White Paper Reveals Pre-coup Diplomacy

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)
(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
LONDON, April 8.—(C. P. Cable) Correspondence issued in the form of a white paper tonight shows how Germany delayed for almost two years negotiations for the proposed western air pact.

The document covers a period from June, 1934, to March 7 of this year when Germany violated the Locarno Treaty by sending troops into the demilitarized Rhineland area. The letters and despatches reveal practically nothing not already made known, the object of their publication being the British Government's anxiety to show the country and the world in general their persistent endeavors towards a satisfactory settlement, more particularly regarding the proposed eastern air pact.

Early in the negotiations Germany expressed fears that a Russian air attack might easily reduce Berlin "to a heap of ashes."

When Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the German foreign minister, saw foreign secretary Eden in London during the Royal funeral, he stated "The German Government fully intended to respect the Treaty of Locarno and all that they asked was that others should observe it in spirit as well as in letter."

When the British foreign secretary saw Baron Leopold von Hoesch, the German ambassador at London, on Feb. 2 in connection with the air pact, the Ambassador pointed out that complications had been created by the Ethiopian war and asked how could Italy enter an air agreement at that time.

The foreign minister speaks of meeting the ambassador again on March 6 when he again emphasized the importance of improved relations among the three great western powers. His final sentence in this correspondence reads:

"The following day the German ambassador called at the foreign office and informed me of the German Government's decision to denounce the Treaty of Locarno and re-occupy the demilitarized zone."

URGES PUBLIC TO DEMAND ENFORCEMENT

Prevalence Of Intemperance and Juvenile Smoking Scored By Preacher.

A large enthusiastic temperance meeting was held in the hall at Travellers Rest Tuesday evening, April 7th, under the auspices of the Women's Institute.

The meeting was opened with a few timely remarks by Mr. James Marchbank who occupied the chair. The audience then joined heartily in singing a temperance chorus after which a trio, "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight," was beautifully and impressively rendered. The chairman introduced Rev. Mr. Waterworth, secretary of the Temperance Federation, who was the speaker of the evening.

In his opening remarks Mr. Waterworth made clear his reasons for giving of his time and interest in the cause of temperance. He declared himself neither a politician nor the son of a politician and without any ambition in that direction. But among the first observations to interest him in the cause of temperance was the careless manner in which officials in responsible positions wielded their influence. For instance he drew attention to the fact that at recess both morning and afternoon almost every day one may see teachers leaving the school grounds of Summerside Academy in a cloud of cigarette smoke. The result is that as young as 8 and 10 year old. The young bodies and minds cannot stand the poison of that drug, consequently they begin to crave the nicotine, until it is not unusual to see little fellows picking discarded cigarette ends out of the gutter to share them with their little friends. The result is stunted bodies and minds because those who are paid to develop those bodies and minds are selfishly careless of their influence.

"But, you say, what has that to do with liquor?" continued Mr. Waterworth. "The same principle applies. The boys are mimicking the bootleggers, drunks and drinkers in the same manner. When the police officers elbow a staggering drunk up the street, a parade of imitators follow and the 'funny side' is impressed upon their minds (we would not want them to hear the burden of the tragic side) and they live on to imagine and react the scene.

"Almost Daily Occurrences"

"These scenes are almost daily occurrences while Mr. Jones, Brown and Smith go on 'money grabbing' careless of young lives going to ruin. Jones must not open his mouth because his friend Smith has a friend that is in the business. Brown has a building block wanted to the 'trade' and Smith is depending on him for business so he becomes long-tied and the ball rolls on and the web tightens and one bootlegger is still able to supply his men with two or three new cars with the blood money of our fairest. The Town Council could stop it over night. The Board of Trade could stamp it out. The Church could demand a halt. But no, all are too contaminated and weakened by pollution to raise a voice above a whisper. The last voice, Mr. and Mrs. Ruralite, is your own. You can stop it. Demand that your sons and daughters may go and come unmolested and things will be different. You are the backbone of this country. It is you who butters the bread of those who have it in their power to protect you from the ravages of the liquor traffic. We believe you will save the situation."

Mr. Waterworth brought his audience much valuable and interesting information regarding the experience of other countries and provinces under liquor control systems. They certainly present conditions that we do not want to experience.

Mr. Waterworth closed his lecture by illustrating our responsibility by an incident that occurred last fall. A gentleman, as fine a citizen as this country has produced, and his son, home on a visit after many years away, spent an enjoyable day at the fall fair. While returning home a car driven by a man who had just recently indulged and a friend who had indulged also, disregarded a stop sign at the end of a road leading into the main highway. The result was that they struck the car bearing the father and son, square in the centre, driving it into the ditch. "Had you or I approached the two men that came in from the side road a while before, say when they were indulging, to ask them what they were doing, they would have asked us whose business it was. Well, whose business was it? "It turned out to be the car owner's business to the extent of $125 which he had to pay out of his own pocket. (Good advertising for the tourist trade). It turned out to be his mother's business to the extent of a sleepless night not knowing whether the father was dead or alive (because of poor phone service, the message not coming over clearly) and it was the

MORNING SESSION
Address By Hon. Mr. McGuigan

"A spirit of harmony and co-operation should exist between the teacher and the ratepayers in the district and especially the parent ratepayers. I have some experience in this matter besides the fact that I have had to deal with several cases since my assuming office as Minister of Education," Hon. Mark McGuigan told the teachers speaking at the morning session yesterday.

"I was a teacher in the rural schools in this province for a period of two years," he continued.

