LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

San Diego.

Sir,—Your readers may be interested in this far away land enough to read a line or two from one who, but a short time ago, was one of themselves. Until I landed here, some four weeks ago, I knew very little of this golden land of sunshine; and although I am now fully domiciled, I am yet unable to give a full account of this wonderful country on the shores of the mighty Pacific. San Diego is a city of some thirty thousand people. Two years ago its population was very limited. Since then, however, it has advanced by leaps and bounds unprecedented even by Western Cities. Land speculators have come in here by the hundreds, and, like the Jew, have tried to make money—honestly if they could—but to make it anyhow. In other words, they boomed the town too well; and lands which they acquired from the Government and others for a mere pittance, they sold to people from the east and elsewhere for fabulous sums. A reaction has now set in and many people have left in disgust, and town lots and lands generally have fallen very much in price. Those who are disgusted with the place say it will never be much, while others—the interested ones, at least—say that in a few short months it will boom again. I am, however, of the opinion that the city and country of San Diego has a great big future. The geography of this country shows that from the Isthmus of Panama to Puget Sound—a distance of some 3,000 miles—there are but two or three harbours. One of these, and in fact the very best one, is the harbor of San Diego, on which is built this city. This fact alone will make San Diego a great commercial port. Then it has its fertile lands, consisting of valley and mountain, second to few places in the world, suitable for growing all the hardier fruits of the north, as well as many of the tropical fruits, Oranges, lemons, olives, figs, grapes, etc., grow profusely, but as yet the greater part of these lands has not had the skilled hand of the husbandman to cause them to show off their fertility to advantage. Good grazing lands abound, and wheat and other cereals are cultivated with profit in the valleys; but the honest farmer with limited means finds much difficulty in procuring even a few acres of land, owing to the high prices at which they are held by the "land sharks," as they are called.

The climate is everything which could be desired. It is not excessively hot, for the thermometer scarcely ever rises above 80 degrees; and as it never drops lower than freezing point, I am sure you cannot say it is ever very cold. The evenings, even of the hottest days, are delightfully cool, and one can, without any effort on his part, obtain the most refreshing sleep.
