Premier Of P.E.I. Nearly Walked Out At Quebec

Under the above heading a special correspondent of the Winnipeg Free Press writes as follows: By Hugh Boyd QUEBEC, Sept. 29 — No one wrecked the dominion-provincial constitutional conference. But one man nearly did. Three guesses who it was, Quebec's Maurice Duplessis? Saskatchewan's Tommy Douglas? Ontario's Leslie Frost? No. It was Premier Walter Jones of Prince Edward Island. Mr. Jones makes no secret of the fact that he was very mad at the federal government. Others agree that at one point—Wednesday—he came close to walking out of the conference and going home. However, he was persuaded to stay and now the P.E.I. premier says he will be coming back to the next plenary sessions in December when he will renew his demand for justice. The issue that irked Mr. Jones and nearly upset the conference was a ferry. This is not funny to the Islanders. They are absolutely dependent on connection with the mainland, and the nine-day railway strike which also tied up the car ferry hit them harder than almost any part of Canada. Mr. Jones' case is this: As a condition of entering Confederation, Prince Edward Island was promised a permanent link with the nearest railway on the mainland. This was a steam railway. The Fathers of Confederation could hardly anticipate the days of airplanes and trucks, but Mr. Jones argues that the federal government of today is only concerned with keeping the strict letter of the covenant and not its spirit. It seems that the Canadian National railway was charging $30 for every truck crossing Northumberland Strait on its car ferry while it assessed its own railway box cars just $2 apiece. Protests from P.E.I. brought the truck ferry down to $9, but the island government charges that gross discrimination remains. It also claims that the ferry could have been kept in service if Ottawa had taken it out of the hands of the C.N.R. on the eve of the strike. So when the conference came to talk about entrenched clauses of the constitution, Mr. Jones reared up and said he wanted this entrenched to provide P.E.I. with efficient transport service brought up to date — and then he wanted that entrenched as a provincial right. Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent did not think this was the time to delve into such matters and that was when Mr. Jones got mad.

The meeting heard with regret that several members are patients in the City Hospital. The convener of finance reported a very successful rummage sale and named a committee to take charge of a cake sale to be held during the month, the date to be advertised. Final arrangements were discussed in regard to assisting the Hospital Bazaar and a wool blanket will be donated toward this charitable cause. Individual donations will be given by members to the fancy work table, and a committee was named in charge of same. Three new members were introduced by the chairman and welcomed to the sub-division. Ten other ewes in the shipment from Scotland were for breeders in New Brunswick.

This will bring shipments by Mr. MacDonald to a total of 5 carloads this season.

Cardinal McGuigan Honoured In London

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 3 — Nearly six thousand Roman Catholics from all parts of Britain, were at Westminster Cathedral on Sunday to hear James Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto celebrate solemn pontifical mass. It was the closing ceremony of a week's religious celebrations marking the hundred years since the restoration of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in this country. Toronto's Cardinal was selected for this distinction by Bernard Cardinal Griffin, Archbishop of Westminster and Papal Legate in Britain. The Cathedral itself accommodated only half the crowd but loud speakers relayed the service to those kneeling in the streets outside. The sermon was preached by Monsignor Ronald Knox, famous throughout the Roman Catholic world for his modern translation of the Bible. Brilliant Function Since his arrival Cardinal McGuigan has had a full program of private and official functions. Thursday night he was speaker at a brilliant dinner given by one thousand Catholic laity at which for the first time seven Cardinals and 60 archbishops from Europe and North America were guests. It took the largest dining room in Grosvenor House to seat them all and, although the guests didn't seem to realize it, London's gas strike almost reduced the meal to delicatessen standards. Grosvenor House's 60 chefs labored over emergency electric plates to produce dishes that resembled the delicacies offered on engraved menus. The Duke of Norfolk presided and Cardinal McGuigan was introduced by Lord Pakenham, Minister of Civil Aviation. The Cardinal was given a long ovation and the audience interrupted his speech with cheers when he dropped his religious theme to stress the mutual sympathies that exist between Britain and Canada. Earlier police were called out to restore order in Park Lane when the Catholic prelates arrived at Grosvenor House. Hundreds stood in a cold drizzle to get a glimpse of the seven Cardinals who were resplendent in scarlet robes as they stepped from their limousines. Cardinal McGuigan was almost mobbed and hundreds of autograph books were shoved in front of him. Much Entertained On Friday the Cardinal went to Southwark, Suffolk, to conduct solemn mass in the blitzed Saint George's Cathedral which has been hastily patched up for the occasion. Friday evening he was guest at a dinner given by Archbishop Godfrey, the Apostolic delegate. For the week the High Commissioner for Canada, Dana Wilgress, will return from tariff talks in Torquay to hold a luncheon in his honor which will also be attended by prominent Canadians in London. Cardinal McGuigan will then commence a European tour which will take him first to Utrecht in Holland for conferences with Cardinal De Jong and later to Rome to meet the Pope. On November 12th he will attend services for the beatification of Marguerite Bourgeois, founder of the Notre Dame Community in Montreal. COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 3 — (Reuters) Prime Minister Hans Hedtoft said today Denmark will reconstruct her defences as quickly as possible till they are sufficient to fulfill her obligations to the United Nations and the Atlantic Pact.

