

Age.

Age is more a matter of feeling than of years. Illness makes one feel and look old before one's time. The elastic step, steady nerve, bright and cheery appearance of the constant user of Abbey's Effervescent Salt proves that perfect health is the true criterion of age.

A KNOWING ONE.

"There's nothing like 'em—I say there's nothing like 'em," said Harry (who has a trick of interrupting and repeating himself), putting down the paper.

"Like what?" said Donald.

"Nothing can touch 'em—I say, nothing can touch 'em."

"What are you talking about?"

"I know—I say, I know what I am talking about all right."

"It's more'n I do," said Donald.

"Nobody knows better—I say, nobody knows better about 'em than I do."

"I wouldn't doubt it," said Donald.

"Not for the world, but what the deuce are you talking about?"

"About Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets—I say I'm talking about Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets."

"What about Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets?"

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are the finest medicine for the digestive organs that was ever invented—I say Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are the finest ever invented."

"What are Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets?"

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets? Don't you know what Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are? I thought everybody knew Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets—I say I thought everybody knew about Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets."

"What are they good for?" asked Donald.

"Why, Dyspepsia; what do you suppose—I say what do you suppose Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets would be good for?"

"Is that all you know about them?"

"That's just about enough for me—I say that's just about enough."

"What are they made of?" asked Donald.

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets? Blessed if I know—I say I'm blessed if I know what they are made of."

"You're a lobster," said Donald.

We may say here that Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are composed principally of Pepsin and Diastase, the two great natural digestants, mixed with sugar.

Sometimes the most careful women are the most careless. Many a woman bundles herself up, to keep out sickness—when she is neglecting the very worst sickness that can come to a woman. She allows a slight disorder to become worse, to slowly tap her vitality. The little pain and the other slight indications of trouble seem to her unimportant. She goes on, with increasing suffering, until life itself becomes a drag. Nervousness, sinking spells, digestive disturbances, and fifty other complications may arise from the derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. Over thirty years ago, the need for a reliable remedy for so-called female complaint was recognized by Dr. R. V. Pierce, then, as now, chief consulting physician to the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y. He prepared Dr. Pierce's favorite prescription, the most wonderfully effective remedy that has ever been used for such maladies.

LETTERS FROM BOSTON.

Are Always Literary, but Some People Don't Appreciate Them.

Little Willie was trying to make it pleasant for Mr. Murkleton while Miss Gildersley was up stairs "getting ready." Mr. Murkleton was to take her to the opera, and that of course meant a large number of "last touches" for her and her mother and the maid.

"We got some relations livin in Boston," Willie said, probably because he couldn't think of anything else that would serve as a starter.

"Have you?" Mr. Murkleton asked, pretending to be immensely interested.

"Yes. Sister Sue was down there visitin them last summer."

"She was telling me about it the other day. Had a very pleasant time, did she not?"

"I guess so, but she's purty sorry she went."

"Why?"

"Cause our cousins down there keep writin to her every little while now. You ought to see how mad she gets every time a letter comes from one of them."

"Oh, I guess you must be mistaken about that, Willie. Why should she get angry when they write to her?"

"You see, she has to take a whole day lookin through the dictionary whenever she answers one of their letters, and, my, but it makes her sweat!"—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Man Behind the Mule.

A rural correspondent, who says he wants the poets to "tote fair," sends us the following classic stanzas to the man behind the mule—a fellow entirely overlooked by Mr. Markham:

They've been an gone an wrote enough,

As all the world does know,

About the man who works the lan'—

The man who sings the hoe,

But what I wants 'em all to do

Is change the writin rule

An tell us 'bout that other man—

The man behin' the mule.

He breaks the Lord's commandment,

Likewise the golden rule;

He cannot be a Christian

For cussin of the mule.

For all the Lord created

To turn a human fool

Thar's nothin that kin ever hold

A candle to the mule!

For ef he's loatin' round' or tied,

Rigged up in harness fine,

The mule is never satisfied—

He's kickin all the time!

An the man that has the wisdom

Which all the world could rule

Is that patient, plodin feller—

The man behind the mule!

—Atlanta Constitution.

Seemed Quite Probable.

"Sold my story, old man," exclaimed the writer joyfully.

"Well, do you know, I thought from an item I saw in the paper that very likely you had been successful," returned the cynic. "When did you sell it?"

"Last Monday."

"Just as I thought. According to the paper a magazine editor was committed to an asylum for the feeble minded Tuesday."—Chicago Post.

A Severe Summary.

"It's wonderful," said the man with the solemn air of erudition, "what a difference a slight matter will make in the world's estimate of a man."

"It isn't so in literature," was the answer. "A man must have merit there!"

"Not necessarily. If he get his spelling wrong, that's plain ignorance, but if he gets his facts and logic all twisted, that's originality."—Washington Star.
