WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Irishtown Institute Plans Sale Of Box Lunches

KENSINGTON: Mrs. Archie Johnstone was hostess to the January meeting of Irishtown WI, when 16 members responded to roll call by passing in material for a quilt. Following the usual exercises and minutes the treasurer gave a satisfactory report including $24.76 realized from the school concert.

New sick visitors are Mrs. Archie Paynter, Mrs. Harold MacLeod and Mrs. Clayton Stavert.

The school committee had bought and delivered treats to senior citizens and shut-ins at Christmas, also gifts and treats for the school children at the concert. Ruth Paynter volunteered to be the new school visitor. The monthly committee took in $12.76 from two card parties, and the secretary reported receiving a check of $20.00 for a quilt.

A discussion was held regarding buying and planting of trees on the Community Hall grounds, and the matter was referred to the hall trustees for further action.

Several members expressed willingness to represent the WI at the Handicraft meeting coming up soon at Kensington.

Olive MacLeod read the convener's letter on Health and Welfare.

Next meeting will be held in Irishtown Community Hall. A crokinole party was planned for Friday night. The directors passed around the planned programs for the 1964 meetings.

A suggestion to exchange names for a "Secret Pal" for the year, was adopted. February's project is a Valentine party in the hall with decorated lunch boxes to be auctioned.

Meeting closed with "The Queen", followed by a reading, "The Night after Christmas", by Phelicia Johnstone, and a novelty contest put on by Olive MacLeod, won by Ruth Paynter.

Lunch was served.

TYNE VALLEY WI

Members of Tyne Valley Women's Institute met in the school Tuesday evening with the president, Mrs. Burton Ellis in charge.

Donations were received from Mrs. Archibald Ellis and Mrs. Edward MacArthur.

There was some discussion on the proposed renovation of the Institute hall, under the winter works program, for which a grant had been approved, but due to the small attendance of members and lack of funds it was decided that nothing can be done at present.

It was suggested that the rental rates for the hall should be revised.

It was decided to invite Enmore and Birch Hill Institutes to the next meeting. There will be an exchange of valentines and an auction as well as other entertainment.

The lunch committee was composed of Mrs. Elmer Baker, Mrs. George Ellis, Mrs. Gerald MacArthur. Mrs. Hart Lidstone was hostess for the evening.

BRADALBANE UCW

The January meeting of the women was held at the home of Mrs. Lorne Newson, Thursday evening January 9.

With the president Mrs. Harold Toombs in the chair, the meeting opened with the UCW purpose.

The devotional leader was Mrs. Gordon Ripley. Scripture readings were given by Mrs. Sterling Campbell and Mrs. Archie Hutchinson. Prayer by leader and Lord's Prayer were heard.

Roll Call was answered by 15 members.

"Salvation" a chapter from the study Book "The Word and the Way" was presented by Mrs. James Snowie.

Treasurer reported that $138.00 had been sent to the Presbyterial.

Mrs. Angus Gillis invited the members for February meeting.

The meeting closed with singing hymn "Standing at the Portal Of The Opening Year", and Mizpah Benediction.

Lunch was served by the hostess.

HUNTER RIVER WI

Mrs. H. B. Spence was hostess to the Women's Institute for the first meeting of the year. Mrs. Emmett Bernard presided and called upon the various conveners of committees for reports. Mrs. Frank Bagnall and Mrs. Wesley Green gave a joint report on the meeting of various Institutes at Sherwood Hall in December. Treasurer Mrs. W I. Bowman gave her report. Plans were made for the handicraft Van which is expected to come the second week in January; 4-H club needs were discussed and more leaders were appointed to take care of all the age groups. Mrs. C. H. Sellar, secretary was asked to contact Sinclair Cutcliffe in connection with a proposed demonstration on first aid.

A report of the gifts donated at Christmas to welfare and to the patients at Riverside Hospital was given.

Donations from New Glasgow and Rennie's Road WI's for the library were gratefully received.

Mrs. C. H. Sellar read an excellent paper on health.

SOUTH LAKE WI

Mrs. A.J. Cameron entertained the members of the South Lake Women's Institute in January which was attended by seven members and two visitors. Roll call was answered with New Year's resolutions.

Correspondence was read and a letter of thanks to Mrs. A. J. Cameron from the USC for children's sweaters which she had knitted.

