Banks Has Canada, U.S. In Tangled Labor Crisis

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—A big, barrel-chested man from Black Hawk County in Iowa has embroiled Canada and the United States in a tangled Great Lakes labor crisis that may force a painful showdown between the two countries.

The man is Hal Chamberlain Banks, 54, ex-convict, sailor, labor organizer and president since 1949 of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

He is at the centre of an international web of politics, intrigue, violence and controversy.

Because of him, relations between Canada and the U.S. have been inflamed, with government and labor leaders on both sides of the border involved in some undiplomatic cross-fire.

The Canadian government is taking the unprecedented step of imposing a federal trusteeship on the Canadian SIU and four other maritime unions representing in all 22,000 Canadian sailors, engineers and deck officers.

Parliament has approved special trusteeship legislation empowering the government to take over and control all operations of the five unions. To become law, however, the legislation still requires royal assent —a formality — and proclamation by the cabinet, a step that can be taken quickly or withheld indefinitely.

OTTAWA BRACES

Meantime, Ottawa braced itself for a mass demonstration Monday against the legislation by SIU members who began leaving their ships Friday for a protest march on Parliament Hill.

While the Great Lakes crista revolves around Banks, Ottawa observers see these disturbing implications in the dispute:

1. A failure by the AFL-CIO to acknowledge the autonomy of its counterpart, the 1,050,000-member Canadian Labor Congress, in dealing with Canadian union matters.

2. Danger of the rift between the AFL-CIO and the CLC widening into open conflict, with U.S. unions boycotting Canadian ships in opposition to the trusteeship and Canadian labor retaliating by shutting the St. Lawrence Seaway to U.S. ships.

3. The inevitable diplomatic strain between Ca ada and the U.S. that would result from labor strife on the lakes.

Since coming to Canada in 1949, Banks has been denounced by organized labor, by newspapers and by Parliament.

But the most searing indictment was made last July by Mr. Justice T. G. Norris, a British Columbia appeal court judge, who made a year-long investigation of Great Lakes labor strife and shipping disruption for the Canadian government.

CONDEMNED SIU

In a two-volume report delivered to Labor Minister Allan J. MacEachen, the 69 - year - old judge condemned the SIU in Canada as a lawless, corrupt organization and described Banks as a "cruel, dishonest, greedy, power-hungry" man.

The Norris report said the Banks dictatorship was supported by a "lawless combination" of U.S. unions — the SIU of North America, the Teamsters and the International Longshoremen's Association.

This alliance, said the judge, could disrupt Canadian shipping in U.S. ports, foment labor strife, and close the St. Lawrence Seaway to all shipping, thus jeopardizing the Canadian economy by throttling waterborne trade.

The judge blamed the SIU for 32 attacks on men and women in Canada and the U.S. plus an assortment of other incidents, including harassment, intimidation, threats and property damage, all occurring in the last three years.

In proposing the trusteeship, Judge Norris suggested its main job would be to clean up the SIU and restore democracy to its 15,000 sailor members.

ASSUME CONTROL

In addition to the SIU, which is international in its allegiance to the AFL-CIO, the trustees would assume "management and control" over four exclusively Canadian unions: The Canadian Maritime Union, an infant rival of the SIU, with about 550 members; the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, with 2,500 mates and deck officers; the National Association of Marine Engineers, with about 150 engineers; and 13 marine locals with about 3,000 members in the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

The trustees will have authority to handle all union business, remove or suspend any officer or employee and appoint replacements, propose constitutional changes, designate and advise negotiation committees in collective bargaining and call strikes. The trusteeship is to last for three years, but can be extended by Parliament.

Anyone convicted of obstructing the work of the trustees is liable to a maximum $10,000 fine and two-year jail term.

The trusteeship was supported reluctantly by the Canadian Labor Congress, but bitterly opposed by the AFL-CIO in the United States. In a bid to find a more palatable alternative, the two central labor bodies, working through the Canadian and U.S. governments, have been searching for a plan for a private, union - sponsored trusteeship.

So far, the search has been futile — but efforts are continuing behind the scenes.

Observers here believe a private trusteeship may yet be hammered out under the threat of government intervention.

Opening lead — Jack of diamonds.

Every hand has a par which can be determined on the basis that both pairs bid and play perfectly. For example, in this hand, the par result is four diamonds bid and made by East-West. The North-South limit is three spades, since declarer has a spade and three clubs to lose.

However, in practice, par is often missed, since the contestants do not have the advantage of seeing all 52 cards. Thus, in the hand shown, it is very hard for East-West to realize that they have the better hands and that North-South are overboard at four spades and can be doubled with profit.

Furthermore, the handicap suffered by East-West in the bidding also extends to the play. If South manipulates his cards cleverly enough, he has a good chance of stealing the contract by deceptive play.

Declarer's test comes at trick one when West makes the normal lead of the jack of diamonds. What South should do is discard a heart from dummy and win the diamond with the ace. He should then lead the jack of spades, which West is forced to take with the ace.

West can now defeat the contract if he plays a club to the ace and East returns a club. But there is a reasonable chance that West, having seen declarer discard a heart from dummy on the opening lead, may decide that South's weak spot is hearts. He might therefore lead the ten of hearts at trick three.

This return would give South the hand. Declarer would win with the jack, draw another round of trumps, and cash three more heart tricks, discarding two clubs from dummy. He would then be happy to concede two club tricks to bring home the contract.

Of course, West might be smart enough to see through declarer's scheme and lead a club at trick three away from the K-J, but this would not jeopardize the mark of A for effort that South is entitled to.
