Hees Takes Look At Crystal Ball

OTTAWA (CP) — George Hees gazed into his crystal ball Thursday and made a half-dozen predictions in the Commons, including one that the Progressive Conservative party will unseat the Liberal government June 17—his 47th birthday.

The Conservative member for Toronto Broadview took for granted that a general election, generally expected in June, will be held on the 17th of that month. No date has been announced by the government.

Other predictions made by the former national president of the Conservatives in the Commons throne speech debate:

1. Old age pensions will be increased to $55 a month from $40 before the election.
2. Walter Gordon, Toronto accountant who is chairman of the royal commission on Canada's economic prospects, will be invited to join the Liberal cabinet as a reward for his "election-bait" report and will take over Trade Minister Howe's portfolio.
3. Duff Roblin, Manitoba Conservative leader, will win the next provincial election in Manitoba.
4. Liberal administrations in Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland also will fall.

accept him, has a court granting him an immigration hearing in Canada.

Escorted by lawyer Donald S. White, the 23-year-old Hanna arrived here by ferry from Nad naimo. A few hours earlier he came off the Gudveig at Port Alberni.

Mr. White said there have been many statements to Hanna's status and his right to enter Canada "but none of them was based on a formal inquiry."

"To appear before such a board of inquiry and to be represented by counsel is the right of every person who makes an application to land in Canada."

Mr. White said Immigration Minister Pickersgill had not made a deportation order against Hanna and at no time had Hanna ceased to be a non-immigrant.

The court order—an order issued by Mr. Justice J. V. Clyne, does not necessarily guarantee Hanna his wish—to land and live in Canada.

The Province said that Mr. White discovered that the illiterate stowaway, who claims he was born aboard ship, has never been officially examined by a board of inquiry of the immigration department.

Federal Protection For Dairy Industry Urged

WINNIPEG (CP)—Gilbert Macmillan, president of the Dairy Farmers of Canada, said today the federal government should take temporary action to protect the Canadian dairy industry until a full-scale program can be put into effect.

In the presidential address to the 15th annual meeting of the dairy farmers, he said:

"We must have prices for milk at the farm level that will keep efficient producers in business on a sound basis and given them reasonable assurance of a stable future."

The text of his address was released to the press in advance of delivery.

COLD HITS FRANCE

PARIS (AP) — A biting cold wave gripped France for the second day Thursday with at least three deaths blamed on the weather. No relief was forecast.

Opening lead—queen of hearts. There would have been no trouble at all about making six if North's queen of clubs had been the queen of diamonds. It was just unfortunate that the club queen had no more value in this deal than if it had been the deuce. The same could be said of the jack of clubs.

Despite the duplication of values, South brought home the slam contract. There were two heart losers, but South manipulated the play so that he lost only one of them. Furthermore, there was nothing the defenders could do to prevent it.

The slam was arrived at with-

Ashore First Time In Fifteen Months

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Province says that Christian George Hanna, man without a country, came ashore Thursday for the first time in 15 months.

The Province says in a copy-right story that Hanna, for 15 months an involuntary passenger aboard the Norwegian freighter Gudveig because no country would

Blacky Understands

On understanding, only that, Success attends the diplomat.

—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Blacky the Crow is wary. That means he is very careful not to take any unnecessary risks. One who is wary usually is suspicious. Any man or boy get too near him. Blacky is suspicious. He has had reasons to be. He has been hunted and shot at for no reason at all that he knows of. So he has become very, very careful not to let any man or boy get too near him.

There was always an ear of corn wedged in that apple tree for Blacky.

But Blacky is as smart as he is suspicious. He long ago learned to tell the difference between a gun and a stick or hoe or rake. A man with one of these may get very near Blacky because Blacky knows these things are harmless. But let that same man have a gun and Blacky will come nowhere near him.

Now in these hard winter days Blacky was having the hardest kind of work to find any food at all. He had discovered that many of his feathered neighbors were getting plenty to eat over in Farmer Brown's dooryard. Most of these were the smaller feathered folk. But when he discovered that Ringneck and Mrs. Ringneck the Pheasants were going there and getting plenty to eat, he sat up and took notice.

At first Blacky thought Ringneck was crazy. Yes sir, he thought both these Pheasants were crazy. But when he saw them go there day after day and return safely with their crops full, he changed his mind. He was still suspicious. He doubted that he, Blacky, would be so well treated. From a tall tree at the edge of the Green Forest Blacky watched Farmer Brown's boy put out grain for those Pheasants. When Farmer Brown's boy would go back into the house, Ringneck and Mrs. Ringneck would go over and get their breakfast right under the kitchen window. Blacky was still suspicious to do that himself. He did go over just at daylight before anyone in the house was up, but often there was only a grain or two left and he never got a good breakfast.

Then one morning he saw Farmer Brown's boy come out as usual. In one hand he was carrying a ear of corn. He looked over at Blacky and held up the ear of corn. Then he walked over to a tree in the Old Orchard, a tree that was well back from the dooryard. In a crotch of this tree he wedged that ear of corn so that it could not fall down. Then he returned to the house.

Watching from his favorite perch in a tall tree at the edge of the Green Forest, Blacky had seen everything that Farmer Brown's boy did. What is more, he had understood. "He has put that corn out for me," thought Blacky. "He had put it out especially for me." He flew straight over to that apple tree and he didn't care who saw him. He knew Farmer Brown's boy was watching from the house, but he was smart enough to know that the corn was meant for him, and that Farmer Brown's boy understood just how he felt about coming close to the house.

From that day on while the bitter cold lasted, there was always an ear of corn wedged in that apple tree for Blacky. He knew now that he had nothing to fear from Farmer Brown's boy. He even ventured once or twice to visit the dooryard in broad daylight when there was nothing but the cob left in the apple tree.
