Purified Blood

Saved an operation in the following case. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures when all others fail. It makes pure blood.

"A year ago my father, William Thompson, was taken suddenly ill with inflammation of the bladder. He suffered a great deal and was very low for some time. At last the doctor said he would not get well unless an operation was performed. At this time we read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try it. Before he used half a bottle his appetite had come back to him, whereas before he could eat but little. When he had taken three bottles of the medicine he was as well as ever." FRANCIS J. FATHER M'ELMEEL.

The following lines on the death of the late Father McElmeel were not intended for publication. They have, however, been sent us by a friend, at whose request we publish them :

Speak, stranger, speak ! say, canst thou tell
Whence comes that mournful wail
That in sad cadences is borne
Upon the evening gale ?
List how it rises, how it falls;
Tell me its meaning, pray.
Oh ! God, 'tis from the palace halls !
Some good priest's soul's passing away.

See ! by yon taper's dim, faint light
The grey-robed flitting to and fro;
Those patient watchers of the night
That like good angels come and go.
Others tonight their vigil share—
The black robed mingles with the grey;
Good, pious priests are gathered there
To soothe and comfort, watch and pray.

Look ! weeping ones are nearer led.
Oh ! God, who can their anguish tell ?
As bending o'er their loved one's bed,
They take a long, a last farewell.
Now all is still in chamber hall;
They pour their hearts to Him on high,
Priests, nuns, sisters, brothers, all;
Ah ! who would not thus wish to die ?

But who is he whose spirit's flown,
Who lived so well his years on earth
That when the Father called him home
Was worthy such a saintly death ?
So loved ! so mourned ! what man was he ?
My heart grows heavy with strange fear;
Oh ! stranger, say, it cannot be
The good, kind priest we loved so dear.

The morning breaks, and all too fast
Sad tidings flash through country, town,
And as 'tis heard men look aghast
With heads in sorrow bent low down.
St. Ann's, well may their sad tears flow,
And loved St. Joseph's bow thy head;
Great is your loss, severe the blow,
Your friend, your guide, your priest is dead.

Men mutely stand, nor questions ask,
And weep who have not wept for years;
The busy housewives cease their task
To dry the bitter, blinding tears.
E'en children's tears unbidden flow,
Their little games abruptly end;
Pure, tender hearts they loved him so—
Their best and kindest, dearest friend.

Our priest is dead. We feel, we know,
Vain are the tears today we shed;
E'en should they like swift rivers flow
To wake our loved one from the dead,
Their but remains to touch his bier
And on it our poor tributes strew.
Look on the face we loved so dear
And take a long, a last adieu.

What memories that pale face recalls !
Well may we meditative pause.
'Twas here he pledged his young, fair life
To labor in the Master's cause.
And oh ! who knows, Master, but Thou,
The labors, sorrows, trials, care,
That furrowed o'er that youthful brow
And silvered his once glossy hair ?

Seven years he labored for the care,
" Child, lay thy weary burden down,
Enter thy Father's house and wear
The good and faithful servant's crown."
And ah ! though sad's the parting kiss,
Who'd not rejoice amid their tears
To know their priest is crowned in bliss,
Unchanging through the endless years !

And yet 'tis hard our loss to bear,
So kind was he, so rich in mind,
Ready our joys or griefs to share,
So cheerful, gentle, good and kind ;
His purse was open to the poor,
To want and grief willing his ear,
And he who reached his friendly door
Found rest and welcome and kind cheer.

When we his kindly deeds recall,
His genial face, his cheerful smile,
No marvel he was loved by all,
And now is mourned throughout the Isle ;
But oft too late our love is told,
The word, the smile that life would cheer,
We from our loved ones oft withhold
To waste upon their pulseless bier.

Farewell ! kind pastor, ever dear,
Nor soon thy name will be forgot,
Oh ! pray that thy poor children here
May one day share thy happy lot.
For this we'll work with steadfast aim,
And oh ! what joy to hope, to feel,
That we will meet in heaven again
Our own loved Father McElmeel.

AMICUS.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

LETTER FROM MR. F. MORROW.

