Purified Blood

Saved an operation in the following case. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures when all others fail. It makes pure blood.

"A year ago my father, William Thompson, was taken suddenly ill with inflammation of the bladder. He suffered a great deal and was very low for some time. At last the doctor said he would not get well unless an operation was performed. At this time we read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try it. Before he used half a bottle his appetite had come back to him, whereas before he could eat but little. When he had taken three bottles of the medicine he was as well as ever." FRANCIS J. MARVELS OF SCIENCE

PHOTOGRAPHY ONE OF THE MOST PROGRESSIVE OF SCIENCES.

Some of the Remarkable Results That Have Been Achieved by Its Aid in Recent Years—Its Use in Warfare.

In no branch of science, perhaps, has greater progress been made during the past few years than in photography. The marvellously sensitive plates that are now employed are able to seize and retain impressions that bewilder the human eye with the rapidity of their changing, and as a result instantaneous photography has afforded us the means of gaining knowledge of what we were formerly completely ignorant of. Powerful lenses, too, have done not a little to advance the possibilities of photography, and the electric light has also helped. In fact almost all branches of science have contributed more or less to the advancement of the art. Some of the wonderful results that have been achieved in recent years are chronicled by William G. Fitzgerald in an interesting article in The Strand Magazine. One of the most remarkable cases he tells of shows the efficacy of Galton's finger method of identification, which has been grafted on to the Bertillon system for use in police departments. A packet of paper money was tampered with in transit between New York and New Orleans, two seals having been broken open and the bills extracted; one seal was afterwards re-fastened with thumb pressure. An expert to whom the package was submitted for examination had thumb impressions taken of all the Express Company's employees on that route. The impressions were then magnified by photography, and compared with the seal mark, when the delinquent

WAS EASILY DISCOVERED.

It seems hardly credible that the camera could be the means of saving a person's life, yet a case of this kind actually occurred in London some five years ago. A well known Oxford street photographer was sent for to photograph a woman in her coffin. Then the picture was developed one finger was said to be out of focus. "Now," argued the photographer, "if the body had slipped, the whole would be out of focus; therefore, I conclude that only the finger moved." He drove back in a cab with a doctor, and it was then found that the woman was not really dead, but

MERELY IN A SORT OF TRANCE.

This, says, Mr. Fitzgerald, is a fact. The camera, as every one knows, is one of the most indispensable articles in a war correspondent's outfit, and as the battlefield of the future will be comparatively smokeless, the correspondent will be enabled to make still greater use of photography. Mr. Melton Prior states that he can make a sketch in less time than he can take a photograph; yet the last time he was "on the warpath," Mr. Prior carried three cameras in his saddle-bags. Talking of war, it is interesting to note that photo-micrographic messages were, in 1870 and 1871, conveyed to and from beleagured Paris by means of pigeons. On a single film of collodion, weighing less than a grain, there were more than 3,000 despatches. Sixteen folio pages of printed matter, reduced to microscopic photographs, were secured to the tail feathers of one of these ornithological mesengers, each of whom could in this way carry a despatch of

A MILLION WORDS IF NECESSARY.

The expert in foreign stamps has in photography a powerful ally. The searching eye of the camera brings out the crude lines of bogus varieties, and even when the microscope itself fails to reveal a chemically obliterated postmark, the ghostly strokes appeal to the sensitive plate. Enlarged photographs of merchants' books have been passed by accountants, have been exhibited in court, and the breaking-up of the paper fibre caused by fraudulent erasure has been clearly shown. A curious use was found for photography at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, in Maryland. The principal instructor could not induce the students to remain still during gun practice; they would start violently and stop their ears. As a last resort the chief officer took a number of instantaneous photos, showing the cadets in "undignified and unwarlike" attitudes. These pictures were hung up in the academy and the young men forced themselves to keep still during gun fire, for fear of the camera. An interesting tale is told of the wonders of applied photography. An English gentleman had a big apple tree, of which he was inordinately fond, trained against his garden wall. Fearful of pruning it himself, however, he took a sharp photo., and sent it to an expert gardener at Hyeres—it might have been Timbuctoo. In due course the photo was returned, showing certain pencil marks through numerous branches. These the gentleman had lopped off by a "handyman," while he himself directed operations.

PHOTOGRAPH IN HAND.

Two eminent photographers were recently employed in an interesting manner by the Royal Commission on Agricultural Depression in England. These gentlemen toured through the Maldon Division of England, taking photographs of land and farms that had gone out of cultivation. They returned with quite a host of pictures, showing thistles growing in fields, and ruined farmhouses, which appealed to the commission far more powerfully than the most eloquent speech would have done. Certainly one of the most interesting marvels of photography is that the mysterious eye of the camera sees objects which are absolutely invisible to the human eye, the telescope or the microscope. An expert can take a sheet of paper prepared with gelatine and bichromate of potash, and can photograph on a secret letter, containing, it may be, treasonable matter. This done, he may sit down and write a garrulous letter about the crops, the weather and the baby's health. The recipient, of course, cares for none of these things, but wets the sheet with plain water, holds it up to the light, and literally reads between the lines. When dry the document defies detection, and it can be moistened and dried again as often as the recipient pleases.

A FUNNY STORY IS TOLD.

taken. All went well until the operator had developed the plate, and then it became evident that he was having a row with his assistant, whom he blamed for coating a dirty plate. After apologies, a second negative was taken, and then the operator fetched his master from downstairs. A third attempt was made, when sounds of a heated altercation were heard, followed by a scuffle.

