NOVA SCOTIA EXHIBITION: SIR CHARLES TUPPER.

going ahead by leaps and bounds. I refer you to an authority which I am sure will be accepted by all friends of the present government, and I commend them to the consideration of all Conservatives, and that is the budget speech made by Mr. Fielding. (Cheers and applause.) If you want to know the high position Canada has attained, if you want to know the pride that may fill the breast of every Canadian when he looks at the evidences of progress and prosperity which are presented in that wide Dominion to day, all he has to do is to read that able and interesting speech, in order to satisfy himself that his pride is well placed when placed upon the country to which he belongs. (Applause.) I do not intend to inflict these statistics upon you, but I will say there is no test perhaps greater than comparison. You know right well that we have all been accustomed to look with great admiration and sometimes envy, at the fortune and prosperity of the great republic of the United States of America. What does Mr. Fielding say as to the comparison between the great republic and ourselves? I will only give you a line but I will refer you to his speech. He says:—"The people of the United States are very anxious to develop foreign trade and many of our American friends would be surprised to know how far behind Canada they are in this respect. The total trade of the United States, imports and exports, exclusive of coin and bullion, in 1898, amounted to $24.60 per head. For the same year the corresponding figures for Canada are $56.29 per head. He says: "It will be seen by the table to which I refer, that in 1868 the total trade of the United States was $17.29 per head and thirty years later, in 1898, it had increased to $24.60 per head, an increase of $7.31 per head. The total trade of Canada for 1868 was $35.96 per head, and in 1898, $56.29 per head, an increase in 30 years of $20.33 per head, as against an increase of $7.31 per head in the United States. The United States domestic exports per head, last year, were $16.05, while the Canadian exports for the same year were $27.54 per head. Making a comparison for two years, I find the following: The total trade of the United States, for 1896 was $23.32 per head, and for 1898, $24.60 per head, an increase in two years of $1.28 per head. The total trade of Canada for 1896, was $44.60 per head, and for 1898 $56.29 per head, an increase in two years of $11.69 per head for Canada as against $1.28 per head for the United States. The total trade of the United States for 1897 was $29.94 per head, and for 1898 $24.60 per head, showing a decrease in 1898 as compared with 1897, of 34 cents per head. In the same time the total trade of Canada increased from $48.01 per head in 1897 to $56.29 per head in 1898, showing an increase for the year of $8.28 per head as against a decrease of 34 cents per head in the United States."

I will detain you but for a single moment longer. I want, before I sit down, to refer to a matter which I regard as one of great importance. Her Majesty's government, at this moment, are engaged in endeavouring to secure the just rights of our fellow countrymen, the British subjects in the Transvaal, and in order to accomplish that they may be driven into a struggle with that country. I believe that the government of Canada—but I am not in a position to approach that government except from such standpoint as I now occupy—only correctly interpreted the sentiment of the people of Canada when they unanimously passed the resolution expressing their sympathy and a hope that her grievances would be overcome. I believe they will be correctly interpreting the sentiments of the people of Canada if they avail themselves of every means for enlisting a regiment of stalwart Canadians to bear arms in case her majesty's government should need them. A gentleman of large means and great public spirit has engaged himself to insure, to the extent of $1,000,000, the lives of all the men who go on that expedition. I believe that the government would only be interpreting the sentiments of the people of Canada if they were to equip a regiment 1000 to 1200 strong and deliver them in England at the service of her majesty. Should the present government adopt that important step, they can rely upon the hearty co-operation of myself and the Conservative opposition of the house of commons, as they have been able to rely upon it on every occasion where the interests of our common country demanded it.

I thank you for the patience and kindness with which you have indulged me under the somewhat difficult circumstances in making this address to you this afternoon. (Prolonged cheers.)

MISS DAVIES' RECITAL.

If the Kindergarten Hall is to fill the requirements of an audience room two things are imperative:—First, that the ladies take off their hats (which they can hardly do without a dressing room or even a place to put them); second, that the stage and back rows be raised. It is to be hoped that some better arrangement of the room will be made at once, to fit for entertainments such as that of last night; for the greater part of those who filled the hall, and did their best by dodging to see, and stopping their breath to hear, went away with a grievance, feeling that they had lost some of the best parts, and declaring that the Opera House should have been engaged.

To get the full benefit of good reading to see is just as necessary as to hear. For the finer shades of meaning are interpreted as much, or perhaps more, by changing expression, and by gesture, as by pitch, tone, and inflection;—indeed it is often quite impossible to hear and understand without seeing the "action."

We are too seldom favoured with the public presence of an artist of such natural ability and perfect training, and it is too bad that the pleasure of listening to her was marred to very many.

The programme was an all-round one. The frequent changes of sentiment in and between the different pieces must have been a tax on the reader's energy and resource. But she made them all with facility—never for a moment at a loss, or seeming to make an effort to keep up with the feeling of her text.

To the writer himself Miss Davies is most excellent in serious selections. The best last night were "If we only knew," given with a touching pathos, "A star can never fall," and "You never can tell." But mirth-lovers had their fill of laughter in "The 49c store" and "Un beau ideal."

Miss Moore's opening selections on the piano were in good form and appreciated. Mr. Vinnicombe's violin seemed even in better humor than ever. Miss Cotton and Miss Earle sang sweetly, to the delight of all their admirers; and Mr. Chas. Earle continues to keep up his record by singing a little better each time.

Prowse Bros. and John Newson for so kindly lending beautiful furniture for the stage also Mr. McMillan, Great George Street, for the use of a Morris piano, to Miss Savre and other kind friends for the loan of flowers, and to the ladies and gentlemen who so ably assisted with music and song.

Why is it that one man is old and decrepid at 45, and another hale and hearty at 80? It depends on the care he takes of himself. Often a man's body gets out of repair—the trouble grows until it lays him out in bed. Whenever a man feels he is not as well as he ought to be, when ever he is listless, without energy and without vitality, whenever he finds he is losing weight and that his ordinary work gives him undue fatigue, he needs Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If he keeps on working with his liver inactive and his blood impure—he keeps his nerves and his body under a constant nervous strain. He will not be hearty when he is old. The Golden Medical Discovery cures many so-called diseases because nearly all illness springs from the same thing—bad digestion and consequent impure blood. The "Discovery" makes the appetite good, the digestion strong, assimilation easy, and the blood rich and pure.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and receive free a copy of Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. A.

We sent you a statement of that last account a day or two ago. Kindly drop in and let us have the amount today.—Moore & McLeod.
