LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

A Much Governed Province.

SIR,—In whatever else there may be scarcity, there is one thing at least, in respect of which Prince Edward Island is blessed with an abundance. "In the multitude of counsellers there is safety," said the wisest man that ever lived. The security of the country is therefore assured, if numbers may be accepted as a substitute for wisdom. Though the smallest province of the Dominion, and with local interests corresponding to its dimensions, it yet bears the proud distinction of having, in proportion to its population, the greatest number of legislators of any country in the world, as may be seen by the following comparisons: Ontario, the greatest in wealth and population of any province of the Dominion, has one local representative for every 23,500 of her population. Quebec has one for every 15,700. Great Britain, legislating in the interests of a world wide empire, and with all her complicated domestic and foreign affairs, has one representative for every 33,000. Prince Edward Island can afford the luxury of one for every 2,500 of her population. Neither the condition of our financial resources, nor the pressing importance of our local interests, require the services of a double-barreled chamber of forty-three members, and there is no intelligent person but is convinced that the work of legislation could be as efficiently performed by less than half that number, and no reasonable measure to that end but would meet with general acceptance throughout the Province. That the legislative machine is too cumbersome for our present needs is unquestioned, and we would suggest for its simplification some such scheme as follows:—

1. Abolition of our imitation House of Lords;

2. A reduction of the Legislative Assembly to eighteen members, to be elected by manhood suffrage.

3. Biennial sessions.

4. Members to be paid on a descending scale at some such rate as follows: Two dollars and fifty cents per day for the first two weeks of the session; two dollars per day for the next two weeks, and one dollar and fifty cents per day for the two weeks following, no further payment to be made for a continuance of the session beyond this time.

5 The division of the Province into eighteen electoral districts of as nearly equal size as possible, so that all votes may have the same value in the election of representatives.

6 The creation of municipalities corresponding in size and number to the electoral districts, each to be governed by a Council, which shall have charge of all public roads within its jurisdiction, and raise money for keeping them in good condition by direct taxation, in such a way and according to such authority as shall be vested in it by act of Legislature.

That the adoption of the municipal system would result in a more equitable distribution of funds raised for the maintenance of the public highways must be evident; that it would result in their improved condition is reasonable to believe. Coming direct from the pockets of the ratepayers, and collected and expended within a narrow limit, the disbursement of the funds would be closely and jealously watched. The municipal councils, having few other interests to consider, and composed of men directly interested in maintaining the public roads, would probably expend their revenues to the best advantage, and independent of party politics. The saving effected by the reduction of the legislative machinery, and the adoption of biennial sessions, together with the responsibilities assumed by the municipalities, would afford the Local Government relief to an amount nearly, if not quite, as much as the present yearly deficit.

A reduction in the number of our representatives, and in the expenses of legislation, is a measure imperatively called for. But the greatest obstacle in the way of its adoption would be the unwillingness of political leaders to detract from their own importance, and of political aspirants to limit the chances of success which such a reduction would involve. But we may reasonably ask, what is the end and aim of government? Is it merely to sustain a machine, the expenses of which are out of all proportion to the revenue collected and the services rendered? Or is it rather intended to serve the best interests of society, and, by adapting means to existing wants, make government less necessary? If the latter be its object, in no way can it be more readily accomplished than by simplifying the legislative machinery, and thus lightening the burdens of the people.

ARGUS.

Some Prominent Citizens of St. John.

HOW THEY ARE DESCRIBED IN AN ADDRESS PRESENTED TO A MINISTER.

