

Mystery Sub Attacked Off Coast Of Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A mystery submarine was attacked by Argentine destroyers and possibly sunk off Argentina's southern coast Wednesday, president Arturo Frondizi announced Friday.

There was unofficial speculation that it might have been a Soviet prowler but the Russian Embassy discounted that possibility.

Argentina's naval commander said he thought it was "an unfriendly submarine making surveys of the Argentine South Atlantic coast."

Rear-Admiral Isaac Rojas, who played a key role in the ouster of dictator Juan Peron in 1955 and later served as vice-president, said he had "no doubt at all that a submarine was detected."

He added that it was "obviously an unfriendly and inconceivable mission." Otherwise, Rojas said, it would have surfaced at the sound of propellers of Argentine navy ships on manoeuvres in the area.

Rojas said it was his opinion the submarine was making a survey of the largely deserted Patagonian coast of Argentina "where there are several bays which could be used to shelter big fleets in the event of war."

NO WARNING
President Frondizi said no warning was made by the Argentine destroyers before they launched their attack after spotting a periscope.

Asked whether the sub had been asked to identify itself, Frondizi replied: "No. Under international law, a submarine must surface after a first depth charge, which did not happen on this occasion. On the other hand, as it was in Argentine territorial waters it was openly in violation of international law."

The president said oil slicks appeared after the attack. This led to the belief that the craft was damaged or sunk. He said the sub was believed to be a high-speed type.

Rojas noted, however, it was a common war time trick for submarines under attack to release oil and jetsam in an effort to make the enemy believe they had been damaged.

Rojas and other naval sources said Frondizi's reference to a high-speed type ruled out the possibility the submarine could have been from another South American country.

The admiral said there was a possibility the submarine might have had a mothership ready to join it at a prepared rendezvous on the normal shipping lane.

Patagonia makes up Argentina's southernmost tip, stretching toward Antarctica.

The president said it was assumed the submarine was a high-speed type. A naval authority said such a description would "almost pinpoint it to be Russian."

because only the Soviets have operational fleets of high-speed submarines."

The U.S. Embassy in Buenos Aires said no U.S. submarines were reported in the area of the incident, 650 miles south of Buenos Aires. U.S. submarines of the type described are atomic.

Asked about Frondizi's announcement, a Soviet embassy spokesman said:

"This is the first news we have heard. We think there is no possibility at all of a Russian submarine being in this latitude."

In London, the admiralty said the submarine was not British.

"No Royal Navy submarine is missing, overdue or damaged," a London spokesman said.

Frondizi, reading from a prepared statement, said three Argentine cruisers and four destroyers were on manoeuvres in an almost enclosed gulf three miles from Puerto Deseado.

The destroyers spotted a submarine periscope, he said, and made four attacks with depth charges. Naval sources said as many as 86 depth charges might have been dropped with such a pattern of attack.

Frondizi said oil slicks appeared on the surface after the assault.

The Argentine cruisers were identified as the Nueve de Julio, the General Belgrano and the Argentina. The destroyers were the Buenos Aires, the Misiones, the Entre Rio and the Santa Cruz.

Killer Charles Starkweather Sentenced To Electric Chair

By ODELL HANSON
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Bantam killer Charles Starkweather Friday was sentenced to die in the electric chair for one of 11 slaying attributed to him.

He took the verdict with a mixture of indifference and bravado which marked his trial for murder. He looked at the floor without moving a muscle as the verdict was read.

Starkweather was tried in the Jan. 27 shooting of Robert Jensen, a Bennet, Neb., high school student whose body was found in a storm cave near Bennet with that of his girl friend.

"I don't think they tried me for Jensen," Starkweather told reporters afterwards. "They tried me for the whole thing," referring to the string of 10 January killings and an earlier Dec. 1 slaying.

AGREES WITH SON
The 19-year-old Starkweather's father, Guy Starkweather, who heard the verdict from a chair just inside the courtroom door, said: "I think I'll go along with Charlie. He was tried for the whole thing."

The jury of eight women and four men returned the verdict 22½ hours after receiving the case. Actual deliberations totalled six hours, 22 minutes. The trial lasted three weeks.

Mrs. Starkweather, seated near her son at the counsel table, table, looked straight ahead and did not blink an eye at the verdict. Moments later she hurried into the seclusion of presiding judge Harry A. Spencer's office, and sobbing was heard.

Defence lawyers said they will move for a new trial and Judge Spencer set June 7 for a hearing on the motion.

By the verdict, the jury rejected a defence contention that Starkweather was insane last January when he set out on the rampage of death.

In some of the conflicting confessions introduced at his trial, Starkweather blamed several of the killings on Carl Ann Fugate, his girl friend and travelling companion.

Carl, 14, is awaiting trial. She has been charged with Starkweather in the shooting of Jensen.

Highlight of the trial was the reading of the confessions. In them, Starkweather told of killing a service station operator here Dec. 1 during a robbery in which he sought money so he and Carl could run away. Murder took a holiday then until Jan. 21 when an argument at Carl Fugate's home erupted into a triple killing. Slain were Carl's stepfather, Marion Bartlett; Carl's mother, Mrs. Bartlett; and Carl's half sister, Betty Jean Bartlett, 2.

For six days Starkweather and Carl lived at the Bartlett place while bodies of the slain family members lay in outbuildings at the rear.

Following a demonstration of drill by the cadets, sergeant's stripes were awarded to Cadet Terence Perry, who conducted the drill demonstration, and corporals stripes to Cadets William Pederson, Francis Peters, Leonard Broderick and Vincent Doucette.

In a short address the commanding officer complimented the squadron on their fine turn out and said they had come a long way since his first inspection a year ago.
