Harness Racing Opens At Toronto

DUFFERIN PARK, Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP)—Toronto's 1950-51 harness racing season got away to a successful start at Dufferin Park today, when a good crowd turned out to witness 10 events.

Hal Pointer, from the stable of A. Blondeau of Quebec City and driven by G. Giguere, won the 6 1-2-furlong dash of the classified pace in the first event. Doc Frisco, owned by L. Slater of Rochester, N. Y., and driven by J. Hodgins, won the second division.

Hal Pointer stood best in the summary by finishing 1-2 to the 6-1 for Doc Frisco.

The winner of the second race turned out to be an old favorite at Dufferin, Iroquois Trail, finishing 5-1. In the second spot was Mat McKinney, who finished 1-6. In the third event, Daytime from the Frank Plaunt stable of Brantford, Ont., was the victor.

Says Reds Lack Sportsmanship In Chess Play

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 — (AP)—The Russians now are charged with lack of sportsmanship at chess.

Dr. Edward Lasker, president of the Association of American Chess Masters, says of chess tournament play:

"In Communist countries the open practice of analyzing adjourned positions (that is, games on which a recess has been called)

Table with 4 columns: Team, Navy "B", Sigs. Regt "A", Navy "A", R.C.M.P., Sigs. Regt "B", 28 L.A.A. Regt "A", 28 L.A.A. Regt "B".

Two men were killed at a Guelph, Ont., street corner when they were changing a tire. Fred Bard, with others, unless adopted because somebody else is doing the same thing, seems to indicate a curious perversion of the most fundamental concept of sportsmanship by introducing the idea of mass co-operation into a contest between two individuals."

He goes on to cite an instance in which a Russian apparently got help from friends during a recess.

No object lesson of current Russian practice is available because the Russians are not taking part in the Grand Masters' tournament being held in Amsterdam. In "The Adventure of Chess," to be published Wednesday (Doubleday), Dr. Lasker scorns the "increasing laxity of chess morals" generally. Another evidence of this, he says, is the habit of paired tournament players to agree to a draw if it does not affect their own standing, regardless of the effect of their action on other players.

While world champion Mikhail Botvinnik of Russia unquestionably deserved his crown because of superiority in tournament play, says Dr. Lasker, the United States master, Samuel Reshevsky, might beat him in match play.

Dr. Lasker's chief concern, however, is not with criticism, but with chess anecdotes and sidelights. Ever wonder how a chess master can play "blindfolded" against one or more opponents?

"The most important faculty is a clear visualization of the geometric relations of the squares of the board," comments Dr. Lasker, a blindfold player himself. "One never sees the whole board clearly. Rarely more than eight or nine squares appear to be 'focused.' The rest of the board seems blurred and can be seen clearly only by shifting one's 'vision' to the desired area... the black and white pieces, and also the squares, all look gray in the mind's eye, distinguished only by a faint contrast in shade.

"In Russia blindfold exhibitions are altogether prohibited, on the same grounds as the use of drugs. Both are considered inimical to health."

INGLEWOOD, Calif., Nov. 16 — (CP) — Prospects of renewed rivalry between Noor and Hill Prince in the $35,000 Thanksgiving Day Handicap at Hollywood Park were ended today when Noor was declared out of the race. Trainer Burley Parke indicated he is saving Irish-bred Noor for the $100,000 Gold Cup at Hollywood on Dec. 9.

Editor Suggests Anti-Communist Political Offensive

By J. M. Roberts, Jr. Associated Press News Analyst Kenneth De Courcy, editor of the British "Intelligence Digest" who either scooped President Truman or had a premature story on Russian development of the atom bomb, says the third world war has already started.

De Courcy spoke the other day before the National Press Club in Washington. His thesis is interesting even if not authoritative. De Courcy's position in British journalism is about the same as that of some of the better known hit and miss columnists in the United States. He specializes in reports from behind the iron curtain.

You can play around with this thesis as you wish. You can say that one-third of the world has been conducting an industrial revolution for 200 years, and that it is now causing an economic and political revolution in the two-thirds which hasn't benefited much.

You can say that it is all a continuation of the First World War. There is good reason, however, for the contention that a third world war will not really be under way until Russia and the United States start shooting at each other, which a lot of folks don't think will happen during the 15 or 20 years which it is believed it will take Russia to develop an industrial basis for war which will be even as strong as Hitler's was in 1939.

There is less reason to hope that the present series of armed skirmishes will not continue and become an informal prelude if not an actual part of a third world war, just as Ethiopia, Manchuria, Austria, Czechoslovakia and Spain were connected with the Second World War.

De Courcy plays with an idea which has more meat to it when he suggests that it is time for the anti-Communist countries to launch a political offensive. He suggests leadership and material aid for the masses behind the iron curtain which hate the Communists and which contain the elements of revolt.

He likes the chances of overthrow of the Communist hierarchy from within by intensive political warfare. He apparently would conduct the same sort of campaign behind the iron curtain that the Communist fifth columns conduct on this side.

If that fails, the British writer asks, should not war be carried to Russia "while we have the power." He says it wouldn't be a preventive war, because war already is here.

This is the argument of many Americans too, some of whom think the West's great mistake was its failure to march on Czechoslovakia was raped nearly three years ago.

For the moment it is sufficient to reply, aside from any moral grounds, that the West hasn't the strength, as witness its troubles in Korea, and that it didn't have it in March, 1948. Also, that resort to war would mean the collapse of every effort which the West has made for five years to avoid it.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16 — (AP)—Ten classy two-year-olds are entered in tomorrow's Pimlico Futurity. While a scratch or two is not unexpected, jockey cries of "move over" still will be heard among the good-sized field of young thoroughbreds. If all go, the winner will collect $46,000.
