Scranton Explains Reason For Late Nomination Bid

By JACK LYNCH
SCRANTON, Pa. (AP)—Governor William Scranton's nomination for Pennsylvania said Sunday he plunged belatedly into the Republican presidential race because party moderates "were downhearted" after Senator Barry Goldwater's primary victory in California.

Scranton and moderates were "downhearted and not interested in doing much more" to stop the Arizona senator's surge toward nomination at the Republican convention July 13 in San Francisco.

"I thought it would be most unfortunate that the Republican party would not have a candidate for the moderate cause," Scranton declared.

"I had hoped that someone else would do this because I have no personal ambition to be president."

Scranton said "the television program, Scranton said, "the reaction has been fantastic" since he jumped into the presidential race Thursday after dropping his year-long position to accept only "a sincere and honest draft."

FEELS HE CAN WIN
The 46-year-old governor, building a campaign organization at his 24-room mansion near the city of Scranton which is named after his ancestors, said he is confident he can beat Goldwater — an old friend and the commanding general of an air force unit in which Scranton is a major.

The governor said he was not disturbed that the latest Associated Press survey shows Goldwater with 618 public-opinion-commissioned delegates votes—only 37 short of the 655 needed for first-ballot nomination. Delegates added to the Goldwater column during the week included 14 in Idaho, 14 in New Mexico, 10 in Virginia and four in Connecticut — where Scranton pocketed 12.

Advance indications are Goldwater will make a clean sweep of the 56 Texas delegates and 14 Montana delegates—the last of the 1,308 to be chosen for the Republican convention.

This would give him more than 655. No other Republican candidate is known to have built up so much delegate strength before a convention and then lost the nomination.

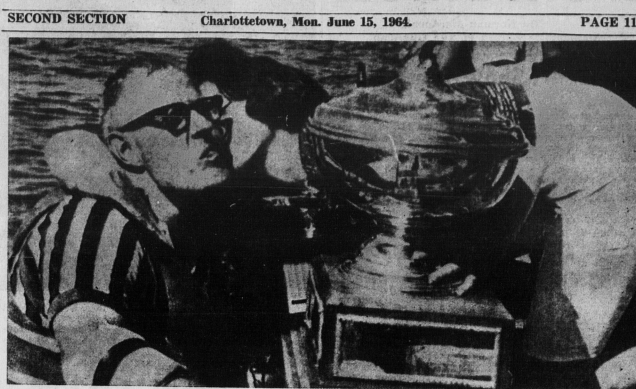

Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York has 130 and Scranton 106.

TORONTO (CP)—Professional Al Balding posted a 72 and Marlene Stewart Street, Canadian Open women's golf champion, shot a 78 Sunday to wind up the week-long National Golf Week tournament.

Men and women golfers across Canada competing against Mrs. Street and Balding had to shoot a lower net score—gross score minus handicaps—than the two Toronto veteran golfers.

Entry fee in the national tournament was $1 a round and golfers could play as many

Answers In Commission Probe May Embarrass Mining Firms

By JOHN R. BELANGER
Canadian Press Staff Writer
A stock probe that could produce information never before revealed in Canada and possibly embarrass more than a few small mining companies was announced last week by Ontario Attorney-General A. A. Wisbart.

The attorney-general, through the Ontario Securities Commission chairman, John R. Kimber, called a surprise press conference Thursday to say that he had appointed a three-man special commission to delve into trading in stock of companies with property or claims near the copper-zinc-silver find made in April at Timmins.

Mr. Wisbart wants to know how much money these companies raised following the discovery announcement, what it cost to raise it and how it was raised. In effect, he's asking how much of the money realized will wind up being spent on exploration and development.

Between 90 and 95 companies became involved in the Timmins area and the three commissioners (one investigator and two auditors with the OSC) have far-reaching powers. They can probe any individual or company, subpoena witnesses and place them under oath and seize any documents or records deemed necessary to the inquiry.

Many complaints were received by the OSC and the Toronto Stock Exchange from penny stock speculators during the days following announcement of the discovery. More than 20,000,000 shares changed hands on the Toronto Stock Exchange on the two days after the announcement, and when the inevitable reaction set in, many inexperienced speculators were burned.

REGRETS TIMING
The exchange said in a statement that it "regrets the existing of the present time to conduct an inquiry of this nature and feels that it may adversely affect the ability of small mining companies to raise further funds for development."

Geophysicist J. Patrick Sheridan, however, with control of four companies active in the Timmins area, said he "personally welcomed" the probe and feels that it may adversely affect the ability of small mining companies to raise further funds for development.

Mr. Sheridan, who took control of Vauze Mines Ltd. Friday and stated he "wouldn't be surprised" to see that firm exploring near Timmins, said "some companies put 95 cents of each dollar realized into the ground for exploration and some only put in five cents."

A spokesman for the Quebec Securities Commission said it has no intention of conducting a similar investigation in Quebec but would study the findings of the OSC's probe.

Trevor Thompson, Canadian Stock Exchange chairman, said "nothing so far has arisen locally that would indicate the need for an inquiry here."

W. Earle McLaughlin, chairman and president of the Royal Bank of Canada, made his first detailed comment on the Porter royal commission on banking and finance last week and said he agreed with some of the recommendations but still had reservations about certain provisions on these same institutions.

He told the Winnipeg Chamber of Commerce that the report gave good recommendations for setting up greater competition among financial institutions, but was much less effective in outlining restrictive controls on these same institutions.

He also said the report's recommendation to allow chartered banks into mortgage lending and to charter the so-called "penny banks" would help create increased competition and thus lower borrowing charges.

All this will obviously be a welcome innovation for the borrower," he said.

Happy news for investors last week was that dividend payments by public Canadian companies are up 4.4 per cent for the first six months of this year to a record $69,453,149 compared with $470,648,326 for the corresponding 1963 period.

Total dividends paid in June this year are $12,051,841 compared with $17,366,145.

UNANIMOUS VOTE
IDAHO FALLS (AP)—Idaho's Republican convention voted Saturday to commit all 14 of its national convention votes to Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona. Goldwater is the leading contender for the party's nomination at next month's national convention in San Francisco. It shows a man to compete with a man to contest the November U.S. presidential election.

ACCOMMODATION REQUIRED in Charlottetown and Vicinity

The Departments of Education of the provinces are cooperating with the Centennial Commission of the Federal Government in promoting a Federal-Provincial Youth Travel Program beginning in 1964 and continuing until 1967. The basic purpose of the program is to introduce young Canadians to the geography of this country, to its political and educational institutions, to the various aspects of its cultural life, and to its artistic and industrial achievements. Furthermore, it should provide them with a more intimate understanding of and deeper insights into the various human and material forces under which the nation is developing.

This province will receive one group of 24 high school students and 2 chaperones from Winnipeg for the period July 10 to 23. A similar group from this province will be accommodated in Montreal and vicinity about mid-August. The students are within the ages of 15 to 18.

It is the desire of the promoters of the program that the students be billeted in private homes, preferably where there are members of their own age group. It is proposed to have the visiting students from the province accompanied, where possible, by students from the homes in which they are billeted. The hosts would be expected to serve the students breakfasts and an occasional evening meal.

Families willing to provide free accommodation for these students are asked to write or phone (4-4242) the Department of Education as soon as possible. Two students to a home would be preferred, but accommodation for one would also be acceptable. Please indicate the number of students that can be accommodated and whether girls or boys are preferred.
