Ford, GM Extend Warranty Period

DETROIT (AP)—Ford Motor Co. Tuesday joined General Motors Corp. in extending the warranty period on its 1963 model cars and trucks to two years or 24,000 miles, whichever comes first.

General Motors announced the policy Monday night. Ford was the first to follow. Other companies said they were still studying the move.

The new Ford policy is virtually identical to that of General Motors and covers all parts of the vehicle, except for tires, tubes and normal maintenance items such as spark plugs and brake linings.

FIRST PERFORMANCE

Profokiev's opera "The Love of Three Oranges" was first performed in Europe in 1925 at Cologne.