The Progress reports that prior to the departure of Rev. J. F. Fullerton, of Calvin Church, for Prince Edward Island, a number of his friends met at the store of Mr. James Kelly, Market Square, and presented the Minister with a gold-headed cane, accompanied by the following address:

SIR,—The select company of friends that meet night after night in what may be termed, "in legal parlance," the "locus in quo," to talk over matters regarding the church and state, regret that the vicissitudes, which seem to be part of everyday life, are such as to cause your departure from our city. Many pleasant hours we have spent together, and the subjects discussed have been various, and, in fact, embraced all kinds of topics. There is no doubt but that your presence added greatly to our pleasure. Your conversation has always been beneficial to us, while your mode of dealing with the various subjects that come before the august body for adjudication, is all that could be desired by such critical persons as the company is composed of. We trust, too, sir, you derived some benefit from meeting with us. It is said the best study of mankind is man, and if that is so, sir, you had a great opportunity for study. To summarize those opportunities, it is only necessary to mention a few of the characteristics of the company, to wit,—In Alderman Vincent and Mr. J. King Kelly, you behold the broad minds that the study of the law bestows upon individuals. Here are two men, whose lives are devoted to unravelling perplexing questions, separating the dross from the baser metal, figuratively speaking, so that less cultured minds may realize and grasp the true meaning of that beautiful symbol, "Justice holding the balance." One of the above gentlemen, too, gives his time and talents in governing the city. Between the calibre of these gentlemen, and Mr. Joseph Murdoch there is a vast gulf. Mr. Murdoch reaches the acme of his ideal, when he perpetrates a joke at the expense of one of the company. To get the better of someone in a jocular manner is both meat and drink to him, and the smile that illuminates his countenance on such events, is beyond description.

In Major Armstrong, you see embodied the soldier, with all the heroic deeds that imbue men who battle for Queen and country. The shrapnell and other death missles are to him instruments that lead to glory. In the storming of a fort, he sees nothing but the plaudits of a thankful populace.

In Mr. Jas. Kelly, you see the impersonification of the shrewd "bourgeois," as well as a staunch piece of timber in the "bulwarks of protestantism," whose ideal of manhood, as well as the solution of political and other subjects, seem to be embodied in the phrase "He's an Orangeman." In Mr. R. A. C. Brown, you have a man whose temperment takes most peculiar turns, and one who has very decided opinions when dealing with the utterance of such men as Gladstone and and Laurier, or newspapers like the Globe. In Mr. John Carr—here the line must be drawn, for the man who has fathomed Carr needs know no more on this side of the grave. The mystery attending the building of the Sphynx is nothing when compared with the general makeup of Carr. Politically, even, he is an unsolved problem, but he possesses wisdom both deep and far reaching.

And last, and no doubt least, there is H. E. Condor. To describe such a person, the opinions of some of the company must used. He never knows anything, never has an opinion of his own upon any subject discussed by the learned body, and never says anything, and therefore must be one of the most peculiar of the great company.

The above is a category, of the able and enlightened body, with whom you had the honor to associate. Now I will call upon Alderman Vincent to carry out the object of probably what will be our last meeting collectively, for some time.

Mr. Fullerton accepted the cane, but did not make any formal reply to the address. Perhaps he thought that it both explained and answered itself. The wonder is that he was able to tear himself away from St. John.

Mrs. Brown's Case.

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—A most interesting case has come to light here, being that of Mrs. Brown, of Agnes St., who for years has suffered from Bright's Disease, the last two of which she spent in bed. Her feet were swollen so she could not walk, and being affected with paralysis she was taken to the Toronto General Hospital, where, after undergoing a lengthened treatment which did her no good, and receiving nothing in the way of consolation save a certificate that she was incurable and a permit admitting her to the Home for Incurables. Even then she did not give up hope and tried Homœpathic treatment, but with as little results as the other. There seemed nothing left but to go to that retreat where only those who are beyond all human aid are admitted, and there wait for death to relieve her of her sufferings. She heard of that wonderful cure of Sam Murray, of Gravenhurst, by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and she decided to try them. The first week she noticed very little change, but before she had finished the second box her back began to feel easier, the swelling to leave her feet, and by the third week she could walk, something she had been unable to do for two years before. Now, after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills for two months she is so completely cured that she is about to take up school teaching again, a calling she pursued before losing her health. ....
