

The Gem Captivating Caption Contest

Write a funny caption to go with the photo above. If your caption is selected as best by our judges, you will win the fine quality prized illustrated on the right and your caption will appear along with the photo in next week's edition of The Gem.

RULES: All students, Faculty and staff of UPEI except current members of The Gem are eligible to enter. You may submit as many different captions as you like. Previous winners are eligible to win again only after four issues of The Gem have passed. In the event that less than 3 persons respond by deadline time, no prize will be awarded and a different photo will appear next issue. If nearly identically worded entries are received and are judged to be the best, a random selection will determine the winner.

Prize: A finely crafted Sheaffer pen from Carter & Co. to help further your academic career. Retail value $14.00. Impress your Prof. and be the envy of your friends who still write with .59 cent Bic's.

Last weeks winning entry for the Creative Caption Contest came from Iain Galaway:

"The girls quickly realize they don't stand a chance. They haven't worked on their biceps enough..."

BioRhythms

Yule be sorry Dept

The 1987 Bio Club Christmas Party proved once again the Darwinian theory that man evolved from apes. The monkey business involved a high consumption of liquor, the exchange of disgusting gifts, and the chance to place requests early with Booby Clause. Thanks to everyone who came and made the party such a success. A special thanks to Nathalie, the brave hostess who was so generous as to let us relive Vietnam in the comfort of her home.

Search and research Dept

The Bio Club genuinely wishes to pay tribute to Dr. Louis Hanic for his diligent contribution to the mussel toxin problem in eastern PEI. Dr. Hanic has volunteered countless hours to researching the cause of the toxin and was actually the first person to determine it was diatoms. He showed us the true meaning of dedication to one's profession and set a good example for all Biology students.

Bioswear Dept

For anyone from another planet who hasn't realized the Bio Club has new T-shirts, they do. There are still a few available. See Doug. Bio Rugby Shirts should be here very soon (normal, not multi-colored).

Serious business Dept

It was a pleasure to see so many students take the National Week of action seriously. UPEI, it has been estimated, may be losing up to two million dollars a year in government funding with the present system of transfer payments. Any science student will tell you that this money could make a great difference in the quality of laboratory equipment and experimentation on this campus. Many faculties don't feel the pinch as much as the science faculty does because equipment becomes obsolete quickly in this high-tech era. If our university is to remain competitive with other universities in areas of science, we must have funding available to attract and promote research. Who knows? A cure for cancer could be found by a student from UPEI.

Public thanks Dept.

thanks to all who participated in any way in the highly successful and unforgettable 1987 Bio Club Pub Crawl. Thanks to the businesses, too numerous to mention here, who so magnanimously donated prizes to the event.

Shorts and briefs Dept
Congratulations to Pat and Paula Doyle on the birth of their new daughter Natalie Dawn (so where's our cigars Pat?)... The Biology Dept is planning a major fundraising drive next weekend to raise money for lab equipment. Canvassers will be going door to door looking for contributions of old sodium-potassium analyzers, spectrometers and even frogs... Honorary nominations for Bio Dept Chairman this year include David Suzuki, Tom MacMillan, Colin the Penguin and the California raisins... Marionettes, please wash your shirts... Mary Ellen C., did you have a good trip? See you next fall? (Boo, Hiss)... the saddest news of the winter is that Doug Kelly will be forced to miss the 1988 Winter Olympics in Calgary. He injured his leg in training for the ski jump event. Better luck in 1992... Don't forget to support the 1988 UPEI Winter Carnival, especially Saturday's Beach Party. "Come and get leied."
