THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 21, 1891.

Notes and Comments.

Referring to the Unrestricted Reciprocity resolution passed by the House of Assembly of this Province, the Montreal Gazette remarks that "it is Parliament that has to do with such things, and Parliament is fresh from the country, a majority of whose electors have declared against the scheme favored by the party majority on the Island. The P. E. Island men might have saved their wind."

The suspension of a peer, a rare event in the Upper House of Parliament, occurred a few nights ago in the case of the erratic Lord Denman, the successor of the illustrious Judge Denman, but inheriting little of his father's powers. Lord Denman had given notice of a motion for a return of the number of days on which the late Lord Granville had attended the House, and also the number of days on which he himself had attended during Granville's lifetime. Whether the motion was inspired by crankiness or malice, Lord Denman was not allowed to explain. He was about to speak when Lord Salisbury said the motion could only be described as unseemly. He might use a stronger word, but he preferred not to discuss the motion. He would simply move that Lord Denman should not be heard during the remainder of the session. Lord Kimberley concurred, and Salisbury's motion was agreed to in silence. Denman "dropped," looking daggers at Salisbury, with whom he has an old feud, once nearly culminating in personal violence.

Inland Revenue Collections at Charlottetown during the four years ending June 30, 1888 to 1891, inclusive, were as follows:

Table with columns for years (1888, 1889, 1890, 1891) and rows for various revenue categories like Tobacco, Beer, Wine, etc.

The attention of scientists in America and Europe has lately been directed to experiments made by Mr. Nicholas Tesla, a clever Austrian electrical engineer residing in New York, and it is now announced that he has made a discovery that marks a great advance in electrical science. As explained in the Boston Herald, he has been studying the electro-magnetic theory of light. His methods are a development of the potentialities of the alternating current which, as used at present, alternates 100 to 200 times a second. He reasoned that if he could increase the number of vibrations far above that degree greatly increased effects would be obtained. He constructed a machine that gave him 35,000 vibrations a second, and then, by the adoption of the simple apparatus, he secured a current with a rate of vibration like that of a spark from a static frictional machine, amounting to millions in a second. The Herald says that the most immediate practical result is a method of lighting which promises to revolutionize present processes, since it does away with all wires in direct connection with lamps. Other results are anticipated.
