Shaw-MacDonald Wedding

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Manse, Montague, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Oct. 6 at 7 p.m., when Muriel Blanche, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan MacDonald, Cardigan Head, became the bride of James Raymond Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Shaw, Lorne Valley. Rev. D. A. Campbell performed the ceremony.

The bride was charming in a blue-rose-length gown of nylon net over satin, the bodice of which was charmingly lace, with matching lace jacket. Her shoulder-length veil fell from a tiara studded with rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

The bride was attended by Miss Norma MacKenzie who wore a ballerina-length gown of lime green nylon tulle over taffeta, and matching halo and mitts. She carried a nosegay of yellow chrysanthemums.

The groom was supported by Mr. Gordon MacDonald, brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, for approximately 70 guests. The bride's table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom, and was cut in the traditional manner by the young couple. Summer flowers and tapers in silver candelabra adorned the table.

After the good wishes of their many relatives and friends, the dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. James MacNeill, Mrs. Alvin Myers and the Misses Bette MacNeill, Ivy Jay and Ruth MacKenzie. Mrs. Wendall Jay, aunt of the bride, presided over the tea. Miss Marguerite MacDonald, sister of the bride, had charge of the guest book.

The bride's going away costume was a wool dress and a shortie coat with red accessories. After a short honeymoon spent in Nova Scotia, the young couple have taken up residence in Lorne Valley.

WINNIPEG, (CP)—Justice Minister Garson said Saturday the provinces have expressed no wish to ditch the jury system and put all court cases in the hands of the judges.

The justice minister was commenting on a statement by Chief Justice Campbell McLaurin of the Alberta Supreme Court that "the time has come when a judge can do a better job than a jury."

Chief Justice McLaurin told the Colorado Bar Association Friday that he favored abandonment of the jury system.

Mr. Garson said: "The administration of justice in the provincial courts of which Chief Justice McLaurin speaks, is the responsibility of the provincial authorities. We in the federal department of justice have not received from the provincial attorneys-general any request for the abolition of jury trials in criminal cases."

Business Men See Critical Turning Point Near In World Trade Policies

(By Harold Morrison, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canadian authorities feel the free world is nearing a critical turning point in its international trade policy, one that may lead to a narrowing or expansion of the essential flow of goods among western countries.

Since economic well-being is one of the west's defenses against communism, Canada is placing a great deal of emphasis on the forthcoming talks in Geneva where the representatives of 34 countries will meet in an attempt to hammer out stronger international trade rules.

The meeting, opening Oct. 22, will mark the first major review of the workings of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. "A lot of people are not too happy about GATT," said one federal expert. "This may be our last chance to patch up loopholes which let countries discriminate and restrict imports. If we don't succeed, the whole doctrine of expanding world trade may fall to pieces."

The GATT was set up in 1947 as a temporary instrument whereby member countries could reduce tariffs and agree on trade rules. It was to have been replaced by the so-called Havana charter, drafted as a strong permanent trade regulatory plan, but the U.S. Congress refused to approve of that. Thus authorities now concede that GATT may become a permanent instrument.

For that reason, authorities feel that Canada and other countries desiring and requiring large foreign markets for their own survival must depend heavily on the workings of the GATT to protect their markets.

LOOHPHOLES USED But Canada has observed in recent years one country after another using GATT loopholes to block imports. Canada has accused the United States of using the GATT regulations in an illegal way to impose curbs against food exports from Canada and other countries. Britain and other countries in the sterling area have imposed import curbs against goods from Canada and other dollar-areas because of a post-war shortage of dollars. GATT does allow the use of import curbs when a country hits an exchange crisis, but a country using this loophole must abide by the advice of the International Monetary Fund in deciding whether the curbs are to be lifted. Canadian officials feel that some countries have been unusually slow in easing the curbs and as the GATT rules now stand, there is no effective way of forcing them to speed up.

Thus, Canadian authorities take the lead in proposing that the rules be strengthened by restricting the use of import quotas and placing a definite ceiling on the length of time they may run. Trade Minister Howe will lead the Canadian delegation.
