YANKEES MADE A BLUNDER.

Spaniards are Established

FEARED THEY NOW HAVE THE ADVANTAGE.

Can Keep the Atlantic Coast Threatened.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.]

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The extent of the blunder of allowing the Cape Verde fleet to reach Santiago is now apparent.

The possibility of Admiral Cervera establishing a base of supplies now seems very strong, and it will be a matter of great luck if some of our small ships now blockading are not destroyed.

Spain will have a tremendous advantage should she establish a base at Cienfuegos as she could keep the entire gulf and Atlantic coast in a constant state of terror for fear of bombardment and with the superior speed of Cervera's fleet it would keep both Sampson and Schley on the alert.

She would be in a position to choose her own ground for battle and could delay the fight as long as she pleased.

The question of coal might eventually embarrass the enemy although it is possible that there may be enough coal at Cienfuegos or Santiago to supply them for some time to come.

Waiting for the Fight.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.]

KEY WEST, May 21.—The meeting of the two great hostile fleets is the pivot upon which the situation now turns; and that a few days—perhaps a few hours—will bring them together is the universal view at the base of operations.

Tribute Paid to Gladstone.

MR. TARTE IS HAULED OVER THE COALS.

Over his Methods of Doing Business.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.]

OTTAWA, May 21.—Mr. Tarte has a great aversion to the tender per contract system, and he got a rather severe roasting in the House over his method of operations yesterday afternoon.

Tributes were paid to Gladstone by several members and a Resolution of condolence was adopted.

SPAIN'S COUNTER MOVE.

Regarding Strengthening Gibraltar.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.]

GIBRALTAR, May 21.—The Spanish Government has decided to reinforce strongly the Spanish lines and the towns of San Roque, Algeciras and Tarifa.

A thousand Spanish infantry arrived yesterday at San Roque.

TRIBUTES TO GLADSTONE.

From Many Eminent Men

WHO ALL EULOGIZE THE DEAD STATESMAN.

Expressions of Regret and Condolence from Former Collegues.

Advices from London state that every other topic in Great Britain has been dropped out of sight before the passing of Mr. Gladstone. [Hawarden focuses the attention, which from the highest to the lowest man in the street, is respectful, sincere and profoundly moved. Throughout the whole Kingdom every public gathering has added its words of deep grief to the volume of national mourning clearly voiced in the telegram from the Prince of Wales to Mr. Henry Gladstone: "My thoughts are with you, your mother and your family at this trying time you are experiencing. God grant that your father do not suffer."

(Signed) ALBERT EDWARD.
The Montreal Gazette says: "It is England's greatest glory to have given birth to such men."

"No man," said Sir Andrew Clarke, "will be more regretted, more extolled, than Mr. Gladstone when he is gone."

The Montreal Star says: The greatest Englishman is low.

Lord Salisbury, in paying tribute to Mr. Gladstone said: "His opponents sitting in the House of Lords, where they had not been subjected to the clamor of his eloquence, could offer their passing tribute to the most brilliant intellect devoted to the service of state since Parliamentary government began, and to the courage, resolution, self sacrifice and discipline with which he continued his exertions on behalf of the connections he had down to the last period granted to an English statesman."

Joseph Chamberlain, of all of Mr. Gladstone's former colleagues, came into the bitterest personal conflict with him after the Home Rule separation. Mr. Chamberlain, however, expresses untinged admiration: "I have known Mr. Gladstone for more than seventeen years; and during five or six years of that time I was intimately connected with him, and I will say that never have I known his energy more remarkable, his resources more infinite, his eloquence more persuasive or his skill in debate more admirable than during the course of the discussion of the Home Rule Bill. Although, to my deep regret, during the last few years, I have felt it to be my duty to oppose Mr. Gladstone's policy. I have never, either in private or public said one single word derogatory to his transcendent abilities and personal worth."

Mr. Brifour said: "I think it will be felt in all parts of the House that we should do fitting honor to the great man whose long and splendid career closed today, by adjourning."

