Griffin - Thacker Wedding In Victoria, B. C.

Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Willard Griffin are driving to California for their honeymoon following their wedding April 27, at St. John's Church, Victoria, B.C. Rev. Canon George Biddle officiated at the ceremony uniting in marriage Marjorie Irene, daughter of Mrs. A. Thacker, Charlottetown, P.E.I., and the late Mr. Thacker, and the youngest son of Mrs. M. Griffin of Quailcum Beach, V.I., and the late Mr. F. Griffin.

Mr. Frederick Chubb presided at the organ console and Mr. James Griffin, brother of the groom, sang "The Lord's Prayer" while the couple signed the register. The bride, given in marriage by Mr. Willard E. Ireland, was lovely in a gown of satin brocade, fashioned with net yoke, lily point sleeves and full skirt over pantaloons. Her veil of filmy net had true lovers' knots in the corners, and was caught to the head by a beaded coronet and blowed to the floor. She wore her mother's pearls and carried a cascade bouquet of Talsman and white roses with lily of the valley.

At the altar there were white and blue iris, yellow daffodil, and white narcissus. The pews were marked with white paper dollies. Gifts were presented her from the Women's Institute Office and the Department of Agriculture staff. Miss Marion Pelling, the bride's only attendant, was gowned in teal blue satin with bolero jacket and overskirt of matching net.

Better English

1. What is wrong with this sentence: "He had a bad cold." 2. What is the correct pronunciation of "reconnoiter"? 3. Which one of these words is misspelled? Chargeable, chartreuse, charlatan, charitable. 4. What does the word "titillation" mean? 5. What is a word beginning with ar that means "difficult; laborious"?

ANSWERS

1. It is better to say, "He had a severe cold." All colds are bad, but not all colds are severe. 2. Pronounce rek-on-noi-ter, first e as in wreck, o as in on, accent third syllable. 3. Chargeable. 4. Any spelling sensation, especially one that is pleasurable. "These titillations leave no lasting effect." 5. Arduous.

Morning Smile

Peace or Else "Your husband must have absolute quiet. Here is a sleeping draught."

"How often do I give it to him?" "You don't give it to him; you take it yourself."

Sore Point

A curious little man sat next to an elderly, prosperous-looking man in a smoking car. "How many people work in your office?" he asked. The elderly man, getting up and throwing away his cigar, "I should say, at a rough guess, about two-thirds of them."

C.W.L. Afternoon Tea

A very enjoyable afternoon tea sponsored by the Charlottetown sub-division, C.W.L., was held at the lovely home of Mrs. Lorne Noonan, president, on Tuesday afternoon.

Assisting Mrs. Noonan, receiving, was Mrs. P. J. Nealis, first vice-president, and ushering the guests were Mrs. Ernest McTague and Mrs. Maurice Griffin. The table was artistically decorated in the colors of the League, the centre being blue carnations and gold daffodils with blue and gold tapers. The tea cups were presided over by Mrs. Parnell McMahon, Mrs. R. J. MacDonald, Mrs. J. L. McQuigun and Mrs. F. J. Steele.

Assisting in serving were Mrs. Peter LeClair, Mrs. James Mullin, Mrs. Joseph Costello, Mrs. D. E. Gallant, Miss Evangeline Vessie, Mrs. Frank Walker, Mrs. A. T. McKinnon, Mrs. Arthur Murray and Miss Gertrude Coady. Replenishing were Mrs. C. L. MacDonald, Mrs. Catherine Creamer, Mrs. John Pollard and Mrs. William Cullen.

Reception At Opening Of K. Of C. Hall

Bouquets of spring flowers were arranged throughout the rooms of the Knights of Columbus Hall for its official opening on Thursday evening. Following the reception and program, tea was served the guests and their wives.