SIR,—Allow me to state through the columns of THE EXAMINER, that the cause of the loss of a valuable colt, on which I had a surgical operation performed by Mr. F. McDonald, of Dundas, a veterinary surgeon, is not in any way to be attributed to the surgeon. I attach no blame whatever to Mr. McDonald, and here state my reasons : some days after the operation was performed I noticed a swelling in the horse's eyes, and at once sent for Mr. Mcdonald, who arrived in a few hours and pronounced the disease Tetanus. As he was a young man, and this was a colt I valued very highly, fearing he might be mistaken in the causes of the disease, I at once telegraphed for Mr. James McDonald, the veterinary surgeon of Summerside, who arrived here the next evening. He pronounced the case incurable, but fully concurred with Mr. F. McDonald's treatment, and also said that the operation had been performed in a surgical manner.

While in conversation this afternoon with one of our best medical men, he fully satisfied me that no blame whatever was to be attached to the surgeon who performed the operation, and that it could be looked upon as nothing more than a mere accident, as he, during his practice for the last twenty years, had met with several cases of Tetanus in the human body, and rarely knew one to recover. My reason for thus occupying your valuable space, is fearing that the loss of this case might in any way injure Mr. McDonald in his profession.

Mrs. Fogg—Only think of it ! They do say that Mr. Figg was seen playing whist last Sunday. Isn't it awful ? Mr. Fogg—But then you must remember that Figg plays so poorly.—Boston Transcript.

Col. Brown—By Jove ! Miss Lilyblow, how the costumes and make-up alter people. I hardly knew you. Miss Lilyblow—Do I look a fright, then? Col. Brown—On the contrary, you look charming.—Judge.

Owner—I want you to sell these horses for me. Auctioneer—I see their tails are docked. We'll have to sell them at wholesale. Owner—What ? Auctioneer—Well, I can't retail them.—Philadelphia Record.

"My expenditures never exceed my receipts," said Hawkins. "Mine do," sighed Wilkins. "In fact, I am very much afraid I shall never have any receipts for some of my last year's expenditures."—Harper's Bazar.

Presiding Magistrate—How came you to enter the premises? Prisoner—Please your worship, 2 a.m., no police about, an open window on the ground floor—you would have climbed in yourself.—Fliegende Blatter.

Wyld—See that woman sitting alone in the corner ? That's Miss Antique, the lecturer. The women rave about her, but I don't think she thoroughly grasps her subject. Mack—What is it? Wyld—Men.—Brooklyn Life.

She—What made you so late coming home night before last ? He—Humph! You have been a long time remembering to ask me. Yes; I thought I would give you time enough to make up a good excuse.—Indianapolis Journal.

When you leave an article with your uncle—he of the three golden globes—it is a question in his mind, perhaps, whether or not you will redeem it; but it can truly be said that he awaits the result with interest.—Boston Transcript.

Caller—I am going to send my little girl to cooking school at once. Does she care for such things? Caller—Dear me, no; but I am sure she will make a good cook, she breaks so many lovely dishes.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Proud mother—You haven't kissed the baby. Bachelor uncle—Um—er—I'll try to remember next time. I'll kiss her when I enter—come back from Europe. When will that be ? Let—me—see. About sixteen years.—New York Weekly.

Commuter—What do you mean by saying that that house is only five minutes from the station ? It's fifteen minutes, if it's a second. Real Estate Dealer—When I said five minutes I supposed you had a bicycle.—Boston Transcript.

"Young man," said the sage, "you know it all now, but when you have reached my age you will find that you know almost nothing. "Yes," said the youth, "I have often heard that one forgets much in his declining years."—Cincinnati Tribune.

"The baby did come mighty nigh being named Trilby," said the lean man with the yellow vest, "but I managed to save her." "How ?" asked the fat man. "Told my wife that we would be liable for infringement of the copyright laws."—Indianapolis Journal.

"Mister," said the stranger who had wandered across the Long Bridge; "where are the Potomac flats that I read so much about?" "I don't know exactly," replied the dejected man who was walking back from the race course, "but I guess I must be one of them."—Washington Star.

CHEAP GAS ILLUMINATION.

A 25-Candle Power Light from Two and a Half Feet an Hour.

