New Lights Speed Up Traffic Reduce Pedestrian Hazards

The new system of traffic lights at Queen and Grafton in Charlottetown is designed to speed the flow of traffic and minimize hazards to pedestrians.

Two sets of lights over the traffic lanes are placed above the street in the driver's normal field of vision. The two sets, one on either side of the street, enable the driver to read the signals even if his vision is blocked to his immediate front.

The lights are horizontal, rather than vertical, and consist of red squares, an amber diamond, and a green circle, which becomes a flashing green arrow at rush periods, indicating that traffic is to move straight ahead.

Pedestrian lights are normally operated by pushing a button when the pedestrian wishes to cross the street. When the button is pushed, a diagram of a hand indicating "wait" lights up, and when traffic has stopped, the go signal, a figure of a man walking, flashes.

After a number of seconds the warning symbol of a hand indicates the time for 'stop' is drawing near.

The pedestrian system works automatically with the traffic control lights at rush hours.

The lights were installed by Municipal Lights, a division of Canadian Aviation Electronics Company, Montreal.

West Berliners Are Granted Holiday Visits Behind Wall

BONN (AP)—West Berliners will be allowed to make holiday visits to relatives in Communist East Berlin under an agreement that Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's West German government has accepted.

Chief government spokesman Karl-Guenther Von Hase, who announced the cabinet's unanimous acceptance, called the agreement "a new breach in the Berlin Wall." He told a press conference the government welcomed it on humanitarian grounds.

West Berlin, acting with Erhard's government, negotiated with Communist East Germany for eight months on the terms. They are to be made public after the signature of the agreement, set for today.

Reports in Bonn say that the visits will be allowed over All Saints Day (Nov. 1), Christmas, Easter and the Pentecost, and for family reunions at births, weddings and deaths. The agreement is expected to run for at least a year and may be extended.

SOME IMPROVEMENTS

Von Hase said that the long bargaining produced "a list of improvements that exclude all misunderstandings." Erhard had feared that the agreement would strengthen the Communist argument that West Berlin is a separate "free city" and East Germany is a sovereign, independent country.

The actual negotiations were handed by Horst Korber, a West Berlin official, and Erich Wendt, the East German deputy minister of culture. The agreement as it now stands was reported to provide that the passes will designate East Berlin as "the capital of the German Democratic Republic" (East Germany), a wording that Erhard wanted removed.

Free movement in Berlin was stopped by the wall, put up by the East German government in August, 1961, to keep its people from fleeing to the West.

Gen. Simmonds Comments On Killing Claims

TORONTO (CP) — Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, wartime commander of the 1st Canadian Army during the Battle of Caen said here killing prisoners of war or enemy soldiers are two different things.

He was asked to comment on a statement by Alexander McKee, a British author who said it was not customary in the Canadian Army during the Normandy invasion of 1944 "to give anyone the benefit of the doubt."

Mr. McKee is author of a new book, Caen: Anvil of Victory. Defending it against criticism this week, he said prisoners of war were killed by both Anglo-Canadian forces and by the Germans in the Normandy invasion.

Lt.-Gen. Simonds said in an interview:

"In the heat of battle, the defenders mow down as many of the opposing forces as they can. If the enemy threw up their hands at the last minute, men in the heat of battle would keep shooting, after seeing their own comrades mowed down before their eyes."

He said killing prisoners who had surrendered under the terms of the Geneva convention was another matter. Mr. McKee's example appeared to be a heat-of-battle-case.

Fish-Freezing Shows Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian fish-freezing in August totalled 52,831,000 pounds, up 32.2 per cent from a year earlier, the bureau of statistics said here.

End - of - August stocks at 111,375,000 pounds were 7.8-per-cent higher than a year earlier.

The bidding:

3 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

Opening lead—three of hearts

This hand occured in a national pair championship. As usual, with several hundred pairs playing the same hand, there were a variety of results.

The most popular contract was six spades bid and made by South. However, several pairs arrived at seven spades, which was hard to make without the ace of trump, while other pair got to only a game and not a slam. The perfect contract of six notrump was seldom reached.

The hand is difficult to bid with certainty, especially from South's viewpoint. If South, for example, uses Blackwood, he learns that North has three aces. While this should persuade him to bid six spades, it will still leave him in doubt about a possibly sure seven, since North might happen to have the right three aces.

Probably the most disappointed players on the hand were those Souths who contracted for six spades and went down. This unfortunate result occurred at several tables when declarer played too quickly and lost the contract.

A heart was led. Declarer won in dummy with the queen and played the jack of spades. East grabbed the ace and returned a heart, and that was the end of that. Down one.

Of course these Souths were unlucky to run into a 5-1 heart break and find the ace of spades in the wrong hand besides, but, even so, they had only themselves to blame.

The danger of a heart ruff was quite apparent — either East or West could have had a singleton —and the situation called for whatever protective measures were available. The simplest way of avoiding the danger was to cash the A-K of clubs and discard two hearts on them, after which spades could be led with safety.

The failure to do this revealed a basic weakness in dummy play. Those declarers who went down should have asked themselves at trick one: "What can defeat me?" Had they done this, the answer would have been obvious.
