very time when St. Dunstan's was started. Newman wrote: "When the Church establishes a university, she does it for the sake of her children, with a view to their spiritual welfare and their religious influence and usefulness in society, with the object of training them to fill their respective parts in life better and making them more intelligent, capable, active members of society." So, likewise, Bishop MacDonald wanted his college to produce God-knowing and God-serving Christian gentlemen who would also be good servants of their country, in-

Loyal To Objectives
"During its long history, St. Dunstan's has been loyal to the objectives set forth in its founder's character. In its system of education, the humanities—or as someone aptly called them 'the wisdom studies', that is religion, philosophy, classical and modern literature, languages and history, always have priority of rank but its curriculum has been progressive enough to keep pace with the demands of the practical sciences. Because all wisdom and knowledge and skill of works are under God's eternal scrutiny, the altar of faith and the laboratories of science find their proper place at St. Dunstan's. Its motto gives, in capable form, the traditional Catholic teaching on the use of reason and revelation in humanity's search for truth.

"Faith was above reason but there can never be any discrepancy between faith and reason since the same God who reveals mysteries and infuses faith has also bestowed the light of reason on the human mind and God cannot deny Himself nor can truth ever contradict truth. The church constantly upheld academic freedom of reason in attaining truth, but it likewise insists on equal academic freedom for revealed truths of sacred scripture so that all strands of knowledge may be woven into a Christian pattern."

QUICK DROP
KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Ralph Norman, 28-year-old Kitchener parachute jumper, considers himself the luckiest man alive. He escaped with only a cut lip, a swollen ankle and a shaking up Sunday when he made a jump and his parachute failed to open until the very last second—when he was just 100 feet off the ground. Norman was one of a number of parachutists participating in a glider meet here.

PREPARE THE GROUND
NEW DELHI, (Reuters)—An advance party of the Indo-China truce supervisory committee will leave here by air for Indo-China Saturday to make an "on the spot" study of the facilities and requirements for the commission's work. The party will travel in three Indian Air Force Dakota planes and will include representatives from Canada, Poland and India, the three countries comprising the commission.

In Attendance At Centennial Gathering

Brigadier D. R. Agnew, representing the Royal Military College of Canada, attended the chancellor's reception in the Alumni Auditorium of St. Dunstan's University held last evening. He was accompanied by Mrs. Agnew. Major Gagnon was also present, representing the G.O.C., Eastern Command, Halifax, N.S.
Rev. Fergus O'Grady, O.M.I., Provincial of English speaking Oblates throughout Canada, arrived by afternoon plane yesterday to represent the Order during the Centennial celebration at St. Dunstan's. Father O'Grady, who constantly visits Oblate Missions throughout Canada, has just returned from Vancouver, B.C.
Rev. Harold Conway, O.M.I., also arrived yesterday to represent St. Patrick's College, Ottawa, in honouring and extending greetings and good wishes.
Other Oblate Fathers in attendance are Rev. James E. Trainor, Rev. Alan Noonan, Rev. Ronald Biaoquiere and Rev. Lorne Macdonald. Rev. Father Noonan leaves on August 13th for Kamloops, B.C., to assume duty in the Mission there.

Bulletin Warns Of Slight Blight Increase

The weekly potato bulletin of the Science Service Laboratory states: "Although only a small increase in the number of potato fields infected with late blight has been noted during the past week, the situation, nevertheless, must be regarded in a serious light. The weather, characterized by high humidity, heavy night dews, and scattered showers, is exceptionally favourable for the development of the disease, and may, unless a change occurs soon, usher in a severe epidemic. The fields should be protected by frequent applications of fungicides. Growers who are not treating their plantings, or those who treat at infrequent intervals, may be building up troubles for themselves, and endangering the crops of their neighbours. Aphid populations are building up very rapidly and in some cases they are causing severe damage to the foliage. DDT 50 per cent wettable powder is not satisfactory for aphids, but the 25 per cent emulsion, in quantities which will give a fair control. Malathion wettable powder or emulsifiable liquid will effectively control aphids, but it is not satisfactory for flea beetles which are now building up the second brood. Where aphids and flea beetles are numerous it would be wise to use both malathion and DDT in the spray."

