THE DAILY EXAMINER

OCTOBER 17, 1898.

FASHODA.

HARPER'S WEEKLY remarks that there is an element of both tragedy and comedy in the curious position occupied by Major Marchand at Fashoda. Recent accounts would seem to show that if the enterprising French officer reached the Nile a little too late to enable his government to make much political capital out of the fact that he got there at all, it was exceedingly lucky for him that he did not get there any earlier. A hundred and forty negroes and five Frenchmen make but a small army of occupation for a new empire of Central Africa, but when they are confined to narrow intrenchments and in danger of being cut off from necessary supplies of food the matter grows too serious for a joke. There is something ludicrous in the feverish anxiety with which France is stretching out to grasp new territories which can only be a burden to her people; but of all the instances of this national folly, none can be more foolish than that which strives for a precarious and isolated footing on the upper waters of the Nile. Experience shows that distant possessions, unless colonized by the intruding race, are never profitable possessions to any nation; but when they necessarily involve hostility to powerful neighbors, it is little short of insanity to seek them. France has promoted Captain Marchand to be major; she will now do wisely to order him home. The situation described in THE EXAMINER's despatches of to-day, would be deemed acutely critical if it were not well understood that France will follow this advice.

THE REASON WHY.

The Summerside Journal, in its last issue, explains the reason why only curable patients are admitted to the P. E. Island Hospital. It says: The hospital is a charitable institution, supported very largely by public subscriptions, and its accommodations are too limited for the care of incurables; in fact, they are even now insufficient for the number of curables. It may to some appear rather hard that the class of patients above referred to are debarred from hospital benefits, but it must be borne in mind that the Prince Edward Island Hospital is not a hospital for incurables (and it is too bad that there is no such institution on the Island), but to fill the wards with such patients would be an injustice to the public who support the hospital, and to those—such as fever patients, victims of accidents, and all others known as curables—who may be benefited by surgical and medical skill; and it is unreasonable to expect more. No distinction of rank, position or wealth, continues the Journal, is made in the admission of sufferers. The hospital is a cosmopolitan institution, where rich and poor, high and low, Jew and Gentile, are unhesitatingly admitted, and given alike the best medical and surgical skill and the best nursing possible, and hundreds have been restored to health and strength by means of the great skill and care bestowed upon them by the kindly physicians and nurses of the Prince Edward Island Hospital.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—The Pioneer and some other Liberal papers evidently feel the force of our teachers condemnation of the government; but there is one important fact which they have failed to notice, viz, that an addition of $28,000 a year to the cost of education has been made by our Liberal government through the daily average attendance of pupils at the public schools has decreased

—Halifax Herald: When Sir Wilfrid replied, as reported, "Let us wait till the vote is counted," did he know that the vote-counting in Quebec would go on for a fortnight after September 29th, with a continual increase against prohibition as the days went by?

HOSTILITIES LIKELY

Rome, Oct. 15.—The Italia Militaire announces the imminence of hostilities between Emperor Menelek of Abyssinia and Ras Mangascia, the celebrated Abyssinian warrior and tributary of the Negus, who recently seized and poisoned an envoy sent to him by Menelek's masterful wife, Queen Taitu. Ras Mangascia has asked Italian assistance, which has been refused.

An Interesting Young Man.

The New York Journal says: "When Lieutenant Hobson sank the old collier 'Merrimac' in Santiago harbor last June he exhibited a dash of courage which thrilled the country. But fools have been brave. When Lieutenant Hobson wired the Navy Department last week that he had saved the wreck of the Infanta Maria Teresa he displayed brains. In fact he exhibited a greater engineering head than Admiral Sampson and the Board of Naval Experts who studied Lieutenant Hobson's plans and said 'doubtful,' 'impracticable,' 'impossible.'"

In spite of the discouragement of his department chiefs, Lieutenant Hobson has presented his department with a $3,000,000 war vessel which, in many respects, is a better ship than any we own. He is now in the midst of the even more difficult undertaking of raising still another wrecked Spanish cruiser, the Cristobal Colon. And when this is accomplished he means to save still a third ship, the Mercedes.

Young Lieutenant Hobson is a very interesting young man. This last exhibition of brains makes him both a hero and a genius, for the evidence as published makes it very clear that Hobson's ingenious engineering devices have triumphed against the solemn wisdom of his superior officers and naval experts.