White and pink carnations were used as the table centerpiece with lighted tapers in silver candelabras placed on either side. Mrs. W. J. P. MacMillan and Mrs. Judge J. S. DesRoches poured tea for the first hour, while Mrs. J. Russell St. John and Mrs. J. A. MacMillan poured tea for the second hour. Mrs. J. F. MacMillan and Mrs. P. J. Ready ushered. Those serving were: Mrs. Leo F. MacDonald, Mrs. J. Emmett MacDonald, Mrs. Lorne Noonan, Mrs. Leonard MacDonald, Mrs. Eugene Kelly, Mrs. George Cheverie, Mrs. J. Rourke, Mrs. Allison MacDon-with bandeau of pale yellow carnations, white snapdragons and lily of the valley. The best man was Mr. William Charters, Jr., nephew of the groom, and ushers were Mr. Eric Griffin, brother of the groom, and Mr. James Mitchell. The reception was held at the home of Mrs. Leslie Pelling, 1554 Gladstone Avenue, where Mrs. Griffin and Mrs. Pelling welcomed the guests with the newlyweds. The table, covered with a Chinese lace cloth and decorated with mauve sweet peas and lighted white tapers, was centred with the three-tiered cake. The health of the bride was proposed by Mr. Archie Fluke. Telegrams were received and read after the toast to the bride from Miss Margot, B.C.; Miss Elliott, Thacker, Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. M. Squire, Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. L. Leaman, Breadalbane, P.E.I.; Mrs. A. Thacker, Charlottetown, P.E.I.; and Mrs. H. MacDonald, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Girl friends of the bride who helped to serve were: Miss Margaret Wharton, Miss Ida Castloe, Miss Diana Kuslake, Miss Elizabeth Mountfield. For travelling the bride wore a turquoise jersey dress topped by a brown coat, brown hat with turquoise feather-trim, brown accessories and a corsage of pale pink carnations and lily of the valley. The couple will make their home at Quailcum Beach, B.C. (Daily Colonist, B.C.)

Modern Etiquette

Q. When a person is going away on an extended trip and a friend gives him a "send-off" party, should that person write his friend a letter of appreciation while away? A. Most certainly, and as soon as possible after leaving, expressing again how much he appreciated the thoughtfulness. Q. Is it necessary to mail an engraved wedding invitation to a close friend who has already been invited verbally? This seems unnecessary to me? A. It is always correct to send the engraved invitations—even to members of the immediate families. Q. When writing a letter to an acquaintance who calls you "Mrs. Martin," how should you sign the letter? A. As Ruth Martin.

Cook's Corner

OATMEAL BACON BREAD 4 strips bacon 4 tablespoons baking powder 1 teaspoon salt 1/4 teaspoon allspice 2 tablespoons sugar 1 1/2 cups whole wheat flour 1 egg 3 tablespoons molasses 3 tablespoons melted bacon drippings 1 cup rolled oats 1/3 cup milk Dice bacon and fry until light brown; drain, reserving drippings. Stir baking powder, salt, allspice and sugar with flour. Mix beaten egg, molasses, bacon drippings and oatmeal and add to dry ingredients. Stir in milk and put into greased 8" x 8" x 2" pan. Let stand at room temperature for 15 minutes. Sprinkle bacon over batter and bake in moderate (350F.) oven for 45 minutes.

How Can I!!!

Q. How can I best clean roasting pans? A. Scrape off as much of the greasy deposit as possible. Then fill the pan with cold water and add a tablespoonful of washing soda. Place it on the range and let it boil slowly. The pan will then be as easy to wash as any other utensil. Q. How can I make use of the spiced vinegar from cans of peaches? A. This spiced vinegar makes a delicious flavoring for minced meat. It also makes a savory sauce for pudding. Q. How can I clean a rusty knife? A. Dip a damp cloth in ashes and rub the blade thoroughly until the rust disappears. Q. How can I clean a silver spoon? A. Dip a silver spoon in a solution of one part of ammonia to ten parts of water. Rub the spoon with a soft cloth and rinse with water. Q. How can I clean a silver spoon? A. Dip a silver spoon in a solution of one part of ammonia to ten parts of water. What Body Of Yours