Open House At Queen Charlotte Here On Saturday

H.M.C.S. "Queen Charlotte" will hold "open house" on Saturday afternoon to celebrate Navy Day. From coast to coast in Canada, Navy Week is now being observed, and Saturday has been set aside as a climax to the many displays, demonstrations and activities which are taking place in centres throughout the Dominion. The local barracks is one of the 19 of the 21 naval divisions which is holding "open house" along with most of the 80 Sea Cadet Corps headquarters. Guests at the "Queen Charlotte" will be welcomed on the quarter deck between the hours of 1 and 5:30 p.m., and will be conducted on a tour of the barracks. Presently active at the local barracks is very brisk, as guides for the tours get in readiness, and pots of paint and varnish are being used to good advantage. Visitors to the barracks will be pleasantly surprised when they see the spottish, ship-shape surroundings in which men of the Navy take their training. Plans for the "open house" are under the capable direction of Staff Lieutenant J. Richards in co-operation with Captain J.J. Connolly. Facilities which will be shown by the guides will include, on the first floor: ship's office, model room (models of various parts of ships and of different types of ships), Captain's office, staff lieutenant's office, men's canteen and lounge, and gunner's stores. In the basement: shooting range and Chief's and P.O.'s mess. On the second floor: Wardroom and gunroom for university cadets. On the top floor: Rigging room, class room, office of the medical officer, navigation room and the radio room. Two P.O.'s from Halifax are at present working in the radio room, and it is expected that by Saturday communication by radio will be possible with the harbour craft. At the rear of the barracks a model foc'stle has been built and will be shown to guests as they make their tour of the parade ground. During the afternoon, movies will be shown on the parade deck featuring a story on H.M.C.S. "Warrior". The technicolor film on this aircraft carrier is entitled "The Navy Files", and will be repeated regularly during the afternoon from 3 o'clock on.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 3 — Nearly six thousand Roman Catholics from all parts of Britain, were at Westminster Cathedral on Sunday to hear James Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto celebrate solemn pontifical mass. It was the closing ceremony of a week's religious celebrations marking the hundred years since the restoration of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in this country. Toronto's Cardinal was selected for this distinction by Bernard Cardinal Griffin, Archbishop of Westminster and Papal Legate in Britain. The Cathedral itself accommodated only half the crowd but loud speakers relayed the service to those kneeling in the streets outside. The sermon was preached by Monsignor Ronald Knox, famous throughout the Roman Catholic world for his modern translation of the Bible. Brilliant Function Since his arrival Cardinal McGuigan has had a full program of private and official functions. Thursday night he was speaker at a brilliant dinner given by one thousand Catholic laity at which for the first time seven Cardinals and 60 archbishops from Europe and North America were guests. It took the largest dining room in Grosvenor House to seat them all and, although the guests didn't seem to realize it, London's gas strike almost reduced the meal to delicatessen standards. Grosvenor House's 60 chefs labored over emergency electric plates to produce dishes that resembled the delicacies offered on engraved menus. The Duke of Norfolk presided and Cardinal McGuigan was introduced by Lord Pakenham, Minister of Civil Aviation. The Cardinal was given a long ovation and the audience interrupted his speech with cheers when he dropped his religious theme to stress the mutual sympathies that exist between Britain and Canada. Earlier police were called out to restore order in Park Lane when the Catholic prelates arrived at Grosvenor House. Hundreds stood in a cold drizzle to get a glimpse of the seven Cardinals who were resplendent in scarlet robes as they stepped from their limousines. Cardinal McGuigan was almost mobbed and hundreds of autograph books were shoved in front of him.
