

WHAT SHE DID WITH HIM.

'That wouldn't do,' said Ruth, with a sapient shake of her pretty head.
'I don't know what I shall do with him!' sighed Mary. 'Of course he'll spoil my garden, back up my furniture and keep me continually in hot water.'
'He wouldn't be a boy if he didn't do that!' laughed Ruth. 'Never mind, Mary; you just turn him over to me. You have two servants, and next to no sewing, and I was afraid that I shouldn't find enough to do to keep me out of mischief. Now I've found what my mission is. I rather like boys; and I'll take this one entirely off your hands so that he shant bother you the least bit in the world.'

Though a little dubious in regard to powers she had never seen tested, Mary was not a little cheered by this assurance, together with Ruth's hopeful way of looking at things.

The next day the two girls started out, bright and early, in the pony-chase for the good old city of S—, which was only five miles distant. They experienced no difficulty in finding the law office named, and whose only occupant was a young man about twenty-five, who was writing at a desk.

'It is Mr. Brockley, I do believe!' whispered Ruth.

Rising to his feet, the young lawyer turned towards them a face radiant with surprise and pleasure.

It was too late to retreat, if Mary had wanted to do so, so there was nothing to do but go forward.

'Mr. North stepped out, but will be back shortly,' said Mr. Brockley, the junior partner of the firm, in reply to her questions.

With those words he ushered the two into an inner office. Mary's cheeks were very red, but there was a grave expression in her eyes, from which he vainly strove to obtain an answering glance.

Giving Mary a seat by the window, which he lowered for her express benefit, Mr. Brockley withdrew, pausing for a moment on the threshold, in the vain hope of receiving a look from the blue eyes that were obstinately bent upon the floor.

'What a pity he's married; he's just as much in love with you as ever!' whispered Ruth, upon whom his little by-play was not lost.

'For shame!' responded Mary, turning very red. At this moment Mr. North entered.

When Mary made known her errand he started at her for some moments without speaking.

'Are you Miss Mary A. Delaven, of Wilton?'

'Yes.'

'How old are you?'

'Twenty-two.'

'Humph! Any else there of that name?'

'Not that I know of,' responded Mary, a little bewildered at this cross-questioning, but ended it in supposing it to be a lawyer's way.

Then a moment later:

'The—the boy you mentioned, where is he?'

'Boy.'

'Yes; Mrs. Gady's grand-nephew?'

'Oh, yes. Well, your ward is a pretty big, boy, ma'am. I'm expecting him in every minute; then he can speak for himself. Excuse me until then.'

And out of the room he darted.

'Did you hear that, Ruth?' faltered Mary, in a tone of dismay. 'A big boy! What can I do with him? I've half a mind to—to run away!'

'Nonsense! Mary; don't be frightened. Didn't I tell you I'd take charge of him? I'm not afraid of any boy, big or little.'

Here a young man entered who, glancing at the speaker, advanced eagerly towards her.

'Ruth!'

'Charlie!'

'I never thought to find you here!'

'Nor I you.' Then, suddenly, remembering Mary, Ruth added: 'Miss Delaven, Mr. Smith.'

'Also, your ward, Mrs. Gady's grand-nephew,' said Mr. North, who was just back of her.

'Impossible!' cried Mary, looking in helpless bewilderment at the smiling face that was all of a head higher than her own.

(Concluded in our next.)

Some weeks ago, after a long interval, Mass began to be said again within the precincts of the Tower of London. Such a thing had not happened since the days of Henry the Eighth. The reason for reviving a custom which had been so long in quietude is that a number of the guardsmen who are Roman Catholics, have asked and obtained permission to have the privilege of attending a religious service in accordance with their own faith. In recording the change, the London Telegraph says that we "defend the faith now-a-days in a different manner from that employed by 'Bluff King Hal'—that is by exhibiting it as a model of toleration and intelligent conviction."

A Good Thing.

German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German Physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in Medicine. It quickly cures Coughs, Colds and all lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause of the affection and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Beware of medicines of similar names, lately introduced. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1863, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cents. Sample bottle, 10 cents.

A Fact Worth Knowing!

HOW OFTEN do we hear men say, "I never can get clothes to fit." The reason is obvious. Few Tailors understand how to Cut the Garment to afford the evolutions of the body. Come to the right place and get suited. Mothers, bring your boys; wives, send your husbands.

Cutting promptly executed. Good fits guaranteed.

Equalled by few, excelled by none.

Charges Moderate. Terms Cash.

SEMINARY FOR YOUNG LADIES.

VISITOR:

The Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia

PRINCIPAL:

The Rev. John Padfield.

THIS SCHOOL offers, at very moderate cost, the advantages of a comfortable and pleasant home together with a thorough and refined education.

The course of Instruction is the same as that of the best Schools in England and is founded upon the University Examinations for Women. Eight young ladies from this School passed the Local Examination of the University of King's College in June last. This is the only School in Canada that has passed pupils at a University Examination.

The number of pupils is limited, rendering the School select, and while it possesses all the educational advantages of a large public school, each pupil is enabled to receive that individual care and oversight which is so important, and which cannot be given in a large establishment.

Mr. and Mrs. Padfield are assisted by a staff of four resident governesses, besides visiting masters.

Parisienne French is taught conversationally. There are two resident French Governesses.
References given to parents of pupils.