It was decided to start work on layettes and members volunteered to bring contribution to next meeting.

The program was a contest "Know our Island" staged by Mrs. Elmer Fraser and won by Mrs. Kermit Bruce.

Members were invited to the home of Mrs. Austin Fraser next month when Mrs. Kermit Bruce will have charge of the program and roll call will be answered with a hand-made valentine.

Lunch was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Bruce.

MARY HAWORTH

Domestic Boredom Leads To Marriage Difficulties

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I beg to differ with your advice to a recent correspondent who says her marriage has become so dull and unsatisfactory that divorce seems imperative unless she can change her attitudes.

As a woman separated from her husband for over a year, I am is a position to evaluate her problem and I say:

Do NOT get a job, part-time or full-time. That's what I did in order to evade my unhappiness. But it only wore me out and caused me to neglect the full-time job I already had, namely: being a wife and mother and homemaker, the finest occupation in the world.

Suddenly a crisis arose in marriage, which I was unable to handle. I simply reacted emotionally and my marriage died, after 20 years.

I think E.G. is being commendably objective and openminded in realizing that she may be partly at fault. She is right in saying there are no fixed rules to guide the individual along difficult stretches in marriage. She deserves credit for trying to think things through, but she needs help and encouragement.

She should get lots of rest. When one is constantly overtired, problems seem overwhelming. For guidance, consult her pastor, but don't discuss marriage problems with family or friends.

Don't for a moment consider divorce. Rather, constantly bear in mind the marriage vows: to love and honor, for better or worse, until death do us part. Love the partner; try to help him; above all, let him know that you love him.

E.G. is correct in imagining that nothing could be worse than living without a man. It is pure hell, a nightmare from which there is no waking up.

Sincerely, S.L.

DEAR S.L.: The unhealed neurotic doesn't see people as they are. Rather he sees the long shodow of his subjective unsolved distrotions, wherever he looks.

In the present instance, your communtary indicates that you fail to realize that E.G.'s situation is not facsmile of yours, prior to your marital crash.

In any case, the fact that you got a job as an escapist maneuver, to turn your back on relationship difficulties, and thereby pulled the rug from under your ailing marriage, hardly qualifies you to guide E.G. to safety.

My own advice to E.G. (quite realistic counsel, I think) was to save her marriage by bringing new life into it. wasn't telling her to run out on it.

Overtiredness related to domestic tedium, emotional stagnation, etc., from which she suffers, cannot be cured by "lots of rest." The essential remedy for such fatigue is purposeful social activity, that carries the person into an orderly variety of new experiences, bringing new emotional patterns into play, stimulating mind and energies with fresh enthusiasms.

E.G. needs to outgrow her immature, unrealistic expectation that one's marriage partner perforce should be the all-in-all answer to one's dreams of psychological fulfillment.

Frank J. Sheed's book "Society and Sanity" (Sheed and Ward) contains chapters on marriage that spotlight this stumbling black. With incontrovertible logic he makes clear that the ultimate contribution each partner can make, in satisfying the other's hunger for fulfillment, is to attune their marriage Godward, to the only enduring inexhaustible source of joyous being.

Living is giving, of positive care and concern for others. And one's contribution should not be confined to the family circle. Thus as E.G. feels half-suffocated with embittered boredom in her ingrown housewifely routine, proposed that she open doors and windows to the larger world, by tackling a job, community service and the like.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in car of (The Guardian).

ELLEN'S DIARY

Twilight's Shadows Spill Over Snow Clad Valleys

Thursday! How smartly this January week spends away. Mornings break rosily over the white fields. Noontide rests for an interval the work. The dusk-shadows fall. The winter - day is done.

We mend or knit, or maybe just fold hands idly by a window to enjoy the winter-scenes; to note the deep blue of the sky, and the silvery branches of the lawn-trees so pretty against it; to see, as this afternoon, Scampie at the gateway scan the distance, and then smile his happiest dog's smile and utter a single yelp as he glimpsed the children of the road homing from school.

