

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN

Year-old girl who presumably has brains enough to know what she wants? You admit the college of her choice is a good one, so why not let her go there? You are, I think, being unreasonable.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am married for the second time, and my husband is always arguing about money. I have a fair-sized estate and he's always inquiring about my income and asking me for money. He says I should ask someone what a wife's duties are. Just what are they?

ANSWER: It is not a wife's duty to support an able-bodied husband, if that's what your man is hinting. He is, of course, entitled to know what your estate is, and perhaps help you in administering it, should he be more capable along these lines than you—which I doubt.