Public attention is being given in Paris to a system of incandescent gas lighting to which the name of the inventor, M. De Mare, has been given. The arrangement consists of an atmospheric burner-fitting designed to be easily attached to an ordinary burner point. This fitting is of extremely ingenious design and construction, being probably the smallest and most compact air and gas mixing apparatus ever successfully used for this purpose. It is professedly designed upon the principle of the Giffard injector. The mixed gas and air issue at the top of the fitting through a slit, which causes the flame to spread in the regular batswing shape. Across the flame is suspended, by means of a brass yoke, a length of twisted plantinum wires, carrying a row of what appear to be asbestos fibres. In the heat of the atmospheric flame these fibres become highly incandescent, and yield a brilliant light. The effect is certainly striking; and as neither chimney nor globe is required to enable the light to burn satisfactorily, and the incandescing material is not woven into any textile form, the simplicity and cheapness of the arrangement are obvious. For street lighting, clusters of these burners are used in Paris with good effect. Before lighting the fibres, being flexible, will stand any reasonable amount of handling, and it is said that one string will last for 1,500 hours of lighting, and be serviceable to the last shred. The consumption of gas in the De Mare burners is limited to 2 3-8 cubic feet per hour, and the illuminating power is stated to be 25 candles.

A HORSE AND A MULE.

Proposition to Join a Gas and Steam Engine Together.

Referring to the discussion of the gas engine question, a prominent engineer remarked in conversation that he failed to see why the gas engine and the steam engine should not be compounded, so to speak. He put the case something in this manner : In the gas engine one of the problems is to keep the cylinder reasonably cool, and in the steam engine to keep the cylinder hot. Now, suppose we have a gas engine running and jacket its cylinder with water, which is then used for boiler feed water, thus saving the heat which is now thrown away. Then, take the exhaust from the gas engine through the jacket of the steam cylinder, and, if necessary, as it probably would be, add a heating chamber for the steam to pass through just before reaching the cylinder, so that more heating surface could be employed. Two such engines adapted to each other would probably mean a relatively small gas engine and a steam engine large enough to carry all the load in case the gas engine refused to work for any reason, and, arranged in this way, each would supplement the other, so far as the proper distribution of heat is concerned. The proposition is a novel one, and there is a chance to do some thinking over it. Possibly some one may be so situated as to make it easy to try the plan and let us know the results.—American Machinist.

To Revive Shipbuilding at Quebec.

There is a scheme afloat to revive the shipbuilding industry at Quebec. Years ago Quebec did a large shipbuilding business, of course entirely in wood vessels. It is now proposed to enter there with iron shipbuilding. The steel ship plates to be used will be imported from England. Freights from England to Canada are exceedingly low in consequence of the number of vessels going there in ballast for cargoes of lumber.

A BAD BRIDGE—Yesterday while the wife of John Currie, of Emvvale, was driving in Green Bay, Lot 30, she was seriously injured by an accident which happened at McPhee's Bridge. The bridge is in a very bad state of repair. It spans the head-waters of the West River, and was damaged by spring freshets, but never repaired. At present the top of the bridge is so unsafe that horses refuse to go over it. In Mrs. Currie's case her horse backed the wagon over the side of the bridge, upsetting the trap into three feet of water. Mrs. Currie fell underneath, and how she escaped being killed when the horse fell over on her is a wonder. She was seriously injured, but managed to get the horse out of the stream, and led him home. The bridge is about six feet over the water, but has no guard at the side. Its disgraceful condition is responsible for the accident, which has excited much indignation.

Painless Dentistry !

TESTIMONIALS.

J E McDonald, D D S,—

The seventeen (17) teeth you extracted for me on Thursday, May 30th, at Doctor Robertson's, Crapaud, gave me less pain than I have suffered many times in having ONE taken out. I shall send all my suffering neighbors to you.

With gratitude yours,
MRS HUGH GILLIS.
Rose Valley, May 31, 1895.

Doctor McDonald, Dentist,—

Dear Doctor,—For two years I have been a constant sufferer from toothache, always in dread of having them taken out. Hearing of your success I determined to try your method, and now, after having you extract six for me, I can conscientiously say you are the only one who ever extracted a tooth for me WITHOUT PAIN. Truly yours,

MRS JAS DEVEREAUX.

McKinnon's English Ointment.

MR. NEIL MCKINNON,—

Dear Sir,—For five years I was a sufferer from eczema. Physicians could not help me. At last I bought a box of your Ointment, which helped me wonderfully, while two boxes made a complete cure. I can recommend it to all others similarly afflicted.

ALEX. MCKAY.
