Says Pyongyang

Rebuilt Underground

LONDON, (Reuters)—The people of the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, reduced "to a heap of rubble" by Allied bombing, have rebuilt their factories and homes in caves 100 feet underground. Tax, official Soviet news agency, says.
"In this underground city 250,000 people lived and worked. Now, after the armistice, life above the ground is coming back to normal."

Impressive Service At Marshfield Ch.

The second rededication service of St. Columba Church, Marshfield, was held Sunday evening at 7.30. The guest preacher was Rev. Lawrence Blakie of the Brookfield Presbyterian Charge. The church was decorated with beautiful autumn flowers, and the music under the direction of Miss Dorothy MacFarlane included solos by Mrs. Earl Foster and Miss Joanne Lilly. Misses Elizabeth Stetson and Shirley Scott were heard in a beautiful duet.

The beautiful old church, set in the middle of a well-kept church yard looks down on the graves of many prominent citizens of the past, some dating back to the early part of the 19th century. It marks the last resting place of the late Senator Donald Ferguson, a member of the Privy Council. Surmounted by a large "weeping willow" is the family plot of the late Alex MacBeth through whose generosity the church land was secured.

Rev. Mr. Blakie who took as his theme "God is a spirit, and they that worship him, shall worship him in spirit and truth", spoke forcefully on the need of sincere worship. "Church dedications are necessary from time to time" he said, "but it is also important for people to rededicate themselves from time to time."