The photographer, pale and excited, requested his fair sitter to withdraw, as there was electricity in the air which was unfavorable to photography. The lady insisted on taking away a negative showing the hideous insignia on her forehead. It is a fact that the photographer requested the vicar of his parish to say a few prayers in his studio, after the departure of his mysterious visitor.

PROMINENT PEOPLE.

Mr. Cleaveland's income is said to be between 90,000 and 100,000 a year.

Maurice Boucher has finished his translation into French of all the songs found in Shakespeare's words.

The death of Sir George Chesney, the author of "The Battle of Dorking," is the fourth death since December among the members of Parliament.

John Hunter, the famous anatomist, once said that the feminine love of conversation was in consequence of a peculiarity in brain tissue.

Prof. Rhys, the new principal of Jesus College, Oxford, is a Welshman born, to whom, in his youth, English was a foreign tongue.

James R. Garfield is a candidate for State Senator for the Mentor district, desiring to start his political life from the same place as did his father.

Charles D. Walcott, of the United States Geological Survey, has hand conferred upon him the Bigby medal of the Royal Geological Society of England.

Hiram X. Maxim, the inventor, says that New Englanders are the best mechanics in the world, and that the French are the best mechanics in Europe.

Mr. Charles Francis Adams, who was elected president of the Massachusetts Historical Society, represents the fourth generation of his family holding membership of that society.

The real name of the noted whist critic, "Pembridge," is John Petch Hewby. He is 60 years of age and his parents were stern Puritans, who never allowed a pack of cards to enter their house.

The Lord Chief Justice of England, at Liverpool assizes, said recently that he saw the diminution of drunkenness in Liverpool synchronized with the diminution in the number of public houses.

The Scriptures are to be published by the Protestant Episcopal Church in the classical Wenell language of China. The translating has been in charge of Bishop S. I. J. Schreshewsky.

The executors of the late Benjamin F. Butler have just sent to the Sinking Fund Commissioners of Virginia a bond for $34,000, which was "carried off" in war times, as the Commissioners put it.

Gen. Martinez Campos, who has been sent over from Spain to subdue the Cuban insurrection, is sixty-one years old. He has been an officer for nearly forty years and during half that time the first soldier of Spain.

Mrs. Nathaniel Collins is writing a book of her experiences of life in the camp and on the prairie. As the "Montana Cattle Queen" she has had adventures enough to make an interesting volume.

King Humbert can broil a steak, grid a chop and do plain cooking just as well as he can run with the machine, couple up hose or pump at a fire. Indeed, his majesty of Italy is a man of many talents.

In his lecture before the students of Harvard, Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the English actor, strongly urged the establishment of a national theatre as necessary to the highest development of dramatic art.

The new Spanish premier, Senor Canovas, is said to be the homeliest man and the most sarcastic orator in Madrid. The senor was the champion of the abolition of slavery in Spain and its dependencies.

A Genoese journal, the Caffaro, is authority for the statement that since the recent attack on his life Premier Crispi wears under his shirt a light but solid coat of mail of steel, of double thickness over the heart.

Mrs. Clio Hinton Huneker, who is to receive $10,000 for her Fremont statue which she was commissioned to execute by the "Associated Pioneers," of California, is said to be only twenty-four years old. She is a pupil of St. Gaudens.

Wade Hampton is not particularly gallant, judged by his expressions. He declares that women and horses "are just alike and require the same treatment. There's only one way to get along with them. Use your strongest curbs on the fast ones and lash the slow ones like the devil."

John Blondelle Burton, the English novelist, stands six feet four inches and looks more like a big life guardsman than a writer of romance. He has travelled widely and his first newspaper work was done in Baltimore. He married the daughter of a Philadelphian.

The widow of the famous Bohemian composer Smetana intends to visit Vienna on the occasion of the performance of his opera, "The Secret," as she has never head one of his operas in German. She says that Smetana was absolutely deaf when he wrote that opera and "The Kiss," Beethoven was deaf the last 25 years of his life, during which he wrote his best works.

Dr. Charles A. Phelps, of New York, is again to the fore among his brethren because of a wonderful operation he has recently performed in tying one hundred and twenty varicose veins in a patient with entire success and relief. The police rules utterly exclude a patrolman candidate who has even a tendency to varicose veins, because the legs of a patrolman are called upon to withstand much pedestrian fatigue, and Dr. Phelps has, of course, had great experience in what is known at hospitals as the V. V. specialty. Dr. Phelps was the surgeon whom James Gordon Bennett took to the dueling ground when he had a hostile meeting with Frederick May. And when summoned before the Grand Jury to testify against Mr. Bennett for "leaving the State with intent to fight a duel," he successfully pleaded professional privilege for silence, and was sustained therein by Judge Charles Donohue.

Experience Has Proved It

A triumph in medicine was achieved when experience proved that Scott's Emulsion would not only stop the progess of Pulmonary Consumption, but by its continued use, health and vigor could be fully estored.

McKinnon's English Ointment.

MR. NEIL MCKINNON,—

Dear Sir,—For five years I was a sufferer from eczema. Physicians could not help me. At last I bought a box of your Ointment, which helped me wonderfully, while two boxes made a complete cure. I can recommend it to all others similarly afflicted.