Eyes follow them as they approach the hilltop, youngsters, shoulders now a little weary, we could fancy, from meeting the demands of their schoolday, the mile's walk, and the weight of the books they must carry. Even Alex's schoolbag is not light... We thought of the bare necessities a child of like age would carry back in the years: a neat — and interesting, Reader. A pencil, we much doubt could be acquired at any rural corner-store nowadays. It would be used on the wood-framed dark slate, which had rested overnight in the schooldesk, whereon were fashioned the young printings and writings, as well as the first numbers formed or added there.

We have since wondered if the fact that in those times, every error and blot could be quickly wiped away leaving no remindful trace, gave a child the notion that it could be thus through life's misadventures. Or rather did the cleaned slate only lend the another "beginning again?"

It was that nice time of day when all things abroad commence to turn home — even the wild ducks winging up from down the River. The sunbeams were playing along rosy paths westward, like we thought a flock of sheep that come down to drink at the stream, toward evening nibble their way to high ground to rest. Against the face of the sun, the tips of the trees were darkening. Before long twilight would spill its shadows into the valley, and night would be here. Windless and shining, our world was.

Scampie barked and bounded down along the winter - lane to meet in the front meadow the schoolboys' return.

James opened the door, glanced at the clock.

"I see, Ellen" he commented, "it's time for me to start my evening work."

Time for us, it was, to come from our idling, to put another stick on the fire, fresh water in the kettle, to spread the cloth and prepare the evening meal. What should we have? This is ever a concern of the cook.

"Same old thing" we offered with a chuckle to Alex, who had come by to show us the library book, he had brought for himself from school.

"Same old rooster crowing in the sun!
Same old chores when the day has begun!
Nothing ever changes around this place.

And Farmer Hank made an awful face" he grinned, quoting from a book he reads to Peter, and knows by heart. "Only this time" he amended, "it's Mrs. Farmer Hank."

"The sun didn't clear himself at sunset, did he, Ellen? No, went down in a bank" James says, in from a last round. "The wind's around South. A change in the weather ahead!"

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night....

Chorale Plans Debut In April

April 2nd, 1964, is the date that has been set by the Kensington Centennial Chorale for it's first performance which will be staged in the Kensington regional High School Auditorium.

Under the direction of the Rev. L. M. Murray, the girls have been practicing since June 28, and are becoming proficient in many of the songs which, will be heard throughout the Summer. A repertoire of some 55 members, is the aim of the Chorale, in almost every type of music, including sacred and patriotic songs, spirituals, sea chanteys, folk songs and ballads. In addition to concert engagements, the Chorale looks forward to radio and RV appearances.

The 12 members of the Chorale, are Mrs. Edwin Johnson, Mrs. Wilfred Waugh, Mrs. Herbert Moore, Jean and Margaret Murray, Sharon Howatt, Judy Waite, Nancy Clark, Kathleen Walker, Marjorie Paynter, Betty Palmer and Norma Ramsay.

The accompanist is Gordon Murray.

Vows Pledged At Kensington

The Rev. E. J. Fiander officiated at a 3 p.m. wedding on Saturday December 7, when Mrs. Eleanor Jane Adams, Ellerslie became the wife of George Edward Duggan, Kensington. The ceremony was performed in St. Mark's Church, Kensington.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother, Keir Boyle, was attractively gowned in a jacket dress of heavenly blue brocaded silk. She wore a pale beige hat, long white gloves and a corsage of pink carnations.

Mrs. Alvin Sudsbury, as matron of honor, chose a brown velvet ensemble, and a corsage of light brown tinted carnations.

Alvin Sudsbury was best man.

The nuptial music was in charge of Kathleen Ellis, granddaughter of the bride.

A reception for 45 guests was held at the home of the bride-groom. The bride's table featured a three tier wedding cake and lighted tapers. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Fiander.

Supper was prepared and served by Mrs. Keir Adams, Mrs. Shirley Livingstone and Mrs. Elton Woodside.

Mr. and Mrs. Duggan are residing in Kensington.

Confederation Baby Observes 100th Birthday

Annandale's centennarian, Miss Ella Underhay, familiarly known as "Grandma 'Hay" was honored at the home of Mrs. John Norton, her niece with whom she lives, on the occasion of her 100th birthday on Sunday, January 12th. Relatives and friends visited her to extend their good wishes. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Norton and children; Mr. and Mrs. John Macmillan, Mr. Howard Norton, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Walker; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Montgomery; Mrs. Rawleigh Bruce; Mr. and Mrs. Reid Underhay; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Underhay; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Underhay and children.