SCIATICA AND LOW BACK PAIN As many years ago I had four attacks of sciatica and low back pain, I can sympathize with those who suffer with it. Neurosurgeons tell us that we can get some idea of the pain of sciatica by remembering that the sciatic nerve is the largest nerve in the body, about the size of the little finger. This is a great many times larger than the nerve in a tooth, which can cause such severe pain. Sciatica is a pain that extends from the middle part of the large muscle on which we sit down; in fact, this large muscle prevents pain when the sciatic nerve would be under any pressure. This nerve passes down the back of the thigh, or upper leg, into the calf and sometimes to ankle and side of the foot. In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Clark H. Millikan states that the patient may find it difficult to be comfortable in bed and may turn restlessly trying to find some position that will bring relief. Sitting in a chair or riding in a car may increase discomfort and the patient may sit on one buttock. In pressure on the other buttock. In numbness and tingling in side of calf and ankle. Some of the signs outlined by Dr. Millikan are: (a) Rapidly bending the head forward may produce pain in lower back; (b) There is stiffness in lower back and raising leg while keeping knee straight causes pain in the back of the thigh; (c) The calf muscle becomes weak and flabby. It is estimated that pain in lower back, accompanied by sciatica, is caused in 90 per cent of cases by hernia or rupture of an intervertebral disk, the cushion of tissue between the bones of the spine. In my own attacks, only one was caused by injury, and for this I wore a steel and leather brace for several years. The other three attacks were due to infection, two from teeth and one from tonsils, and the removal of teeth and tonsils caused disappearance of the pain. Contrary to the opinion of many physicians that operation for removal of the ruptured disk should be performed at once, Dr. Millikan suggests that conservative treatment—rest, supportive brace, and later massage—should be tried. If this fails within a reasonable time, operation should be performed. What I have personally found in myself and others is that when the patient can adjust himself comfortably in bed and be free or nearly free of pain, injury to lower back has occurred. If pain is present when at rest, infection—teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gall bladder—is the cause. It is possible, of course, that infection and injury may both be present.

And it is true as we recall it, no one plinked on The Lord's Day. We can still picture the dismayed expression on the face of a farmwife long gone when we chanced to mention in her presence on a Sunday evening: "It was so warm this afternoon, we ate our supper down by the stream." For a moment she was speechless. Then smoothing down the spotless white apron that was tied over her second-best dress she commented quietly and in a studied tone: "I'm sure James was not the one to suppose the like—or if he did, it's certainly not according to the way he was brought up. And my my, Ellen, were you not setting a bad example to the children? Couldn't you have chosen another day for your plinking?" And somehow hearing her words we began to be in doubt. Perhaps we had erred, though innocently. True, others had eaten out of doors on the Sabbath. There was the lad with the loaves and fishes. And was there no worship in it—enjoying the Sunday notes of the summer birds, the perpetual ripple of the stream and for our quiet church, grassy bank guarded by the solemn trees about?

For Tomorrow IT may prove to be a very lively and lucky day. Important moves may be made in connection with sudden decisions. This could be true of purely social, domestic or romantic projects, and also of business investments. Whatever the nature, retrenchments and serious manipulation are essential, with sustained as well as emotional stimuli. If It Is Your Birthday Those whose birthday it is, may enjoy a creative year, with much enterprise and applied energies. Even such may be concerned with the social, cultural or domestic life and engagements. Business ventures could be gainfully indulged. There might be an element of unlooked-for reverses or enjoyments. A child born on this day, will be disposed to quick moves, and sudden ventures, although equipped for concentration and hard work. Day After Tomorrow The astrological forecast holds augury of some encounter with surgery of a disagreeable nature transpiring. However, by maintaining a firm grip on tongue and temper, a last moment of intervention could bring about a happy ending, with very pleasant climax. Work with faith and confidence for such end. For the Birthday Those whose birthday it is, should hold themselves well in hand, as any tumultuous moves or rash conduct could shatter happy relations with employers or superiors. This could prove vital to important plans and ambitions. With "tongue in check" hold onto the desired plans, hoping for the best, perhaps the "eleventh-hour friend" or aid. A child born on this day while generous, friendly and good natured, may have moments of impetuosity and excitement, alienating for the time superiors, employers or elders.