Duke Tours Huge Kitimat Power Project

By MARGARET ECKER
KITIMAT, B. C. (CP)—The Duke of Edinburgh, fresh from a voyage aboard HMCS Ontario, and a flight over cloud-shrouded mountains, came to Kitimat Tuesday. Here he made a 1½-hour tour of the giant aluminum smelter after he was welcomed by Trade Minister Howe, External Affairs Minister Pearson and executives of the Aluminum Company of Canada.
Earlier, in a visit to Kemano, site of the power project 50 miles southeast here, he inspected the giant hydro-electric development with its 14-storey power house deep in the mountains. He arrived at Kemano at 10 a.m. after a sea trip from Port Hardy on Vancouver Island.
WORKERS CHEER
Homes were flag-decorated in Kitimat as the duke drove to the smelter works of workmen and their families cheered.
As the flying boat carrying the duke and the official party landed at Kitimat wharf, there was a cloudburst of warm rain.
Sudden cubs and brownies, girl guides and boy scouts, in honor guard, grinned through the downpour at the duke's greeting with upraised hand.
At the door of the smelter he "lost" his watch.
"It is a safety precaution," explained security guard Tom Ward. "In the plant high voltage flows through the potlines and watches are magnetized."
The duke was handed a pair of goggles to protect his eyes. Giant vats stretch across the smelter, spouting big clouds of fumes and sometimes molten metal.
INTEREST IN OPERATIONS
Interested in every operation, the Queen's husband stopped here and there throughout the big plant.
The visit of the duke climaxed more than three years of work on the labor of some 10,000 men at the peak of the job, and the investment of $270,000,000. Ultimate investment will be $500,000,000.
The duke left Kitimat at 4:10 p.m. PDT after three busy hours, and was due in Vancouver at 8:20 p.m. where he will attend the British Empire Games.

REMINISCENCES EXCHANGED AT ENJOYABLE ALUMNI GATHERING

Johnny Gazoo was back on the campus of St. Dunstan's College yesterday and for a few moments he had it in the palm of his hand.
They were merry moments, full of laughter, and then of sober listening, but a lot of what the little Irish-Scottish Roman Catholic college has done and has meant in its first 100 years were gathered subtly in the depths of the mind.
It was at an afternoon meeting of the alumni, part of the three days of celebration of the university's 100th anniversary, that Johnny Gazoo stepped out of the distant past.
They were holding the meeting in the big new gymnasium which the alumni built four years ago as part of the post-war construction program that has doubled the campus buildings to six in number.
There were between one and two hundred graduates there, men of all ages and from all over Canada and the eastern United States, and the chairman, Mr. Justice Mark MacGuigan of Charlottetown was trying to stir them to speech. He wasn't having much success. It was too big a place, he said later. They didn't feel natural there, or unified, or like saying out loud the things they'd all felt privately on coming back again after so many years.
It was then that Johnny Gazoo got up.
He was a short, dark man in a brown suit and he looked far younger than his 62 years.
Class Of 1906
Johnny Gazoo was not his real name, he said. His real name was Jean Charles Gagnon and he came from Matane, Que. In 1906, he said, he came east to Charlottetown to go to St. Dunstan's because his father had decided he was going to send his boys to a school where they could learn English and be educated at the same time.
Jean Charles and a brother were the first to come. He was sent to take a two-year commercial course. He was 14 and he didn't speak a word of English and he soon fell into the company of a couple of Island Irishmen named Stanley Perry and Fred Murphy of Summerside.
"I couldn't speak English," he reminisced, "and they didn't seem to be able to pronounce Gagnon, so they christened me Johnnie Gazoo. Three of my brothers came here after that and they all were called Johnny Gazoo."
As for the original, he got his English and his commercial skills and went away to become a successful druggist in his home town. The party will travel in three Indian Air Force Dakota planes and will include representatives from Canada, Poland and India, the three countries comprising the commission.