"This is not the occasion for uttering the thoughts which naturally suggest themselves. That occasion will present itself tomorrow, when it will be my duty to submit to the house an address to the Queen, praying her to grant the honor of a public funeral, if such honors are not inconsistent with the expressed wishes of himself, or of those who have the right to speak in his behalf, and also praying the Queen to direct that a public monument be erected at Westminster with an inscription expressive of the public admiration, attachment and high sense entertained by the house of Mr. Gladstone's rare and splendid gifts and devoted labors in parliament and in the high offices of the state."

Sir Charles Dilke, Radical member for the Forest of Dean, said:

"Mr. Gladstone's personal characteristics were old-fashioned courtesies, while as a statesman he had absolute mastery of finance, both in principle and detail, a mastery which was incomparable and superior to that of any of his contemporaries."

Mr. Henry Labouchere, editor of Truth, and Liberal member for Northampton, said: "What impressed me most was his power of concentrated effort. Once he had decided upon a course of action, every thought was bent to attain the end. No labor was too arduous. He animated both his supporters and his opponents, inspiring the former with his own fierce energy; while if he could not gain over the latter he crushed them. It was to this grim determination that he owed most of his success."

Prof. James Bryce, Liberal member for South Aberdeen, and author of "The American Commonwealth," said: "I cannot recall any other case in English history where a whole nation has followed the sun-setting of a life with such sympathy and regret."

Lord George Hamilton: "What impressed me in Mr. Gladstone was his extraordinary moral influence, especially in converting the House of Commons to accept his Home Rule bill. Nothing but his personal influence could have achieved so much in the face of insuperable difficulties. I doubt whether there ever was a parliamentarian who equalled him in his high standard. His dramatic aptitude and quick adaptability as an orator made him equal to any emergency."

The following despatch was received at Hawarden from the United States Ambassador, Colonel John Hay:

To the Right Honorable Herbert Gladstone, Hawarden:

I beg to present to all your family my heartfelt expression of sympathy at your personal loss, and at the same time to reverently congratulate you and the English race everywhere upon the glorious completion of a life filled with splendid achievements and consecrated to the noblest purposes.

(Signed) John Hay.

The Mail and Empire says: "As an example of his transcendent abilities, may be mentioned the fact that in 1858 he addressed the people of the Ionian Islands for three hours in the Greek language—the analogy of which to the native Romaic caused him to be perfectly understood by his hearers. In a speech in his celebrated Midlothian campaign of 1880, he occupied the close attention of his hearers, without a break or interruption, for seven hours, a feat probably never paralleled in the records of oratory. It was this quality of massiveness that in a large measure differentiated him from his competitors. No matter which way he was regarded there was a good deal of him. He was strong physically, mentally, and morally. He cut down trees of mighty girth, and walked with the step of an athlete. He attacked, in his life, departmental tasks that would have taxed the energy and staying power of three clever men rolled into one. In the long course of his life no breath of scandal stained his name."

CRUEL SCIATICA.

Incessant — Pain — Tormented — Racked Life Despaired of.

John Marshall, Varney, P. O., Co. of Grey, writes these strong words: "For two years I was completely laid up with sciatica. I doctored without any permanent relief. I had given up hope. A friend saw the notice of a cure of what seemed a parallel case to mine by South American Rheumatic Cure, and knowing my little faith in the efficacy of any remedy, he procured a bottle of his and brought it to me. I took it, and, to make a long story short, it saved my life. In a day or so I was out of my bed, and in three days I was able to walk to Durham, a distance of four miles, to purchase another bottle. I am now entirely cured." Sold by Dr. S. W. Dodd and Geo. E. Hughes.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., May 20.—When the 42nd separate company of volunteers left for Camp Black, four Canadian fire companies, with band and Union Jack, came over the river to bid the soldiers Godspeed and victory. In recognition of the unusual courtesy, the common council of this city has taken the unprecedented action of declaring a holiday on May 24th, the Queen's birthday, on which occasion all the city officials will cross the river and aid the Canadians in celebrating the day. One-half the receipts on both bridges will be given to the fund raised to support the families of Niagara Falls men at the front.
