Peeled Spuds Fixed Price Results In Customer Loyalty

VANCOUVER (CP)—Whether you sell horseblankets, hardware or peeled potatoes, customer allegiance should make the decisions for you, believes Earl Mackay.

He's especially emphatic about peeled potatoes, because that's his product. He keeps his customers satisfied with a hold-the-line policy on price that does in fact hold the line.

When his Fresh-Pak Limited started selling peeled potatoes to Vancouver restaurants and institutions in 1951 the price was eight cents a pound. It still is despite increases in wages, potatoes and plant costs.

"I know that in one case we lost $9,000 in two months just after we started because the price of potatoes went up," said Mr. Mackay, 62. "It wiped out all the gains we made in the months before that.

Isn't it foolish to ignore the price trend followed in almost all other lines?

"I would hate to think we were foolish," he said.

"But when we started we promised our customers a year-round price of eight cents a pound. We established the business on that basis.

"I think that because we are doing this we are building customer loyalty. I think customer loyalty does more for a business than any amount of advertising."

SCADS OF SPUDS

And there are plenty of customers. 92 hospitals and rest homes; 39 hotels; 13 caterers, 487 restaurants and drive-ins; 13 wholesalers and canners; 9 grocery stores and ship chandlers; 12 delicatessens.

Fresh-Pak supplies them all with daily requirements in salad and a variety of vegetables besides potatoes. The company also handles a complete line of fresh fruits.

The plant in suburban Burnaby employs about 100 at peak periods. Last week they handled 11,400,000 pounds of potatoes.

Machines rip the skins off vegetables with jets of water and workers along a conveyor belt nip out discolored areas. Other machines turn out French fries, crinkled potatoes, frozen packages and even foil-wrapped whole potatoes for baking.

The basics of the trade came to Mr. Mackay during seven years as employee and nine years as manager of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board.

He left the board to establish Fresh-Pak after thinking over a restaurant operator's complaint about the problem of getting vegetables of uniform quality peeled and prepared at minimum cost.

Mr. Mackay took a firm hold on the market in the 1950s, and in 1960 borrowed $300,000 from the Industrial Development Bank to build a new plant. He repaid that and recently borrowed $200,000 more for a plant addition now underway.

IMPRESSIVE JEWELRY

A brand-new type of faceted bead, cut by Swarovski of Austria so that a monotone effect is achieved on one side and a striped color combination on the other, is seen in this glittering pendant and earring set.

Both sides of the beads are used for an unusually brilliant look and they are edged with a waved border of tiny iridescent stones.

The necklace is of cut stones in a lantern shape, interspersed with enameled beads in shades of green which pick up the bottle-green of the felt hat with its long back-swept line.

Try Danish Smorrebrod For New Year's Feasts

GODT Nytaar! The Danes say Happy New Year differently, but that celebrate the passing of the old year and the birth of the new much as we do, with good friends, good fellowship, and good food!

The "cold table," or Smorrebrod, is usually the center of attraction at every Danish party, with Denmark's most famous cheese, fondly called "The Noble Blue," starring on the buffet.

We've taken the Smorrebrod to our hearts without reservation from "Danish Blue" to the dark-grained breads the Danes love so well.

BIG VARIETY

In addition to the homemade spreads, simple salads, shrimp, anchovies and olives that fill a wooden tree of treats—or are arranged in matching dishes on the table—Smorrebrod may include herrings of all kinds, ready- to-eat sausages, cold meats, pates, smoked salmon, eel and other fish. All are at your supermarket, reasonably priced, ready to serve.

The open-faced sandwich is Denmark's most popular meal. Today's New Year's feast is a help- yourself sandwich buffet. Thin-sliced breads to be covered thickly with butter or a rich spread, and piled high with sandwich makings are the basic elements.

Tradition dictates that the order of eating be fish, meat, cheese, inviting everyone to make at least three trips to the buffet, and leaving to the last— and best— the cheeses that are Denmark's pride and joy.

WHEEL OF CHEESE

Our Smorrebrod features an impressive wheel of Danish Blue, a universal favorite. On the same tray are several newly imported cheeses from Denmark: delicately aromatic Esrom, made like the similar Port Salut, according to an ancient formula developed in a monastery; Havarti, a Tilsit-type cheese that men particularly enjoy; mellow Samsoe—nut sweet and perfect for dessert, too; red - jacketed TYBO, firm in texture and butter-rich.

The "Noble Blue" is the flavor secret of the first of our Smorrebrod spreads.

COOKS REFUSE YOUNG BRUINS

BUDAPEST (AP) — Hungarian cooks have refused to kill and dish up bear cubs which have become too numerous in Hungarian zoos.

Professor Csaba Anghi, the director of the Budapest Zoo, has tried every possible course to pass on some of the many bear cubs born to the zoo's bear families.

He besieged the Hungarian Forestry Board, the Tourist Traffic Association and the State Circus Company. But these organizations had all the bears they could afford to keep.

He then wrote many letters abroad—but no one would be willing to take any of the young brutes.

So the cubs' appetite was getting bigger daily, carving more and more off the zoo's budget funds. Something just had to be done.

In the emergency, the professor thought to follow the example of some foreign zoos which sell bear meat to catering establishments.

But the animal-loving Hungarian cooks refused to have anything to do with the dishing up of young bears.

At this time, a letter was received by the Austrian Animal Protection Society officials which said they would buy six bear cubs at 2,000 forints (some $85 at the tourist rate) each, the Budapest weekly Heifol Hirek reported.

Hungarian zoo officials are hoping that other buyers would follow.

Copper Idols Are Missing From Temple

JAMMU, Kashmir (Reuters) Two copper idols of Hindu god are missing from a temple here.

The disappearance, discovered Wednesday, follows last week's theft of a hair said to be a relic of the Moslem prophet Mohammed from a Kashmir mosque near Srinagar.

The three-inch-long hair in a silver-capped glass phial was stolen Thursday from the mosque on the banks of the Dal Lake outside Srinagar.

Its theft resulted in rioting and mourning processions.

Investigations are underway to trace the relic and determine whether any political motive was involved in its disappearance.

The Indian government has sent its chief of intelligence, B. N. Mullick, to investigate the loss of the hair.

Police treated the disappearance of the idols as theft.

The idols, weighing about three pounds each, were of the Hindu gods Rama and Krishna.

Meanwhile, in Srinagar a procession of Moslems, plus Hindus and Sikhs, moved through the streets demanding the restoration of the sacred hair.