"Some teachers, especially the younger ones, may think that they are doing their whole duty when they do their best in the classroom, and when they spend a considerable part of their free time in preparing the next day's work, in mapping out plans for the classes and in arranging their time so as to give full justice to the many subjects that are now on the curriculum. This would be sufficient if the ratepayers fully appreciated their duties and gave the teachers the encouragement and support that is their due. Unfortunately this is not always so, as some of the ratepayers do not realize the contribution which they can make by helping both teacher and pupil," the Minister of Education said.

He then went on to mention difficulties which might face the teacher outside of actual teaching hours, and suggested to the teachers how they might solve such problems.

Study Clubs
"I may say that the people of this Province are now greatly interested in adult education and this is due to three or four main causes," the speaker continued. "First the establishment of a library in this Province by the Carnegie Institute. Second, the study clubs which have been inaugurated by the Department of Education in co-operation with the inspectors and teachers of the Province. Third, by the admirable radio talks and lectures given on this subject by Professor Croteau, Professor of Sociology and Economics in Prince of Wales College and St. Dunstan's University. Fourth, by the wonderful success that has attended a similar movement in the Province of Nova Scotia inaugurated by St. Francis Xavier University."

"A great many of these study clubs have been recently started in this Province and although it is very hard to estimate the number, we do know that a great deal of valuable work is being done to educate the adult population in various subjects. Now in closing I would like to say this, that the teachers are looked upon as leaders in their respective communities and I would ask you to get behind these study clubs, to join one of them if there is one in your community and if there is not one there already, organize one and make a success of it. All of these clubs need an educated person, a trained mind at their head in order to direct them along proper channels. If you get behind the movement, you will be doing something for yourselves, something for the district or community in which you live and this will all rebound to the welfare of our Province," the Minister concluded. In beginning his address he welcomed the teachers to the annual convention.

Group Choral Singing
The second feature on the morning's program was group choral singing by the pupils of Prince Street School under the direction of Miss Lillian MacKenzie, music instructor. Miss MacKenzie made a plea for more and better music in the public schools of the province. Folk songs are especially good for teaching in the schools, she said, and suggested that the teachers try and avoid all kinds of cheap popular songs.

The singing consisted of two parts, one by a group of junior boys and the other by a group of senior girls from grades seven to ten. "The British Grenadiers," "The Jolly Miller," "Billy Boy" and

Date For Budget Presentation Not Yet Known

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
OTTAWA, April 8.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King was unable to say when the budget would be brought down, he told the House of Commons today in reply to a question from Conservative Leader Bennett. He said a date would probably be set soon after the Easter recess.

Apart from a bill to enable the appointment of parliamentary under-secretaries all the important legislation the government intended to present this session was now before the House, said Mr. King. The bills on the order paper awaiting consideration are those relating to the Canadian National Railways, the Bank of Canada, copyright law and merging several departments of government.

"Shenandoah" were sung by the boys. Numbers by the girls included "Early One Morning," "All Through the Night," "The Sky Boat Song," "Where'er You Walk," "Jerusalem," "The Wind and the Leaves," "The Prayer," and "The Gypsy Chorus."

Markets Prepare For Four Day Adjournment

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
NEW YORK, April 8.—Important financial markets throughout the world began preparations today for one to four days closings in connection with Easter-holiday.

Throughout North America and abroad Good Friday is to be a universal holiday for leading exchanges and commodity futures markets including those in Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver, Winnipeg, New York, Chicago, New Orleans, Liverpool and Paris.

The New York Stock Exchange, Curb Exchange and Produce Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade are among those observing only a single holiday, reopening Saturday as usual.

Some of the North American markets which also will observe Saturday as a holiday include, at New York, the Cotton Exchange, Coffee and Sugar Exchange, Cocoa Exchange and Commodity Exchange.

A broad suspension of trading will generally last until Tuesday morning, although the Winnipeg Grain and Montreal silver and securities markets open Saturday while closing Monday.

Modern Setting For Christ's Sermon On The Mount

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
BERLIN, April 8.—Christ's sermon on the mount has been adapted to a modern German view by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller.

The main feature of the new version is elimination of all references to Jerusalem, King Solomon, Pharisees and Scribes, laws and prophets, and the 10 commandments as made in the gospel according to St. Matthew. These references were held to be Jewish, and therefore to be rejected.

The exhortation to turn the other cheek to a smiter is rendered by Reichsbishop Mueller thus:

"If thy comrade smite thee in the face in his wrath, it is not always right to smite him back. It is more manly to preserve a superior calm. Mayhap thy comrade will repent."

For Pharisees and Scribes, the Reichsbishop substituted "teachers and preachers; for the laws and prophets, 'divine truths.'"

Christ's blessings were altered, as, for example:

"Blessed is he who bears his sorrow manfully. He will find strength, not to despair."

"Blessed is he who keeps good comradeship always for such is the will of God."

Court Rules Against Hearst

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
WASHINGTON, April 8.—The United States Senate lobby committee scored a direct court victory over William Randolph Hearst today, and in simultaneous hearings disclosed a select group of wealthy industrialists contributing heavily to anti-new deal organizations.

Hardly waiting to hear the argument of the lobby committee's counsel, Chief Justice Wheat of the supreme court of the District of Columbia refused the publisher's plea for an injunction restraining the committee from examining telegrams passing between himself and his employees.

He upheld the committee's contention that, as a branch of the Senate, it was beyond the jurisdiction of the courts. Flatly he denied Hearst's allegation an abridgement of the constitutional right of freedom of the press was involved. Elisha Hanson, Hearst's counsel, announced he would appeal.
