CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

TEST YOUR PLAY

You are declarer with the West hand at Six Notrump and North leads the jack of clubs. You would have twelve tricks. Assume that the diamonds are divided 3-1, in which case the contract can be made regardless of how the remaining North-South cards are divided.
You have to play carefully to be 100 per cent sure of this hand. Win the club, cash the ace of diamonds, and then play the ace of hearts! If either opponent elected to take the queen with the king, you would have twelve tricks. You would win any return, cash the A-10 of hearts, and next the QK of diamonds. You would then play the jack of hearts, discarding the nine of diamonds. With the diamonds now unblocked, you would cash the 6-5 and thus make the contract. But let's suppose that the defense refuses the queen of hearts. In that case, you continue with the ten. If either opponent took the ten, you would again have twelve tricks, playing essentially as described before. It is possible that the opponents will refuse the ten also. In that case, just to be consistent, lead the queen of spades. Let's assume that the queen is taken with the king. Again you would be able to unblock the diamonds by discarding the nine of spades, and would easily make the contract. If the queen of spades is refused, you can now assure the contract, without bothering to unblock the diamonds. You simply cash twelve tricks consisting of two spades, three hearts, four diamonds and three clubs. Note that you cannot afford to cash the ace of hearts before attempting to force out the king. You must underlead the ace each time to be sure of the contract. Against certain distributions, leading the ace would be fatal if the defense played correctly. It would also be wrong to start off by cashing the A-Q of diamonds. If you now tried to give up a trick in hearts if spades, you might then be in trouble if the player with the king took it and returned a diamond, thus blocking the suit. One other piffal to avoid is to tackle spades before hearts. This could also prove fatal under some conditions. All in all, this problem—composed by I. T. Sun, of New York—is a fine exercise in technique. No doubt the defense can become difficult and complicated if declarer swerves from his proper line of play, but who ever said that bridge is an easy game?