ELLEN'S DIARY

These days we try to budget to allow time for us to weed and make trim and orderly our pieces of border and the old flower-bed, once the care and pride of James' mother. Still the pansy-faced violas of her planting appear there in unexpected places, to remind us of a day at Alderlea when farm-life was more leisurely and the living was different in many ways from that of the present. James often recalls these to the wide-eyed youngsters gathered about his knee and chair, and they listen with obvious fascination. "Are there tales of that era?" "And there were no cars then?" "Not even a tractor or truck?" And they are amused at the very thought of it. James will speak too of the customs of those days, of the strait-laced Sabbaths, not with any resentment over their observance but with reverence for the folks who had the strength of conviction and courage to maintain the sanctity. He recounts that "We children weren't allowed to play at week-day pastimes on Sunday—handballs were put away on the eve of it. No newspapers or story-books were read other than those that had to do with Biblical teachings. Overlaid strolls along the fields were frowned upon and of a certainty no one would presume to angle in the streams about."

And it is true as we recall it, no one plinked on The Lord's Day. We can still picture the dismayed expression on the face of a farmwife long gone when we chanced to mention in her presence on a Sunday evening: "It was so warm this afternoon, we ate our supper down by the stream." DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Indifferent Son-in-law Forbearance, Cooperation Can Adjust Relationship

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a widow of 41. I have only one daughter whom I have raised myself, and I had a very hard time getting her through school. We were very close to each other, and very happy until she married over a year ago. She married a boy who doesn't care anything about me, or her people. He never asks me to come to see them. For my daughter's sake I have been to their home, but when I go he doesn't speak to me or even stay in the same room with me. They live about 400 miles from me. He has no reason to treat me like this. Before they were married I was always nice to him. I have never asked them for help, though they have plenty of everything. I am able to work and make my own living. It hurts my daughter, too, to see her husband act this way toward me. She tells me to ignore him, but that, of course, isn't as easy to do as to say. She has talked to him and asked him to be different, but with no effect.

KEEPS HER AWAY

He won't come with his people when she comes to see me, so she doesn't get here very often. His people are very sweet to me and they don't approve of the way he is acting, either. His father offered to get me a job in the town they all live in so I could be near my daughter, but my son-in-law, of course, objected. Do you think it would do any good to talk to him myself and ask him why he treats me so coldly?

ANSWER: This is an in-law angle that doesn't crop up as frequently as some other problems. We're always hearing about the mother who wants to continue to run her child's life even after marriage, or the son who marries and promptly forgets he ever had a mother, but most sons-in-law will get along with their wives' mothers if given the least bit of encouragement. Remember the saying, "The groom's mother loses a son, but the bride's mother gains one." Your son-in-law seems to be a cold fish beyond the reach of any reasoning. I doubt if talking to him will do much good. It's probably best to take your daughter's advice; ignore him as much as possible, pretend not to notice his odd behavior and one of these days when he needs you he'll sign a different tune.

The in-law problem in one form or another poses one of the most frequent causes of marital disaster, although in the vast majority of cases it shouldn't be a problem at all. A little forbearance, a little understanding, a little co-operation and all parties concerned would get along without strife. If a mother would just let her married child go from the parental nest with grace and tact she would find far less heartache than she does in battling the situation. If a young wife would only realize that her husband still owes some allegiance to his mother, and not tug so hard to break his home ties, she would reap a bountiful harvest of friendship and love from her mother-in-law; if
