

"Jim's my favourite Easter Bunny!"

HE ALWAYS SENDS ME

Flowers

Breathes there a woman who isn't flattered when her practical man goes romantic and sends flowers?

Jim tells me that I'm his best girl by sending flowers for Easter... and sometimes he sends them for apparently no reason at all... and what a thrill that is.

Everyone loves flowers: This Easter, send a gift of lovely, dewy-fragrant flowers to your best friends and relations... you'll see what I mean!

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. JAMES J. MORRISSEY

The death occurred suddenly in the City Hospital, Tuesday, March 7th, 1950 of Mrs. James J. Morrissy of Orwell Cove in her seventy-third year.

The deceased, nee Mary Acorn, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Acorn, Millview. Mrs. Morrissy's passing will be keenly felt by her many friends and neighbors but especially by her family who are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother.

The remains were removed to her late residence where a large number of friends came to pay their last tribute of respect to one who was a friend to all.

The funeral which was largely attended was held Thursday, March 9th to St. Joachim's Church, Vernon River, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Gillis. Service at the grave was conducted by Rev. Fr. McCarthy, Iona. The choir was under the direction of Rev. Fr. Gallant.

She leaves to mourn three sons: Joseph F. Earncliffe; John E. Cherry Valley; William E. at home, and one daughter, Ellen. Mrs. William E. Walsh, Summerville; also the following brothers and sisters: William and Joseph of Millview; John in British Columbia; Mrs. Daniel Paquette and Mrs. Andrew Morrissy, Charlottetown; Mrs. Joseph Power, Mermaid, and Mrs. Anthony Beagan, Johnson's River. Her husband predeceased her six years ago.

The pallbearers were: — Newman MacDonald, Faber Dreelan, Walter MacLeod, Thomas Morrison, Peter McKenna and Charles MacDonald.

In keeping with the "natural approach," babies are fed on demand rather than according to an arbitrary schedule. Many doctors now concede there is strong relationship between natural feeding and an infant's emotional development.

Most of the time, junior is right next to his mother's bed in a transparent, bed-high table basin. The basin slides on runners to facilitate diaper changing and bathing, operations which are performed by the mother rather than in a "dormitory" type nursery.

There is also a sound-proof "banishment chamber" in which the baby can test his lungs without disturbing anybody. "Rooming in" is a break for fathers, too. No longer need he wait in the corridor for a momentary peek at his child through the plate glass of a nursery window. In the new-style units, he washes his hands, dons a sterile gown, and takes his place at the head of the family during visiting hours in the temporary glass house.

In praise of the new theory, Dr. Philip A. Reynolds, a noted Los Angeles obstetrician, reported to the California Medical Association: "Under former routines, the mother of a first-born baby... leaves the hospital without acquiring any of the skills and experiences needed for its care at home, and without having become accustomed to the physical and emotional reaction of her baby. In rooming-in she becomes well-acquainted... with a multitude of things so easily taken for granted by nurse and physician, but which to her are tremendous mental hazards. The transition from hospital to home is easy."

AT HOME IN THE HOSPITAL: Mrs. Jean Norton shares her bed with junior when she slides over the table-top basin in the "rooming in" unit at Franklin Hospital, San Francisco.

Hospitals Copy Idea from Grandma's Day; Mothers and New Babies Now 'Rooming In'

By NEA Service
San Francisco — (NEA) — Maternity care is taking a step back to grandma's day, when babies were born at home and shared life with mother almost from birth. The difference is that the hospital is replacing the home with "rooming-in" units in which mother and child share the same quarters throughout the confinement period after the first 24 hours. This return to old-fashioned theory actually represents one of the newest practices in obstetrical care and is beginning to gain acceptance across the nation. It is typified at Franklin Hospital in San Francisco, where the fifth "rooming-in" unit in the U.S., just opened, is attracting the interest of many other West Coast hospitals. Far more scientific than home methods, the new unit is a streamlined ward decorated in pinks and blues and partitioned off into glass cubicles. A nurse at her desk in the center of the ward is able to observe each mother and child at all times.
