IN MEMORIAM

MRS. JAMES A. McCANN

With great sorrow it was learned that Mrs. Jas. McCann, East Royalty, had entered the Charlottetown Hospital in a serious condition. The best medical skill and tender nursing was given her but it could not stay the call of the Divine Master, which came peacefully on Wednesday, Jan. 30, fortified by the last rites of the Catholic Church.

Mrs. McCann was formerly Hilda Murray, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Murray, Emyvale, where she was born 43 years ago and lived until her marriage twenty-one years ago, to James McCann.

God blessed this happy union with five children who will ever mourn the guidance and devotion of a tender and loving mother, whose only thought to the end was for their happiness and welfare.

The late Mrs. McCann was of a kind and jovial disposition and was loved and respected by her friends and neighbours and will be fondly remembered in prayer by them and many in her former parish of St. Ann's, Lot 65.

She is survived by a heartbroken husband and four children, namely: Basil, teacher at Scarletown; Mary, Rose and Elaine at home; one son, Gerald, predeceased her; also her step-mother, Mrs. Tobias Murray and the following sisters: Susie, Florence, Lima, and Regina in Edmonton; Lena, Mrs. Camelius Costello, Toronto, and Blanche, Mrs. Eugene McQuillan, Elmwood.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place to St. Dunstan's Basilica, where Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. David McTague who also officiated at the grave. Rev. Leo Herrell, Fr. Frank McDonald and Fr. James Smith were present in the Sanctuary.

The pallbearers were: Stephen Connolly, Ernest Connolly, Amos Callaghan, Woodrow Wheatley, George Cahill, and John Walsh. Interment was in the Catholic cemetery.

Probably no better or truer acknowledgement of the worth of Hilda (as she was fondly known) could be given than to say with all truth and sincerity: "She was a true and loving wife, a wonderful mother and an abiding and trusty friend."

To her sorrowing husband and family we express our deepest sympathy and pray God to have mercy on her soul.

May she rest in peace.

CHAPTER FIVE

Part Two

"You bet you haven't," shouted out Dronda Moore. "Can I help it if this nut keeps pestering me?"

"No, Miss Moore, you can not. That is, unless you stop wearing skirts, Jimmy, I think you had better skirt clear of Sally, eh?"

"Now, look here . . . "

She wagged a finger ever so gently, but there was real menace in the gesture, for all her restraint. "No, Jimmy, you do the listening for a change. I do not want you to come to the apartment again. Nor do I want you to pester Sally again. You're not going to add her scalp to the others you have collected. Is that clear?"

He had regained his poise and laughed. "Tut, Helen, you know perfectly well that you can't prevent me from seeing her any time I wish."

Dronda's doorbell pealed loudly and after a short interval Jimmy came bounding in looking like a collar ad model in the flesh. He was so shaved, pressed and creased that it was almost painful.

He took her hand, kissed it, and then turned to the silent and watchful Bill Burke and the equally silent and distressed Tony Wyndham.

"Mr. Wyndham," Dronda smiled dolefully, "this is Mr. James Kennedy. He's the pilot who got bopped on the bean with a vase."

"Oh, you don't say?" Up from the chair came Mr. Wyndham and out-stretched his hand. "I find all this most interesting, Mr. Kennedy. How did you ever get the nerve simply to seize her in your arms?"

"Nerve is my middle name. All set for lunch, Dronda?"

"Lunch?" Mr. Wyndham looked from one to the other, then sharply at Bill Burke, who promptly disclaimed all responsibility for this with an outward, upward fling of his hands.

Dronda rose, laughingly dole-fully again. "In just a few minutes, Jimmy. I could have dinner with you tomorrow night, Mr. Wyndham; that is, if you really think you want to waste your time on me. I know you have other people who'd be worthier of you . . ."

"Nonsense," he cried, beaming. "Nonsense. Tomorrow will be splendid. Shall I come at six?"

"Yeah. That'll give me time to get to the theater."

Now that he'd got what he'd wanted, Mr. Wyndham was jovial. He shook hands with Jimmy again, smote Bill Burke in comradely fashion on the back and even beamed at the butler who arrived from out of nowhere by a sixth sense to open the door for him. Jimmy considered the rug a second, then snorted.

