 Eight-year-old Nell Lacombe of Moncton offers hospitality to rare visitors to Canada—three Dartmoor ponies from Scotland which were bought for breeding purposes by Canadian farmers, and which were enroute to Malton, Ont. by Canadian National Express when this photo was taken at Moncton. The ponies are Shetland-type animals, of stocky build and with white coats. The majority of 600 Dartmoors which were offered for sale by Devon farmers were purchased for Canadian farms. (CNR Photo)

A NEW CONTROL FOR TWO BAD WEEDS
 The Canadian farmer's annual loss from weeds has been estimated at about $200,000,000. In efforts to control certain weeds, soil sterilants have been used that are inflammable, poisonous to man and beast and that render the soil sterile from one to three years. Arsenicals have been used that are highly toxic to man and animals, and cause soil sterility from one to five years. Soil fumigants, that are very poisonous to all animal life, and are both costly and expensive to apply, have been experimented with.

Growth regulators have proved of great value in the control of annual weeds in growing crops since 2, 4-D revolutionized the destruction of wild mustard and other broad leaved weeds; and 2, 4, 5-T in the elimination of susceptible woody plants. These, however, and dozens of other herbicides have been tried with only deep-rooted, persistent, perennials that, to some extent, are found all across Canada; being particularly prevalent in Ontario and Quebec, and on both the east and west coasts, namely: Canada thistle and poison ivy.

CANADA THISTLE
 The Canada thistle (Cirsium arvense), has been called "The monarch of the weed kingdom". It seeks dominion over both crop and pasture lands. Cattle will not eat it. Extra cultivation will not eradicate it. We have seen patches of thistle so bad that the farmer just mowed around them. Many chemicals have failed to destroy this thistle. Its numerous rapidly growing root stalks have many nodes on the rootlets that send up new plants, completely frustrating nature's control measure, that of insect larvae that eat the seeds within the thistle heads. We have examined dozens of ripened thistle heads and found only maggots without a single undamaged seed. Some efforts to kill this pest, that usually establishes itself on fertile, well drained soil, were made by the use of chlorate chemicals. These were expensive, and in order to kill the thistles, killed everything else, so that for a year or more the land was barren. Even the 2, 4-D growth regulator, while at first it appeared successful, really only suppressed the thistles, unless sprayings were continued from three to four years; the Canadian thistles continued to send up new plants from their roots.

LISTENING POST

"Unto Him shall ye hearken." Throughout the earth there are many "listening posts", where news services and governments try to learn what is being said and done beyond the "curtains" which have been erected between nations. We as individuals also have listening posts where we receive knowledge that takes shape in opinions and convictions, and issues in action. The BIBLE is such a listening post . . . So are the newspapers, the magazines, the radio, and television.

As we face the new year, we might well inscribe over its entrance the words, "Unto Him shall ye hearken."

If we are to have the mind of Christ, as Paul exhorts us, as we face the issues of life, more time will have to be spent in prayer with the Bible. The British and Foreign Bible Society through its distribution and translation of the Scriptures makes it possible for people of all colors, races and creeds to have access to that infallible listening post—God's Word.

We can assist in this great work by making a contribution through our local auxiliary or at the Bible House. We also assist when we make a purchase at the Bible House. Appropriate items in addition to Bibles, at this season, are devotional booklets for daily family or personal worship.