Best wishes were received from Her Majesty the Queen, and the Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker. A telephone call from a nephew, Harry Squarebriggs Boston, was enjoyed.

Her two sisters who live on the Island, her many friends, neighbours, and relatives joined in wishing Miss Underhay a happy birthday.

It is wonderful that anyone should reach the century mark in age but more wonderful is the fact that she is bright, active and alert; always thinking of others. It is interesting to note that she was born in 1864 the date that Islanders are proudly celebrating this year.

Famous Gelatin Salad Molded To Perfection

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"ALMOST everything today seems to have an 'image', even stores!" remarked the Chef.

"The retailer who wants to create a low - price 'image' for his store advertises that theme. He may even use jumbled - up displays of foods to give a bargain look. Little - known or private brands are largely included, so the bargains cannot be found.

Only The Experts

"When it comes to buying 'bargains' in fresh fruits, vegetables and meats, only experts have the 'know how.' The customer can easily make mistakes.

"Quality stores", on the other hand, sell only the best quality, highest - priced foods. when second grade foods would be adequate.

"It pays to take time out to visit several food stores before deciding what 'image' will be best for you."

TOMORROW'S DINNER

Perfection Salad

Bowl of Tangerines
Coffee, Tea, Milk

All measurements level: recipes serves 6

PERFECTION SALAD

Originated by Mrs. Charles Knox (Early in the Century).

- 2 env. unflavored gelatin
- 1½ c. cold water
- ½ c. sugar
- 6 ice cubes (equivalent to 1 c. water)
- 2 tbsp. mild vinegar
- 2 tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 c. fine - shredded raw cabbage
- ½ c. small - chopped celery
- ½ c. small - diced green pepper
- 2 pimentos, cut small
- Salad greens

Dust gelatin over cold water in qt. saucepan. Place over low heat; stir 2 to 3 min. or until gelatin dissolves.

Remove from heat. Stir in sugar and salt. Add ice cubes; stir until metled.

Add vinegar and lemon juice. Refrigerate until mixture mounds when dropped from spoon. Add remaining ingredients and turn into lightly oiled 4-c. mold or 6 individual molds. Regrigerate until firm, about 3 hrs. Unmold. Garnish with salad greens.

PIE

- 1 (9 inch unbaked American pastry shell)
- ¼ c. granulated sugar
- 2 c. milk
- 1 tbsp. butter or margarine
- ½ c. brown sugar
- 3 eggs, beaten
- ⅛ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. vanilla
- ½ tsp. cider vinegar

Prepare pastry shell using American pie pastry. Flute edges.

Caramelize (melt) granulated sugar. Add milk and butter.

When caramelized sugar has melted, stir in brown sugar beaten with eggs, salt, vanilla and vinegar. Cool.

Pour into lined pie plate. Bake 10 min. in hot over 400 degrees F. then reduce heat to mod. 350 degrees F., so custard filling will not boil.

Bake 35 min. or until pick inserted near center comes out clean. Serve cold.

THE CHEF ADVISES PLENTIFUL DAIRY FOODS

Mesdames: Dairy foods represent one of the most budget-wise sources of food nutrients. Par exemple, American families spend only around 19 cents of each dollar for dairy foods.

Whatever form they may take, milk and milk products are high in protein, plentiful and attractively priced.

Learn how to use the different varieties of milk for various purposes:

Homogenized whole milk as a beverage, with cereals, heated in cafe au lait; reconstituted non - fat dry milk for all purposes in low cholesterol or reducing diets; reconstituted evaporated milk in all kinds of cooking.

Cheese in all forms is high protein. Inexpensive fat-free cottage cheese is one of our best protein foods; use more of it.

NOT-OUT PARTY IS NEW TERM

OTTAWA (CP)—This item appeared in the social pages of a local newspaper:

"Miss Ann Davis, daughter of the chief of protocol, Mr. Henry F. Davis, and Mrs. Davis, entertained at a not-out dinner party in their residence, Rockcliffe Park."

The burning question: What is a not-out party?

People in the social swim explained today that it's a party for socialities too young to go out to cocktail parties and the like.

In short, not-out replaces the term pre-deb because the debutante business has fallen on hard times.
