Johnson Says Change Holding Up Agreement

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson says the change of government in Quebec is what has held up the signing of an agreement over the development of the projected Churchill Falls hydro-electric project in Labrador.

Speaking to reporters shortly before a cabinet meeting Tuesday, Mr. Johnson said agreement on the project between Quebec and the British Newfoundland Corp. had been arrived at but that the change in government in Quebec June 5 had blocked the signing.

"It (the contract) was to all intents and purposes negotiated and apparently accepted by (former premier) Jean Lesage. I have the impression that if the election had been held a week later, the agreement would have been signed," Mr. Johnson said.

Asked whether his government's refusal to recognize Labrador as belonging to Newfoundland was what was holding up the agreement, the premier replied: "There are first of all other problems, other clauses to be settled."

ASKED ABOUT LABRADOR

Mr. Johnson was asked whether he still believed in the opinion he had expressed last year in the legislature to the effect that any agreement signed with Newfoundland should be used to settle the question of Labrador's boundary.

His reply was: "Surely. To the extent where these agreements affect frontiers. That is to say, as they touch or do not touch on the frontiers."

He was reminded of a statement made by Hydro-Quebec officials several weeks ago in which it was said that if no decision were made about the Brinco project before Sept. 1, Quebec, to meet 1971-72 electricity needs, would have to start construction of her own $200,000,000 Manicouagan power project.

The officials said that this $200,000,000 expenditure would be a burden on the province because construction of Manicouagan was not to have begun until 1969 as Quebec had intended to use power from Churchill Falls to help fill her electricity needs.

Mr. Johnson said of this statement that "until there is proof to the contrary, we must believe Hydro."

Asked whether this would force a rapid signing of an agreement, Mr. Johnson sidestepped the question, saying "that's a good question."

He added that a committee is studying the Brinco situation and that the matter will be studied later by the cabinet. He did not say when the cabinet would look into the matter.

Israel Planning Austerity Moves

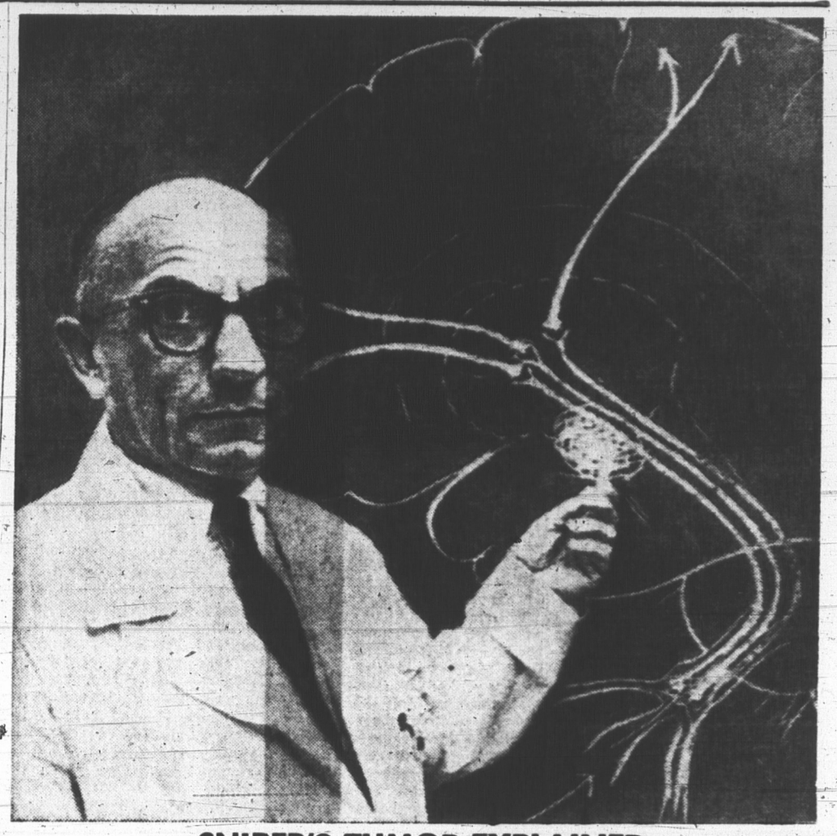
JERUSALEM (Reuters) — The Israeli government is putting the final touches to economic austerity measures which observers said appear to be based on Britain's economic program.

