Mrs. Charles MacArthur had charge of the worship service. So many things grow amidst. But mother, whatever may vex you you Send the children to bed with a kiss.

The dear little feet wander often, Perhaps from the pathway of duty. The dear little hands find mischief often. So try you from morning to night. But think of the desolate moor. Who'd give all the world for your bliss; So you thank for your infant's blessings. Send the children to bed with a kiss.

For some days the noise will not vex you. The silence will hurt you far more; You will long for the sweet children's voices, And to press a wee form from your bosom. Until Monday - - - Diary - - - Good-night - - -

Recipes in Aged Cookbook Are 'By Guess And By God'

Imagine, if you can, cooking without any measurements, with a handful of flour, vanilla to taste, a dash of salt and a little cream. This is how the Canadian wife and mother of a 150 years ago did it, "cooking by ear" or possibly "by the feel."

Edward Bowser, a resident of Vernon River, while repairing his 100 year old home found a old cookbook between the walls of the house. The book is entitled "The Canadian Home Cook Book."

Mr. Bowser, whose hobby is cooking, had tried many of the old recipes in the book and says they are wonderful. His family he said, particularly liked fried pie. The book can't boast one stick accurate measurement; egg yolk is spelled throughout as "yolk," and a large section of the book is devoted to "beverages" including "pruce beer" and "sham champagne."

If any cooking utensil was a necessity 150 years ago, it was the tea cup. The book specifies that you beat egg yolks in teacups, mix yeast in teacups, chop nuts and fruit in teacups.

The book also anticipated that the Canadian wife would have a large family and, or hearty appetites since everything seems to be produced in rather large quantities. For example if you have fritterised eggs for breakfast you are requested to boil one dozen eggs. For the budgeting housewife of the 19th century the book includes such favorites as Saturday Soup which instructed you to collect the bones which you have on hand from the week, but today's "budget warrior" wouldn't fare so well in the kitchen with the "Home Cookbook", which uses butter, eggs and cream very liberally.

Some of the more unusual recipes from the "Canadian Home Cookbook" listed below. If anyone has the courage to try any of them let us know how they turned out.

Mince Soup - Excellent for supper where something warm is desired, or for the little ones when they return from school. Light bread of crackers crumbled in a bowl and mixed with butter and sweet cream and plenty of salt and pepper; fond for another shower. The bride-to-be was escorted to a decorated chair by Miss Beth Matheson and Miss Edith Campbell presented her with a bouquet of flowers. Mrs. John Warren gave the address and this was followed by the presentation of a well-filled purse to Mrs. Warren. Miss Susan Willis and Sandra MacGregor carried in a basket of gifts. Mrs. A. E. Thomas, on behalf of the present, and lunch was served by the ladies, Mrs. Irvin MacLeod, Mrs. Roy Creed were hostesses at a surprise lunch shower at Mrs. MacLeod's home at 28A, Borden Road and Mrs. Lawson Drake, Meadswalk, was hostess to the graduating class of 1962 and here also Miss Mutch received many beautiful gifts from her former classmates.

Life Is Easy, People Gay South Of The Rio Grande

By JEAN MACISAAC
Guardian-Patriot Staff Writer
Returning from the land of the sombrero and the siesta, and Ranger Karen Willis and Sea Ranger Nora Scates describe their visit to Mexico as "the trip of a lifetime."

These girls were among 14 Maritimers who in July visited the Girl Guides headquarters for the western hemisphere in Cuernavaca, Mexico. Other leaders on the trip included Marjorie Gillan, Hlene Norrie and Margaret Clark of Charlottetown and Lynn Ann Beach of Souris.

The girls paid their own way and travelled about 700 miles by bus to reach their destination. While at the centre or "chambre" they met girls from nine different countries.

Karen and Nora explained that they went as tourists, but wore their uniforms, saying that "it makes it easier to get directions and out calls. They left here July 7 and returned July 25.

The country and the great contrast in the way of life in Mexico impressed the Canadian visitors. Everything changes completely at the border, they said.

"In Mexico it's just as it is in books," they declared, the peace with their burros in the desert, the bargaining in the marketplace, the excitement of the bullfights, the magnificence of the cathedrals.

They described the people as both happy-go-lucky and emotional, they use every occasion for a holiday or a party. "People are never in a rush. The only thing that starts on time is the bullfight. It is a far less placid matter to haggle with a volatile taxi driver ever here," they said.

Bargaining in the market and the shops was described as "the most interesting" of Mexican street wares and handbags and Mexican jewellery to prove the point.

Everything is much cheaper in Mexico, they noted; there is no tax on Kingsley Shaw for something like a dollar, or a steak dinner for 50 cents. "You can buy a whole pig for a half yard of silk material for $1."

"We'll bale what's on that other farm. And then" James smiled to her "I'll be moving by today" and more was filling their trip.

"I'll get a few nice sunnies for you. I'll look good! James grinned. "We'll soon have it all sunny."

"How does the moon look? It's so far from the earth! Couldn't a hunter hang his bowder-horn on the side of the crescent?" Jamie smiled.

"And we had a promising sunset. How wonderful the morning weather, out of the recent damp, and set that delicate mist which stirs in the blue vapor above the fields - a film of gossamer stuff, to crown the perfect summer-days."

Lash and lovely the same delicate to be fresh and green. Saturday night of week! We'll dine now of the mothers' Island-ov, a bit weary, we can appreciate, as they prepare their small ones for bed, but so

ELLEN'S DIARY
Satisfying Day of Haying Brings An Air of Content

"Now this" James commented when the twilight shadows were commencing to dim softly by today's "has been a satisfying day at the haying."

At the time, the younger farmer was moving on another (treated) farm, so to have some needed for saving in the new fields here. James had sent up the last forkful of the day to the mow. James and Gail had been haying since the morning there. Hob, our work ended, was watching Mack, his tractor-mower call the "grain" the cows in the loafing-barn nearby. Grandfather had left her home for the moment, and with Alex and Peter and their mother, had come to join us there by the hay-barn.

"Yes, a good hay-day" James nodded. "The mow is almost full! Granddaughter said, smiling this, by that showing at the well's open door."

"That will be settled by Monday." Gail offered. "I'll hold my hat's left now 'to the last Aid of this farm.'"

"And what then?" she questioned.
