Magna Carta Set Cornerstone For Rule Of Law Known Today

On June 15, 750 years ago King John set his seal on the Magna Carta at Runnymede, setting the basis for modern democratic government. In the following article, Lord Shawcross, famed British lawyer, tells of the meaning of Runnymede to modern man. Lord Shawcross, then Sir Hartley Shawcross, was the chief United Kingdom prosecutor at the Nuremberg leg war crimes trials and later British attorney-general 1945-51.

No high-sounding declarations about the rights of man, democratic government or the rule of law were heard on that pragmatic occasion at Runnymede 750 years ago when King John reluctantly set his seal to Magna Carta. Yet it is the truth that barons and king fashioned in Magna Carta the cornerstone of the rule of law as we know it today and one of the great landmarks in the long journey towards democratic government through parliament.

In their practical approach to the grievances inflicted by John's systematic abuse of his privilege, the barons dealt with problems incidental to feudal society, and it may be true that the reference to freedom in the famous chapter 39 of the charter was concerned rather with the privileged than the humble. But the language was large and was to fall in due time for interpretations by the courts.

GLORIFIES THE LAW
"No free man shall be taken, imprisoned, disseised, (dispossessed) outlawed, banished or in any way destroyed, nor will we proceed against him except by the lawful judgment of his peers, and by the law of the land."

That final phrase setting the law above arbitrary power was to resound wherever the English tradition of law and freedom was to make itself felt.

Many times confirmed—with this great charter untouched—the charter reached the statute book in 1297 and still remains in force. As the common law moved forward, early medieval words fell on interpretation in the light of existing circumstances. The complete equality and freedom of all men under English law received its final seal in the judgment of Lord Mansfield in 1772 which set free a Negro brought to England—where the air "has long been too pure for a slave."

It was indeed long before this that the charter secured its position as the bulwark of the liberties of all men in England. Indeed, some of its original chapters were clearly drafted to protect all men, high and low. One looks, however, to the 17th century to see it become, in practice and politics, a fundamental law. It was upon the solid foundations of the great charter that Parliament challenged the Stuart kings and their doctrine of divine right. By this time for English law the charter was imperishable.

INFLUENCED ALIENS
Imperishable, too, for all countries to which the influence of English law has spread.

When Englishmen set out to find new homes across the Atlantic, they carried a charter confirming their heritage of freedom. Later the constitution of the United States directly echoed Magna Carta in its fifth and fourteenth amendments. The words "due process of law" used in the 14th century in the application of the great charter thus became the symbol of liberty for all free men.

Though not directly sprung from the great charter, Parliamentary government is inseparable from the concepts of the rule of law and the freedom of the individual enshrined in it. It is fitting, then, that the 750th anniversary of Magna Carta should be joined with the 700th of Simon de Montfort's historic assembly of 1265, progenitor of the parliaments which wrested supremacy from the Crown in the 17th century and sent three great constitutional landmarks to the statute book—the Petition of Rights (1628), the Bill of Rights (1689) and the Act of Settlement (1701), foundation of modern constitutional monarchy—beside the cornerstone of all, Magna Carta.

Commonwealth Leaders Split Over Proposed Secretariat

By HAROLD MORRISON
LONDON (CP)—A Canadian informant suggests Commonwealth leaders are split not only on a choice for the head of a proposed secretariat but also on what duties the secretariat will perform.

The informant adds that while in all likelihood the prime ministers will resolve their basic differences at the conference opening next Thursday, the possibility must not be dismissed that further negotiations may have to be held after the nine-day meeting ends.

Five nominees are reported in the running for the position of Commonwealth secretary-general. They are: Arnold Smith, Canada's assistant deputy external affairs minister; Alistair McIntosh, New Zealand's top civil servant; George Ivor Smith, Australian-born senior United Nations officer in Kampanga; Sir Robert Jackson, Australian-born head of the UN special fund, and S. C. Forster, permanent head of Sierra Leone's foreign affairs department.

was prepared to go in disclosing to others the details of confidential diplomatic cables. For example, would Tanzania tell Britain and Canada equality of bilateral discussions with China and would Canada and Australia tell Ghana of diplomatic messages with the United States?

The informant suggested the importance of the secretariat, as finally determined by the prime ministers, will be assessed by the Canadian delegation before deciding how hard to press in support of the Canadian nominee.

Aside from the secretariat and its duties, the main issues for Canada are Commonwealth views on South Viet Nam, Cyprus and Rhodesia. Canada will support the U.S. position in the Vietnamese war, the informant said.

Britain may urge consideration of a Commonwealth appeals court but Canada is unlikely to offer any support, the informant continued.

Price Indexes Up In 9 Cities

OTTAWA (CP)—Consumer price indexes rose during April in nine of the bureau of statistics' 10 regional cities and city groupings, the bureau has reported.

The advances ranged from one-tenth of one per cent in St. John's, Nfld., to six-tenths of one per cent in Saskatoon, Regina and Edmonton-Calgary.

The index, mainly based on 1949 prices of consumer goods equalling 100, does not measure whether it is cheaper or more costly to live in one city or another, but the change in price levels in the individual cities. The St. John's index is based on June, 1951, prices equalling 100.

The new indexes for the beginning of May, with April indexes in brackets, are:
St. John's, Nfld., 122.8 (122.7),
Halifax 133.9 (133.5), Saint John, N.B., 136.4 (116.1), Montreal 137.4 (136.8), Ottawa 137.7 (137.3), Toronto 139.4 (138.9),
Winnipeg 135.2 (134.8), Saskatoon-Regina 131.9 (131.1), Edmonton-Calgary 129.7 (129.9), Vancouver 134.5 (134.5).

but West led the ten of clubs, which gave Priday a chance to make the contract.

He took the club with the queen, led a diamond to the king, cashed the A-Q of hearts, and then played a diamond towards dummy, this being the position:

West elected to discard a spade and Priday took the diamond with the ace, cashed the ace of spades, ruffed a spade, and then exited with a diamond. He was now bound to make the rest of the tricks regardless of how the defense chose to play.

Priday would also have made the slam if West had ruffed the diamond in the position shown. In that case, West would have returned a spade or a club. In either event, South would have been forced to take the winning spade finesse.

The slam which Truscott and Priday reached was a really excellent contract that ordinarily would have been made without any of the complications brought on by the 5-0 trump break.
