

More General Practitioners, Fewer Specialists Needed

By STAN McCABE
Canadian Press Staff Writer
WINNIPEG (CP) — The medical profession needs more people who deal with patients as a whole and fewer who become specialists, Dr. Morley Young of the Canadian Medical Association, said Wednesday.

Dr. Young told general practitioners the more a doctor becomes a specialist the less he becomes or remains a physician with a close relationship with patients.

Delegates to the convention of the College of General Practice of Canada heard that the profession needs medical co-ordinators who see the patient as a whole, are capable of treating 85 to 90 per cent of his ailments, refer the patient to a specialist when necessary and look after the patient again when the specialist has completed his work.

IDEAL MEDICINE
"That would be ideal medicine," said Dr. Young. If members of the college lived up to their ideals and their constitution they could fill the bill.

Every general practitioner should have hospital privileges but the qualifications required of the doctor to obtain such privileges should be reasonable ones and the hospitals should expect satisfactory training.
Government hospital insurance would aggravate the problem of hospital privileges to some extent, he said. More people would go to hospitals and more doctors would require privileges.

NEED LINK
Dr. Young said he was concerned about the liaison between the CMA and its 19 affiliated groups. There should be an efficient link and the profession should be able to speak with one voice.

The college announced that next year's convention will be held in Toronto starting April 20. About 600 doctors were on hand for this year's meeting, the second of its kind. The first was held in Toronto in 1957.

Suggest Public Relations Program On Hospital Needs

HALIFAX (CP) — The Institute on Hospital Insurance wound up a 3-day discussion here Wednesday by suggesting a public relations program to offset any "misconceptions and misunderstandings" about the financial arrangements behind a national hospitalization plan.

R. MacD. Black, chairman of the Hospital Services Planning Commission said the public should be told that hospitals would still need money for capital expenditures such as new construction, Dan Wallace, the director of information for the province, said he is considering the publication of a brochure to spread the right information through Nova Scotia.

Dr. D. M. MacRae a member of the commission's advisory committee, said the plan's actual terms needed publicity among medical doctors as well as the public. "We are asking... that its limitations and restrictions be understood."

Several terms of the proposed plan were explained to delegates Thursday as they went over the financial details that will cover the program. Government spokesmen said that hospital furnishings, including beds and some fixed equipment, will be supplied under the plan; that federal-provincial grants will be available for renovation of existing buildings, including nurses' residences; and that the province is considering the establishment of a loan fund to assist hospitals in new construction.

Health Minister R. A. Donahoe said no decision has been reached on this point but the province is seeking "ways and means" to see if sufficient loans can be established on a "proper basis."

C. H. Kennedy, executive officer of the commission, said that while the plan provided only for movable equipment, terms were being relaxed so some fixed units, such as air conditioners, will be included.

THE ROSEFISH is found in abundance off Canada's east coast. The Department of Fisheries reports that exploratory fishing by the Fisheries Research Board of Canada indicates still greater stocks to the north.

A rose is a bream is a perch—
THE ROSEFISH is variously called Red Bream and Ocean Perch. By name it was, until recent years, of little or no commercial or food value. Today, however, as Ocean Perch, it is a big favourite of Canadian housewives and an important factor in the livelihood of many Canadian east coast fishermen.

Turning point in the importance of the rosefish came with advancements in fish freezing and handling. The rosefish were automatically scaled and filleted, then quick frozen and sent to market as Ocean Perch. Their mild flavour and relatively low price won them instant popularity.

At the same time the growth of otter trawling with huge, open-mouthed nets made the catching of rosefish in large quantities a commercial possibility.

The Fisheries Research Board of Canada, the Department's scientific arm, has discovered many of the important grounds which are being fished today and others still untapped. The rosefish typifies the role—one of many—that the Department plays in developing Canada's vast and valuable fish resources.

The banquet came to a close with a short sing-song by Miss Violet Daly.

Urges Continued Research In Nuclear Power Field

Canadian Press Staff Writer VANCOUVER (CP)—The retiring chief of Canada's atomic energy program said Wednesday the uranium industry is here to stay and this country with its great storehouse of the fissionable material should concentrate on nuclear power research.

W. J. Bennett, who April 20 leaves his post as president of the crown-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, said Canada already enjoys an advanced position in the atomic world because of experience gained from her big Chalk River, Ont., atomic project begun 13 years ago.

He told a luncheon meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy convention that the government should continue to place emphasis on fundamental and applied nuclear research.

Much already had been learned. Chalk River's famed NRX reactor had engaged in fuel test work for the U.S. atomic submarine Nautilus. Canada's experience in fuel element fabrication already made it possible for her to market finished fuel elements.

In emphasizing the need for fundamental and applied research, Mr. Bennett said this is necessary if Canada is to maintain her position.

"In a science that is moving and changing as rapidly as this one, there can be no static position," he declared.

The luncheon he addressed ended the three-day convention attended by an estimated 1,200 delegates from all parts of the country.

At the luncheon David G. Burchell of Sydney, N.S., vice-president and general manager of the Bras d'Or Coal Company, took over as the new institute president from Horace J. Fraser of Toronto.

In his farewell address Mr. Fraser called on the mining and other industries to encourage higher education. He said an adequate flow of trained personnel might well become the determining factor in Canada's survival in the new scientific world.

Discuss Plans

from it would come through the use made of it by the people who sponsor it. "What we are looking for," he said, "are markets for the sale of our products. The prime consideration is that we weight at community level the purchasing desires of the consumers."

Mr. Jamer elaborated on this by pointing out that if consumers want an article packaged in a certain manner it is up to the seller to offer it that way.

He also told the gathering that a complete file was a necessity and illustrated his statement by using this city as an example. What would be needed the speaker said was a map of Charlottetown plotting all industries within its borders and specifically indicating those using agricultural products.

Also needed would be complete information on water supply and allied facilities.

LIBRARY NECESSITY
Mr. Jamer also believed that a library was a vital necessity to indicate the cultural background of the region. It should also include records of sales to the United Kingdom over a period of at least 20 years so it would be possible to point to a drop in specific commodities and learn the reason for it.

He said the agency would work in close co-operation with immigration teams and would look over their lists of those desirous of coming to Canada to determine if any of them possessed particular skills which would be useful in this area.

However, when Emigration Departments were dealt with it must be done at the Consular level.

The speaker also said that his department would work closely with the Canadian High Commissioner.

TO S'SIDE TODAY
Mr. Jamer will visit several Island industries this morning before going to Summerside where he will meet civic and business leaders there.
