OTTAWA, (CP) — The CBC can do nothing about a bootleg version of one of its radio programs which is being sold in the United States.

A spokesman for the publicly-owned corporation said today the CBC bought only first broadcast rights to "The Investigator" by Robert Ship of Montreal. The play satirizes congressional investigations. Many claim one of its characters represents Senator Joseph McCarthy.

The spokesman said the CBC's rights in the play ended with the performance last spring. Knowledge that a bootleg version is being sold in the U. S. reached CBC headquarters there Thursday.

"As far as we know, the only persons who could take steps over the bootleg version are the author, the actors and musicians' union," the spokesman said. "They might have grounds that the U. S. version is misuse of talent that isn't being paid for."

The spokesman said the source of the bootleg version would be impossible to trace now; it might have been recorded directly from the radio broadcast, redone with the same or different actors or have been obtained from the CBC recording.

Prior to closing, Mr. F. Morris Daxson, the Director of the Course opened a question period designed to bring out any matter which the students believed would be profitable to include in a future leadership course. The discussion which followed proved to be highly interesting.
