

Labor Delegates Cheer Economic Policy For Party

By ED SIMON
 Canadian Press Staff Writer
 SCARBOROUGH, Eng. (CP) — The Labor Party's annual conference rose and roared its applause Wednesday as party leader Hugh Gaitskell asked support for an economic policy based on "freedom, security and equality."
 The policy statement, introduced by Harold Wilson, Labor's shadow chancellor of the exchequer, gave first priority to full employment and increased productivity. But it dealt with a wide variety of additional aims.
 Wilson was cheered as he accused the Conservative government of making a "deliberate decision" to restrict industrial production and to "get tough" with the trade unions in wage negotiations. His policies made a slump inevitable.
 Old-line socialists joined in the applause as the shadow chancellor added:

 "Whenever Tory freedom gets itself into a crisis, they cut back nationalized industries and local authorities to compensate for the shortcomings of private industry."
 Criticizing the government's handling of negotiations at the Commonwealth economic conference in Montreal, Wilson said measures are needed to strengthen the Commonwealth and the sterling area. "and you don't do that with a few tins of salmon."
 He added that "powerful elements of the Tory party, even including the prime minister," have threatened to bring the strength of sterling into election manoeuvres. Already there was talk of "a flight from the Socialist pound." Such talk was not only anti-British but "repellent to any true democrat."
EXTEND COLOMBO PLAN
 Among proposals for strengthening Commonwealth development was an extension of the Colombo Plan to include Africa and the West Indies. Wilson also said a Labor administration would seek to increase trade with Russia and Communist China.
 In the general debate, powerful trade union leaders such as Frank Cousins of the transport workers and Allan Birch of the shopworkers expressed unqualified support of the policy statement. Other delegates differed mainly in the order of priority to be assigned to the planks of the economic platform.
 Gaitskell said Labor will fight any measure to abolish restrictions on movements of foreign exchange. The money that might disappear from the country was needed for investment in Britain.

Stress Safety At Roads Ass'n. Convention

MONTRÉAL (CP)—Safety campaigns and techniques were stressed Wednesday at the second session of the Canadian good roads association annual meeting.
 A Quebec provincial policeman told delegates the best-built and scenically perfect highways are still dangerous when cluttered with careless drivers.
 A Quebec delegate said safety campaigns and educational programs apparently are paying off in this province in decreased numbers of accidents. There are statistics to back up this claim, said J. L. Dyotte, director of the Montreal office of the provincial transport department.

Police Lieutenant Arthur Barre, of the provincial police traffic department, said the highway's biggest menace is still the drunken driver.
 Mr. Dyotte said his department has been "concerned about driver education for several years, not only in preparing school children for driving safety but in teaching adults to understand that strict observance of the law will reduce the number of tragic accidents that happen almost daily."
 Meanwhile, delegates also continued technical talks.