"A pompous dope!"

"Mr. Wyndham is a brilliant man, Mr. Kennedy," contradicted Bill Burke. "He is one of Hollywood's more important producers."

"Then Hollywood must be filled with dopes. Nothing fancy, cheub," he called as Dronda started for the bedroom. "We're going rowing in Central Park after lunch."

"Indeed?" Bill's eyebrows came together. He excused himself hastily and went into the bedroom after Dronda. He found her standing thoughtfully at the window, looking down at the traffic in the street.

any delays with our work. . . all the shovelling and choring that's waiting to be done today!"

From the driveway, no track marred the virgin white of the trail ahead. "If you chance to see any of the fellows out along, Ellen, remind them that we'll have to open the road shortly" he offered and turned away to the barns. We set off blithely down the shortcut; followed along the snowy milldam, left the quiet sound of the overflow and climbed the hill with only the spruces for company.

Then like the women of bygone ages, (Was she big or little? Pretty or plain? Smart or indolent?) at the summit we turned to look back across the valley. What a snowy scene lay there. Buildings screened by drifts. But smokes went happily up to meet the sky of morning. And at the doorway in the barnyard a figure paused in his shovelling to regard the progress of our outing.

It was a pleasant walk this morning as folks "dug out" after the storm. We suppose that in after years when snow plows keep up continual clearing of roads, this morning will be remembered by the youngsters as one in which, "Mind you, not a car moved . . .not one!" But here and there along the countryside, already teams made their way to or from some goal of day . . .to the corner-store, even as we, the school, the mill.

Stopping briefly to offer: "We've had something of a storm, haven't we?" Old Timers to reminesce: "We haven't had one that kept up so long since . . . I mind the time . . ." the words returning to us faces and scenes from the old years . . . That scent? Is it an aroma or fragrance? Or only all anathema? Was this weed among the items of treasure-trove an intrepid explorer brought back to the Motherland from his "Cathay?" We forget. In any event, it obviously makes a good pipe-smoke for James!

Until tomorrow— — Diary — — Good-night. . . .

ROAD - HUGGING DEVICE—A former airplane maker in Munich, Germany, developed this "aeloran," designed to keep the car glued to the road at high speeds. Using areodynamic principles, the aeloran mounted where the front bumper used to be, causes air flowing over it at high speeds to add to front-end "weight" of the auto, keeping it stable at high speeds. Device sells for about $25.

BYRON STEWART

There passed peacefully away at his home in Hamilton, Byron Stewart, at the advanced age of 80 years.

He was born at Hamilton and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart. Besides his sorrowing widow, the former Elizabeth Owen of Malpeque, he is survived by four daughters and one son, as follows: (Elva) Mrs. Wallace Pickering, Darnley; (Marion) Mrs. Charles Hickey, Darnley; (Doris) Mrs. Lawrence Clifford, Quebec; (Muriel) Mrs. Gerald Yeo, Central Lot 16, and Charles on the homestead.

The funeral was largely attended and was held on November 2nd from his late residence. Services were conducted by his Pastor the Rev. A. MacKay of the Princetown United Church who brought a message of comfort to the bereaved family.

Three favorite hymns of the deceased were sung. "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me", "I Need Thee Every Hour", and "Lord, I'm Coming Home."

The pallbearers were six neighbours, Charles Gillis, William Sinclair, Arthur Owen, Keir Ramsay, Edward MacLeod and Roy Campbell. Interment was in the People's Cemetery, Malpeque.

Open This Can for Either Milk or Cream

With ordinary milk, it can't be done. But with Carnation Evaporated Milk, it's different.

Carnation is wonderful for every cream purpose. It's concentrated to double richness—heavy enough to whip. Superb for "creaming" coffee, cereals and desserts. Grand in all recipes that call for cream.

And for velvet-smooth, rich flavored whole milk for cooking or drinking, you just mix Carnation with an equal amount of water.

You can't get Carnation's two-way usefulness with ordinary milk. Switch to Carnation. The world's largest-selling evaporated milk.

For Cereals—Make This Seven Day Test
—for just one week, use Carnation Milk on your cereal. We're sure you'll never go back to ordinary milk.
