Tapped Trio As Rescue Effort Delayed

Broken by the Shaft Stops Drilling Rig

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP)—"We're doing everything we can think of to keep warm." One of three trapped miners reported Wednesday night as drilling of a new escape hole was held up by a broken drive shaft on the giant drilling rig.

"We're very cold," said David Fells, 38, "and Hank's hands are beginning to swell."
Hank is Henry Thorne, 20, who has been trapped 331 feet underground in a small passageway with Fells since Tuesday of last week.

The third man is Louis Bova, 42, separated from them by debris. His fate remains uncertain, with no reports about him since late Tuesday night. Even these reports— from Fells and Thorne— have been questioned by some mine experts in the rescue party.

Drilling of the first escape hole was called off Tuesday night at the 195-foot depth when Thorne and Fells reported the ceiling above them was cracking and they feared another collapse.

The new escape hole was started Wednesday morning. By mid-afternoon the drill on Sunday reached 162 feet. Then the giant rig, a training in the capacity to drill 100 feet a day, was moved to a halt. As a hull fell over the area, mechanics sought the trouble and found it in the drive shaft.

Repairs were expected to take five or six hours. The rig was closed during drilling as a precaution against dust and debris entering—and some hot food and more blankets were taken down the six-inch diameter shaft.

A six-inch lifeline hole—supplied by the rescue party—last Sunday after the men had been all but given up for dead—is the only lifeline to the rescue party. Thorne and Fells have with the outside world. Through it come supplies and, even, at their request, small tools to help them dig in the rubble. By Wednesday afternoon Fells and Thorne reported they had dug a small opening about 11 feet long in Bova's direction, already through debris. It was being cranked chamber.

They have said Bova is farther down the mine shaft, already through debris.

JFK REPORTS

U.S. Arms Can Kill 100 Million in Hour

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States has a nuclear stockpile capable of killing 300,000,000 people in one hour, President Kennedy says.

He reiterated the point at his press conference Tuesday when asked to comment on the arguments of physicist Dr. Edward Teller that more atmospheric tests are necessary to ensure U.S. defence capabilities.

Kennedy said that good many other scientists with comparable experience thought that the recent partial test ban treaty was "a source of strength" for the U.S.

"How many weapons do you need and how many megatons do you need to destroy," he asked.

He noted that he had said earlier that "what we now have on hand without further testing will kill 300,000,000 people in one hour. . . . And I suppose they (the scientists) can even improve on that if it's necessary."

Pentagon's Top Scientist Disagrees With Ban Fears

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon's top military scientist disagrees with just about every major objection raised against the limited nuclear test-ban treaty by Dr. Edward Teller and some U.S. Air Force generals.

Dr. Harold Brown, defence director of research and engineering, told a Senate hearing Wednesday that most objections raised have nothing to do with nuclear testing. And he gave these views:

1. "I feel rather strongly that the Russians are not ahead of the United States in developing a missile killer."
2. "The treaty will not seriously hamper the development of an anti-missile system, but will slow it down."
3. "Teller, who played a major part in developing the hydrogen bomb, is wrong in saying Soviet Premier Khrushchev wants the test ban now—after previously rejecting it because of knowledge gained in the recent Russian series of high-yield atmospheric tests."
4. "I know that we have had more effective nuclear tests than the Soviet Union."
5. "He is confident that the U.S. has been spending more money on its nuclear developments than the Russians."
6. "Even if the Russians cheat to the maximum extent possible without detection it will appear not to be worth the effort involved in the near future we may never become attractive to the low yields that would have to be used."
7. "He backs President Kennedy's denial of Teller's charge that political-fear of public distaste for testing—reduction in the number of U.S. atmospheric tests in 1961 and 1962. Brown said it was simply the pressure of "good management" to make useful tests and "I helped to exert it."

Attendance At Aberton Caled Record For Show

By FRANK WEEMS
ALBERTON. The 37th Prince County Exhibition at Aberton was officially opened yesterday afternoon by His Honor Lt. Col. W.J. MacDonald,

His Mayor Roy Leard said he was proud to welcome to the town this exhibition which is among the oldest ones in the Maritimes. He noted that the Exhibition Association has had only three presidents which, he suggested, shows the calibre of the men who have given leadership to the show.

Hon. A.B. MacRae, minister of agriculture, stated that it was a pleasure to witness such excellent livestock exhibits. He judged the cattle to be in top shape, giving evidence of careful preparation for the show. He also commented on the fine condition of the tobacco crop in this area. This is an indication, he said, that the people of this part of the province can

Canadians Will Move Up To Iron Curtain

By DAVE MCINTOSH
OTTAWA (CP)—The 6,500-man Canadian Infantry Brigade in West Germany will shift its operational area some 75 miles eastward until it is up against the Iron Curtain.

Gen. Geoffrey Walsh, chief of the general staff, left Ottawa Tuesday to emphasize that there are vast areas in Latin America where there is no question of abandoning the present camp and building new ones nearer the Iron Curtain. Costs would be too great.

But the eastward deployment would mean troops would be living there for longer periods and the supply problem would be more difficult. The main ground forces in Latin America are the 5th Canadian Brigade at Sotchi, about 25 miles from the East German border.

Leaders Differ

However, one congress source said privately that those were differences in the leadership about the wisdom of stepping into the face of improving Anglican-Roman Catholic relations.

He said that some church leaders are aware of needs in Latin America since some of the missionaries groups, particularly in the area of Matanzas, are working to help them rather than against them.