The Israeli plan envisages a wage freeze as well as the freezing of prices and profits for a definite period, Israeli newspapers say.

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir has repeatedly said in recent weeks that Israel must slice its foreign-trade deficit. His program calls for additional incentives for export industries.

Sapir recently warned industrial firms they would have to close down unless they became competitive in world markets.

Israel's new economic measures have already rocked the coalition government in which some of the partners, such as the left - wing Mapam, are sharply opposed to the new plan, especially a wage freeze.



SNIPER'S TUMOR EXPLAINED

Whitman, shows location of the small brain tumor close to the brain stem which he found present in Whitman's brain. Clothing Manufactures Catering To Young Men

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's fashion - conscious young men are being catered to as never before by clothing manufacturers, and it's mainly because of $350,000,000.

That's the estimated spending power of Canadian males between the ages of 12 and 25, and it's growing rapidly.

"The young, male adult market is new, exciting, provocative, affluent and influential, but one that's comparatively untapped," says one market researcher.

Jeff Black, a buyer for Morgan's department stores, says the new look in men's clothes is the most important fashion event in decades.

"It's having a great impact on the men's wear industry—and perhaps it had to be," he says. "For many years there wasn't a bridge between boy's and men's clothes."

ADOPT OWN LOOK

Today's so - called young adults won't accept cut-down versions of adult fashions and have adopted their own new, bold look, some which are wild.

While some manufacturers are reluctant to step out of the traditional clothing market, others have identified themselves with the new young market.

One such company is Monarch Wear of Canada Ltd., a Winnipeg company which aims most of the production from its five factories at the 12- to 25-year-old group.

President Julius Berkowitz says that in digging for facts on the young-adult market, the company found that they are in the unusual economic position of having almost all their income disposable.

"For the first time in history, it's not necessary for him to work and contribute to the family budget. The money the young adult male has is his to spend.

"We also found that parents play a shrinking role in young adult clothing purchases."

HIP-HUGGING SLACKS

As a result of their findings, Monarch plunged into the market and turned out such sartorially splended outfits as hip-hugging slacks cut five inches lower in the waist than conventional slacks and one with three - inch - wide belts; casual pants so tight you have to cut your toenails to get into them.

And Monarch's latest idea seems about as far-out as clothes can go.

The company makes a two-piece outfit from what it calls Tee Kay Krazy cloth. When purchased, a packet of chemical is included in the price. By dissolving the chemical in hot water and painting it on the outfit, the wearer can decorate the clothes with designs and slogans of his own choice.

Father Of Sniper Calls It 'Horrible'

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP)— The father of Charles Joseph Whitman said Tuesday "My son has committed a crime that is a great horror to the whole world.

"He just snapped."

C. A. Whitman, a prosperous plumbing contractor, said he believes his son was under tremendous pressure before killing his wife and mother and pouring fatal bullets into 13 more persons from the observation section of the University of Texas tower in Austin Monday.

"He had pushed himself tremendously in the last few months to do what was almost impossible," Whitman told a press conference in the front yard of his one-story frame home.

Whitman said he feels great sympathy for the friends and relatives of the victims. But, right now, he said, he does not know what he could do for them.

"This thing is just too big," he said.

BREAKING POINT

Whitman said his son pushed himself to the breaking point "trying to make a point," but he added he was unable to put into words what the son was trying to prove by pushing himself to get good grades and hold down a job at the university.

"I talked to him on the phone for 30 minutes just two and a half weeks ago and I told him he was working too hard."

At that time, he said, there was no indication his son was depressed.

Whitman said he taught his son about guns at an early age.

"I'm a fanatic about guns," Whitman said. "I'm a great hunter. My boys know about guns. I believe in that."

Charles, he said, was the best hunter in the family.

Military Buildup Seen Along Line

NEW DELHI (AP) — An ominous buildup of Pakistani military forces is taking place along the Kashmir ceasefire line where Pakistan and India went to war last September, official Indian sources claim.

"The buildup is of an aggressive nature," one source said.

Pakistani forces in that sector of Kashmir state occupied by Pakistan now are approximately double what they were at time of the outbreak of hostilities last fall, he reported.
